RUSSIA'S FIRST ELECTION.

The other day our despatches gave the result of an election to Russia's first National Parliament. It was the result in a single Province of the vast Empire, and Russia has many Provinces yet to be heard from. Ninety-two members were elected and these were made up of 40 peasants, nineteen nobles, eighteen merchants, six professional men and three priests.

It will be observed that precisely half of the total are peasants, and there can be little doubt that these, with at least a portion of the merchants and professional men elected are in favor of freedom and representative government as opposed to the autocracy. The Province of Kostroma in which the election was held is a large district in the central part of European Russia watered by the Volga, south east of St. Petersburg, and ought to be fairly representative of the general sentiment of rural Russia.

The result would seem to show that the new National Assembly bids fair to be a democratic body in the main, in which the people at large may be represented by men of their own class. Of course the nobles and rich merchants will have the advantage and influence which wealth and superior education always carry with them, but the voting power will rest with the plain people, and these latter are terribly in earnest.

American civic and political reformers are now laying great stress upon the failure of a large portion of the electorate to cast their votes. The Chicago Tribune argues that the man who fails to vote is a grafter in almost every election one quarter to one third of the electors fail to record their votes, and this body of non-voters is usually strong enough to have turned the scale in the election. The fact is that in regard to voting as to other duties the sins of omission are often greater than the sins of commission. "Inasmuch as ye did it not, &c. Certain, a very strong argument can be made for taking away the right to vote from those who do not exercise that right. Citizens are compelled to pay taxes, or in emergencies to fight for the defence of the country. Why should they not be compelled to vote?"

D. W. Morrissey of Georgetown is nothing if not circumlocutionary, like the route he advocates. He addresses The Guardian through another journal, from what motives we are left to guess, and is very prodigal of words to express a minimum of argument. He is, however, forced to admit that the Stanley did enter this port in mid-winter and that Captain McLean with the Princess broke out of Charlottetown harbor in the spring before the winter steamers ventured to enter. These admissions confirm our entire contention. They prove conclusively that the winter steamers could be easily and safely brought here when they are not, in fall, spring and even mid-winter. The Patriot, to which Mr. Morrissey appeals, more than a month ago, called for the winter boats to open up this port at the first of March, expressed its fears, that there might be "more bungling," and further said, "All men possessed of common honesty must be convinced that the mercantile interests of the Province demand that Charlottetown shall be the port of landing for our winter boats for as great a part of the winter season as possible."

BORROWING FROM THE PEOPLE.

The Examiner charges us with blindness because we fail to see any greater danger in the Province borrowing money of the people on call than there is of the Dominion doing the same. Now the Dominion has over fifty millions borrowed in this way, and our population as a Province is approximately equal to one fifth of that of the Dominion. Proportionately we might safely borrow a million in this way, if we needed it.

But, says The Examiner, "the amount borrowed by the Dominion through the savings banks is but a small proportion of its debt. That is no argument at all for The Examiner's contention. If the Dominion owes a great deal otherwise it must be the greater source of danger to have fifty millions outstanding and liable to be called in at any time. And, as a matter of fact, and as we showed the other day, $143,000,000 of the Dominion's funded debt, aside from what it owes directly to the people, falls due within the next four years.

The Examiner rather childishly points out that the Dominion pays but 3 per cent while the Province will pay 4 per cent on what it is proposed to borrow from the people. Having in view the danger of the money being called in suddenly, which would be most likely to be called in, the money for which the lenders are receiving 3 per cent or that for which they are receiving 4 per cent?

It seems quite obvious that the Examiner's argument is anything but a logical one. Governments do unwise and indefensible things, too often, no doubt, but the trouble with the party press on the one side is to think and endeavor to show that the Government is always wrong and on the other side to show that the Government is always right.

A riot and some scenes of violence followed the inauguration of the street car employees' strike in Winnipeg. The strikers showed little regard for their pledge to conduct the strike in orderly fashion. At length the militia were called out and the rioters, who had before been pretty effectually clubbed by the police, fled at sight of the rifles. The right to strike is undoubted, but the right to prevent others from working does not exist. All lawless interruption of peaceful work and enterprise must be put down with a strong hand, even if it should require the entire militia force of the country to effect it.

Prohibition is becoming a live question in Nova Scotia and there is much discussion over our Island law and the manner of its enforcement. It appears that some travellers who return from the Island to the Mainland report to the saloons and speak-easies beyond the Straits that Prohibition is a failure here, and that more whiskey is consumed in this city than ever before. Here the main argument has been that prohibition is bad for trade, and people will not come to town unless they can get a drink. These reports are alike false and misleading. Our City is more sober, with fewer arrests for drunkenness than ever before, and trade throughout the year was seldom if ever better.

The cheese curing and poultry fattening stations established by the Dominion Government have not been directly profitable, whatever may have been their educative value. In about a dozen cheese-curing stations of Ontario and Quebec the outlay down to 1st March, 1906 was $107,880 and the receipts only $32,432. In some twenty chicken fattening stations there was a proportionate loss. The chicken stations in this Island did better in general than those of other Provinces, but came far short of recouping the outlay. Here are some of the figures:

	Expenditure	Revenue
Alberton	$1,577	$813
Eldon	1,777	908
Glennfannan	1,813	962
Mount Stewart	1,440	829
Mont Bridge	1,108	780
Vernon B Bridge	5,300	1,573

—NEW—

CARPETS!

UP ON OUR SECOND FLOOR where the light is best and brightest, the new carpets are gathered for your inspection. Never was such art displayed as in these new designs, and never were the colorings so artistically blended before—

Exclusive patterns every one of them, and above everything else dependable, you never yet got a carpet at Paton's that got faded, or worn, before you had a right to expect it should be—

Carpets cost a heap of money; too much for you to afford to buy an inferior grade, even at a few cents a yard less in price. We make no attempt to give you "A whole lot for your money,"—fresh, new, reliable carpets, the best real values you can get are the kind we offer, and if you pay less than our fair prices, there's something wrong with the carpets—

You shouldn't do any carpet buying without first seeing the extensive and handsome display we have here.

The Results of an Endowment Policy in

THE CANADA LIFE ASSURANCE CO.

Sydney, March 20th, 1906.

W. K. ROGERS, Esq.,
Canada Life Assurance Co.,
Charlottetown, P. E. Island,
Dear Sir:—In August 1871 I took out a long term endowment policy for $1000 in the Canada Life, the annual premium being $26.40. Every five years since then without a single exception the Company have advised me of an increased amount of insurance added to my policy and to-day you hand me the Company's check for $1,516.32 which is for $600.00 more than the amount I have paid in premiums. When I consider that I have been insured all this time for an average amount of about $1200.00 and that I now receive such excellent cash returns, I feel that I have been most liberally dealt with and wish the Company the success it so well merits.

Your explanation and statement re change of reserve basis showing that I would have received over $100.00 more had this not been made, is unnecessary. I am well satisfied with what I received.

Yours truly,
P. BLAKE.

It pays to select the right Company.
