Their Majesties Pose for New Camera Portraits Before Departure for South Africa

New camera study of King George, taken prior to the royal family leaving for its South African tour, shows him wearing a naval uniform. Queen Elizabeth is truly regal in this charming new portrait. With the King and Princesses Elizabeth and Margaret Rose she leaves England for South Africa today. The royal party will travel aboard the mighty new 42,800-ton battleship H. M. S. Vanguard for the long sea trip, and in the dominion will live in specially built and equipped private railway cars while on tour.

Modern Etiquette

By Roberta Lee

Q. Is it necessary to give a gift to a person just because this person gave you one?
A. No. Too much of this so-called "exchanging" of gifts is done. The true spirit of giving is ruined when the giver expects equal value in return.
S. Should a widow, upon her second marriage, wear the engagement or wedding ring of her first marriage?
A. No; they should be put aside.
Q. Which woman should a man seat at dinner, the woman on his right or the one on his left?
A. The woman on his right.

How Can I!!!

By Anne Ashley

Q. How can I prevent deep scratches on new shoes?
A. The first time a pair of new shoes is worn stop at the first shoe-shining parlor and have them shined. By doing this, scratches will affect only the surface.
Q. How can I give fried potatoes a better flavor?
A. Sprinkle a small quantity of flour on the potatoes before frying them. It will give them a delicious flavor and make them a rich golden brown.
Q. How can I rid the house of spiders?
A. Soak pieces of cotton wool in oil of pennyroyal and place them around the haunts of the spiders.

WHO TOLD YOU THAT?

"Now remember, Pat," said a sergeant to an Irish soldier, "the password is Saxe—after Marshal Saxe, you know."
"Shure," said Pat, "O'll never forget it. Wasn't my father a miller and my uncle a coalman?"
Later in the day, the Irishman was challenged. "Saxe," he replied.

THE STARS SAY—

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE
For Saturday, February 1
A DAY of a sudden and breathtaking turn of events, with all under suspicious rule for the attainment of not only commonplace and workaday plans and objectives but also more sentimental and spiritual values. These are under excellent prospects of the full fruition of cherished hopes and wishes. Dreams may be bounteously realized. Do not complicate this by erratic impulses.

On the Birthday
Those whose birthday it is may find themselves plunged into a year of a startling about-face, with new places, contacts, plans and objectives turned into new fields of operation, and of far-reaching and dramatic denouement. Change of technique, ways and means, should precipitate much of a constructive nature. Forces and faculties should be keyed to high purpose, with romance and adventure not lacking. Curb rash or emotional behavior. A child born on this day should be blessed with much versatility, originality, ingenuity, with grace and charm as well. A life of adventure, romance and achievement is indicated.

Get two ounces of peroxide powder from your druggist. Sprinkle on a hot, wet cloth and apply to the face gently. Every blackhead will be dissolved. The one safe, sure and simple way to remove blackheads.

USEFUL HINTS

Water that is uncomfortably hot to your hands is too hot for furniture, woodwork or painted walls. Clean, warm water and a mild soap, if necessary, is best for household work.
Winter wool blankets should be carefully shaken at intervals to fluff up the nap which supplies the warmth.
A coat of wax applied to brass door knockers forms a protective film which keeps off tarnish.
To safely change a blown fuse, first be sure your hands are completely dry, disconnect all cords and appliances on the circuit, then unscrew the dead fuse by the rim and replace with new one.
If your youngsters are pin-up enthusiasts, furnish them with good-sized, bulletin-type boards made of soft wood where they can thumb-tack their cutouts. It will save disfiguring marks on wallpaper or painted walls.

Drain Cleanser
A cup of washing soda down the kitchen drain is an excellent cleanser, but be sure to follow it with a quart or so of boiling water, so that the soda and the grease do not form a soft soap and stop up the drain.
Hair Brushes
When buying hair brushes, press the bristles down hard. If they spring back immediately without a sign of bending, they will wear well and you have an efficient brush.

Narrow Shoulders
If the shoulders are very narrow, avoid raglan or dolman sleeves. Wide lapels, short cape and bright colored yokes and neckwear are good.

Ellen's Diary

By an Island Farmer's Wife

"An' what's the name of those little birds, that go along sticking their beaks into the flowers in the Summer time?" Jamie asked his mother this morning. It was still a little too early to rise, and Jamie was whiling away the interlude, in a conversation, that if interesting to hear, was a bit one-sided at times. His line of thought was about birds, an intriguing subject to him and one that never fails to hold his interest. At the moment James must have been dozing or else he was straitening out some more personal problem. Perhaps planning his schedule of work for the day ahead. At any rate, his reply to Jamie was only a vague one. "You know the kind Gram daddie?" Jamie persisted "tiny birds, that buzz like a bee when they travel." "Oh yes" James agreed collecting his wandering thoughts, "of course I know these. They're—let me see now—they're Honey-suckle birds." Jamie was silent for a moment then I heard him laugh merrily. "Ha!" he said "I never heard of birds, with a funny name like that!"

Many of Jamie's questions are most perplexing, or so I find them at times. His line of thought this morning when we stuffed a chicken for dinner and he was right at my elbow then to tell me how, "mother do's it." Tell me the name of everything—every single thing, that will come n' take chickens! He was apparently on familiar ground and I had to concentrate to follow him. I neglected to add the pinch of Savoury, forgetting it completely until the bird was trussed and ready for the oven. Not that it made much difference anyway, to James or me, though Jamie assured me.

DOROTHY DIX SAYS—

Dollar-Chasing Husbands

Sacrifice Family Companionship Devoting Time To Business

DEAR MISS DIX: My husband has a steady day-time job and comes home at 4 o'clock in the afternoon. At night he operates a business in which he is in partnership with another man, and this keeps him away from home until late at night and includes all day Sunday.
The result is that he is a stranger in his own home and the children scarcely know him. I feel that every child should have the attention and care of a father as well as a mother and that he should, at least, give us a couple of nights of his society. Am I being too selfish in this and in balking him in his ambition to make money?
CONFUSED WIFE.

ANSWER: I think a man makes no bigger mistake than when he lets his desire to make money become greater than his desire to be a good husband and father. Yet it happens so often in this country. So many men get so wrapped up in their business that they give to it all of their thoughts and interests and time.
Their homes are only places where they come to eat and sleep. They take no part in the family life. They are too tired and spent with the day's work to want to talk or be talked to, or to take their wives out to any place of entertainment, or to play games with the children. The mother is left to run the house and rear the youngsters without any advice from the husband and father, and she is, to all intents and purposes a widow and the children fatherless.

MONEY CAN'T BUY HAPPINESS

Of course, these men, who are so absorbed in their business, justify themselves by saying that the reason they work so hard is because they want to be able to give their families the advantages and luxuries that money buys. They forget that there is no price tag on the most valuable things in life. No amount of money can buy happiness for the wife whose husband never pals up with her, who never gives her any companionship, who takes no interest in anything that she is interested in, or does anything towards making her happy except paying the bills.
And no money can compensate children for not ever having had a father who was guide, philosopher and friend to them and who shaped their lives along the right way. A father who remains a stranger to his children has cheated them out of their due, no matter how many automobiles he bestows upon them.

DEAR DOROTHY DIX: I have been married over twenty years and do not wish a divorce. I love my husband and try to look out for his interests, but he has a dog he is crazy about and takes with him everywhere he goes and lets sleep in the bed at night, there not being room in our apartment for an extra bed. If I don't get to bed first, the dog won't let me in until my husband holds him. If my husband is sitting in a chair with the dog on his lap, I can't pass through the room without the dog leaping and snarling at me.
I like most dogs and have tried to make friends with this one but he hates me. What would you do?
"HAD BENT"

ANSWER: Well, you know the old proverb "love me, love my dog," but that doesn't involve sleeping in the bed with a dog, and I think you would be fully justified in leaving your husband on the companionship of his canine friend.
Evidently your husband cares more for his dog than he does for you, and as the dog is so jealous of you as to be dangerous, I should think you would pack your bag and quit.

DEAR MISS DIX: I met a woman on Monday and we were married on the following Wednesday. We lived together happily for more than 21 years. After she died I met a woman at 6:20 A. M. and at 9:30 A. M. we were married, three hours after we first saw each other, and this marriage has also been very happy.
Everyone tells me that I am a good judge of humanity, but I think it is a gift of some higher power that has guided me.

ed me with a decisive air that "I always tastes better with it." The evening brought me another poser. I might have explained it to him. If James had not come in then from the work at the wood-chopping, when the supper table was not entirely spread. It was when I had looked for a small new moon in the greyness above a hill.

You know that a healthy, well-nourished child radiates joy and happiness and is a pleasure to behold. Active, growing children need large amounts of vitamins and minerals—amounts they don't always get from their ordinary meals.
