Q. Is fish served on cold or hot plates at dinner? A. Hot plates. Q. Must one always wear formal dress for a box party at the opera? A. Yes, always. Q. What is essential to be able to express one's ideas simply and clearly? A. It is necessary to have a good command of language.

WINS FIRST PRIZE

AS SKINNIEST MAN

It's just as dangerous to be too thin as too fat—and there's just one logical way to put on flesh where flesh is needed. No man wants a prize for being the skinniest man in town—not even a purse of gold. For years McCoy's Cod Liver Extract Tablets have been helping people who are willing to be helped to gain needed flesh and while doing so gain in vigor, strength and physical attractiveness. It's a great tonic tablet is McCoy's—small—sugar coated—easy to take. You can get a box of 60 tablets for 60 cents—a fair enough price. Take them for 28 days and if you do not gain at least 5 pounds get your money back from any drug store anywhere. Just ask for McCoy's.

For The Cook

CREAM OF ASPARAGUS SOUP

One tablespoon each of butter and flour, 1/4 teaspoon salt, pinch pepper, 1 square tin asparagus, 2 cups rich milk and 1 cup liquor from the asparagus. Melt the butter, stir in flour, salt, pepper. When well blended stir in one-half liquid and cook until a little thick. Cook in top of a double boiler for 10 minutes, then add the remaining liquid and the asparagus, which has been rubbed through a coarse sieve. Let get very hot, add 2 tablespoons butter and a dash of cayenne pepper, and serve with crackers.

"Your wife seems to boss the children, you, the servants, the dog and cat, and the parrot. Where do you come in?" "Well, I can say what I like to the goldfish, anyway."

Are You Adapted to Marriage? Urges Test to Find Out Dorothy Dix

We Have Aptitude Tests in Colleges to Decide Vocation of Students; Why Not Aptitude Tests to Decide Whether or Not Candidates for Matrimony are Fitted to Enter That Holy Estate?

In some of the colleges they are now giving aptitude tests to the students to see if they have a natural bent toward law or medicine or teaching or engineering or whatever career they are thinking of fitting themselves for. It is hoped in this way to prevent many of the tragedies that result from round pegs trying vainly to fit themselves into square holes and to keep thousands of young men and women from wasting their time and money preparing themselves for professions for which they have no talent and which nature never intended them to follow.

All of us know so many intelligent, industrious, energetic people who are failures in the world simply and solely because they are trying to do the thing for which they have no gift. Singers without voices. Writers without originality. Dumb preachers. Business men who never see an opportunity and who never learn how to trade. Wasted labor. Wasted effort. Wasted lives, all because John was forced to be a lawyer because the Joneses had always had lawyers in the family or mother thrust John into the ministry when he should have gone into a garage because she thought it would be perfectly grand to have a son who was a bishop or because snubnosed Geraldine saw herself as a movie star instead of as she was.

Certainly it will be an incalculable boon to humanity and prevent millions of bitter disappointments and discouragements and the shedding of barrels of tears if the psychologists can separate the sheep from the goats before they break into the wrong pasture and starve to death because there is no food in it for which they have an appetite.

And what a pity it is that just as these students are to be tested for their fitness for following some particular profession there is not some way candidates for matrimony could be tested for their aptitude for the holy estate.

Because the thing that is chiefly the matter with marriage is that men and women are trying to practice it as a profession who have no talent for it and so they make a mess of it. They are not natural-born husbands and wives, and no matter how hard they strive they will never make a success of the calling. They will always turn out an amateurish, jackleg sort of job that will never give any real satisfaction.

A man and woman may be models of all the virtues. They may do their duty like early Christian martyrs. They may be splendid friends, wonderful pals and still be utter failures as husband and wife just because they are not adapted to domestic life, and it would stop about three-fourths of the divorces if they could find this out before marriage instead of afterward.

There are men, for instance, who are just natural philanderers and they can no more help wandering than they can the color of their hair or their eyes. No woman onearth could hold their fickle fancies. They would tire of the greatest beauty and the vampsiest vamp in six months and their wandering feet would start chasing some petticoat that was just fluttering around the corner.

Such men should never marry because if they do they break their wives' hearts with their unfaithfulness and poison their lives with jealousy. Single, they are an asset to society, for they provide beaux, romances, love-making, thrills to the innumerable women they favor with their attentions, but as husbands they are total losses.

Then there is the tightwad man whose only real passion in life is for money. He is always counting up the cost of the baby's milk and how much it takes to feed a family and what his wife spends on her clothes, and he always begrudges the price.

The stingy man should never marry because if you count the cost of a family in dollars and cents it is a poor investment. It is only the generous, open-handed men, the men who get their greatest pleasure in lavishing things on their wives and children who should marry.

The man who is so absorbed in his business or profession that he has no time or interest to give to anything else should not marry. Nor should the selfish man marry. Nor should the cold, unemotional man marry. Nor should the man marry who does not want to settle down and be a fireside companion. Such men may be of fine characters and make a great success of bachelorhood, but they are failures as husbands.

Nor should the undomestic woman marry. The woman who does not thrill to the sight of pots and pans and who skips all the recipes in the newspapers and who does not love every detail of home-making should refrain from taking any man's happiness and digestion into her keeping. Nor should any woman marry who looks upon children as brats and refuses to inflict herself with them and who thinks that there is some more important career in the world than being merely a wife and mother.

No woman should marry who is not adaptable and who cannot change her opinions and her prejudices as easily as she does her hats. No woman should marry who is not a good sport and who is not willing to give and take. Nor should any woman marry who is not willing to use tact and diplomacy in getting along with her husband.

And, above all, no woman should marry who isn't of a kind, loving, sunny disposition, for on the wife's temper and temperament depends the success of every marriage.

What a pity that every Marriage License Bureau doesn't keep a psychologist at hand to give the prospective bridegroom and bride a test and find out if they are adapted to marriage!

DOROTHY DIX.

Oh! Mrs. McKay, what flour do you use?

At Street Corners—

Over the Telephone—

At the Sewing Circle—

Everyone's Talking About The "Blossom of Canada" Flour PRIZE CONTEST

COULD you make use of an extra $100.00 in cash—or $50.00—or $25.00? Here is a contest in which you have a chance of winning either a cash prize or a bag of flour.

This contest is being conducted by the Lakeside Milling Company, Limited, one of the most reputable flour mills in Canada.

You cannot buy better flour than "Blossom of Canada"—the product of this well-known mill. You know how good "Blossom of Canada" Flour is—if you use it. You know that it gives uniformly perfect results! Ask your dealer about this flour. He will tell you how his customers praise it.

Well then, take a blue "Score Card", one of which you will find in any size bag of "Blossom of Canada" Flour. Fill in, with the names of your friends, the ten spaces as called for, and mail the Score Card to us.

We are asking you on this card to recommend "Blossom of Canada" Flour to some of your friends and to fill in their names on the card if you think they will buy this good flour when they need their next bag.

That's easy enough isn't it? Yet in mentioning our flour you are doing us a service. That is why we can offer the big cash prizes and give away hundreds of bags of flour.

The more names you send us on the Score Cards the better chance you have to win one of the large cash prizes. But remember, you are entitled to one of the bags of flour if you are among the first 500 persons to send in a completed Score Card. So don't delay. Read the simple rules of the contest herewith. Send

Table with 23 Cash Prizes: First Prize $100.00 in Cash, Second Prize $50.00 in Cash, Third Prize $25.00 in Cash, 20 Prizes of $5.00 each in Cash. And in addition 500 full 24-lb. bags of "Blossom of Canada" Flour to the first 500 persons who send in a completed score card.

As a completed Score Card as soon as you can, and if you are among the first 500, you will receive by return mail, an order on your local dealer for the flour.

After that, to help you win one of the large prizes, send as many names as you can. Remember that this contest is limited to Eastern Canada which makes your chances of winning considerably greater. This advertisement is appearing in the newspapers in the Maritime provinces only.

The DOOM TRAIL by ARTHUR D. HOWDEN SMITH AUTHOR OF PORTO BELLO GOLD ETC. COPYRIGHT BY BRENTANO'S WNU SERVICE (Continued) "You call him good with justice, monsieur—By the way, what is your name?" "They call me Joncaire," he said with a trace of grimness. "Joncaire! Mort de vie!" he said with a trace of grimness. "Joncaire! Mort de ma vie! The very man I have been searching for!" "What? How is that?" he asked. "Ah, but that is a tale! I cannot believe it now! Am I in very truth on French soil once more?" "This is the Magazin Royal," he returned. "As for French soil, monsieur, I do not see how you could have been off it." "Off it!" he repeated. "Off it," he repeated impatiently. "Since his Most Catholic Majesty hath a just claim to all lands in these parts—on this side of Hudson's river, at any rate." "To be sure, to be sure," I as-

"But this year, monsieur—" "Humph!" growled Joncaire again. "And where do you come from, Jean?" Something in his speech warned me—the liquid curl of the South. "I, monsieur!" I replied innocently. "Oh, I am of Picardy. But monsieur is of the South—no? of Provence?" All the suspicion fled from Joncaire's face, and in its stead blossomed a broad smile. "Peste!" he ejaculated. "Tis a clever lad! And how knew you that, Jean?" I was overjoyed—and in no need to stimulate my sentiments. This was good fortune. "Was I not camping beside the Regiment de Provence when we were on the Italian frontier? 'Tis a pleasant way those lads have of rum-rumming. Rum is good only for sav-
