Sudden Death Of Mr. Geo. Gardiner At Advanced Age

One of Charlottetown's well-known citizens in the person of Mr. George Washington G. Gardiner, 222 Grafton Street, passed away in his sleep at his home on Sunday night, Nov. 5, at an advanced age. He was found dead in his bed by his janitor, Mr. Plus Mahar, about 9 o'clock Monday morning. Dr. I. J. Yeo was summoned and decided the deceased had succumbed in his sleep to a heart attack. He was eighty-four years of age.

The late Mr. Gardiner engaged in the printing business for many years, on premises now occupied by Carter's seed warehouse. Previously, he had been foreman printer at the late Mr. John Coombs who had a plant on Lower Queen Street. The late Mr. Gardiner was the printer for several years having published the "Royal Gazette." At one time he was also in the newspaper business as editor and publisher of "The Prince Edward Islander," a weekly paper.

In his younger days the late Mr. Gardiner was an active supporter of the Liberal party and for many years a member of the local Odd Fellows Lodge. He was a member of the late Mr. John Coombs who had a plant on Lower Queen Street. The late Mr. Gardiner was the printer for several years having published the "Royal Gazette." At one time he was also in the newspaper business as editor and publisher of "The Prince Edward Islander," a weekly paper.

life in a beautiful home of your own, and with a young and charming partner by your side. And we wish for you and yours a long and pleasant journey. Our regret is that you are leaving this district and moving to another. But we realize that our loss is the other's gain. Because Arthur, you have been a staunch and genial friend, an obliging neighbor, one whom it was always a pleasure to meet or ask a favor of. And we bespeak to your new neighbors that their community will be enriched by the coming of an honest, upright and worthy young man. As your new abode is not so far distant, we expect to be seeing you often, and a welcome will always be awaiting you in your old home "town."
