Modern Etiquette

By Roberta Lee

Q. Is it rude for a man, after dancing with a girl whom he is not escorting, to leave her standing in the center of the floor, and walk away?
A. Yes, it is very rude to do so. He should thank her for the dance, then take her immediately to her friends, or to her next partner.

Morning Smile

Mistress: "Look here, Mary. This chair is covered with dust."
Mary: "Yes, ma'am, but I reckon nobody has sat in it lately."

OUT OF REACH

A business man from Aberdeen was lurching with an English visitor when the Scot, in turning out his pockets, produced a dental plate.

"Bless my soul!" said the Englishman, "why do you carry that about with you? In any case, it looks too small to be yours."

"It belongs to the wife," explained the Scot. "We at sea she's contracted the habit of eating between meals."

How Can I!!

By Anne Ashley

Q. What can I do when too much salt has been added to cooking food to take part of the salt away?
A. Stretch a clean cloth lightly over the vessel and sprinkle one tablespoonful of flour over the cloth. If allowed to stand for a few minutes the flour will absorb the salt.

Q. How can I save time when sewing on buttons?
A. Use heavy coarse thread for sewing on buttons. The work is accomplished much less time than with fine thread.

Q. How can I remove the rust and roughness from iron?
A. By rubbing them on emery paper.

DOROTHY DIX SAYS—

Mother's Duty To Sons

Parents Should Teach Boys Social Graces So Necessary To Life

Every mother who works conscientiously at her job of motherhood tries to teach her daughters the tricks and the manners that are the passport into society. Little girls are taught to curtsy; "Good evening Mrs. Smith. How is your rheumatism today?" And: "Thank you, Mr. Jones, for the beautiful dolly. I just love it," when they are thrown in contact with elder people.

And when they get to be bobby-soxers and have their first dates, Mother tries to give them a line about how to treat boys; how to be friendly without being monopolistic; how to show a boy that they appreciate his attentions without acting grateful for being noticed; how and when to suggest going home; how to start a conversation with a dumb lad, and so on and so forth.

But, strangely enough, it is a rare thing for a mother to try to develop any social know-how in her boys. She permits them to grow up with uncouth habits, to grunt when spoken to, to ignore their elders, and often not to have even decent table manners. And whether this is because she lacks the energy to attempt to polish up a rough diamond, or whether she believes that civility of address will come to a boy when he needs it, nobody knows.

MALE MIEN IMPORTANT

It is a pity that mothers make this discrimination between their children because boys need to be taught their way around in polite society far more than girls do. They are not so quick to observe and catch on to the proper thing to do as their sisters are.

So when Johnny begins to step out, he often finds himself in a strange country whose manners and customs he does not know and whose language he does not speak, and he is frightened and bewildered and desperate. Many are the letters that I get from these bewildered boys: "How do I invite a girl to go to the school prom with me?" "Should I give a girl a birthday present? Should I send a girl flowers if I am going to take her to a party? Will a girl expect me to kiss her good night if I take her out? What should I talk to a girl about? And a dozen other elementary matters of conduct whose answers they should have learned at their mothers' knees.

In one particularly pathetic letter a lad told how he bungled his first date by crying the girl he took to a party at the dance, never going near her again, never seeing to it that she got any dances, or even any supper. "And when I took her home," he said, "I just opened the car door and let her scramble out herself, and all I said to her was just 'So long,' and she has never spoken to me since."

So this little secret is an appeal to mothers to have a heart and use a little common sense in dealing with their boys. Realize that Johnny isn't always going to be a little tousle-headed kid. He is going to grow up and want to step out with the girls. So teach him, at least, all the approaches to the favor of the fair sex. Teach him how to write a note to a mother to help a girl on with her coat without wrecking her costume. How to dance without crumpling suede for life. How to carry on a conversation. And how to order a good dinner.

No boy can have a greater asset than good manners.

WASHABLE GLOVES

Nothing is more silly than the pleasure some people take in speaking their minds. A man of this make will say a rude thing for the mere pleasure of saying when an opposite behavior. Full as innocent might have preserved his friend or made his fortune.—Steele.

Laundrying Blankets

After laundrying woolen blankets and clothing in lukewarm water and soapflakes, add a few soapflakes to the last rinse water. It will increase the fluffiness of the blankets and is a moth preventive.

Sewing
Instead of cutting the thread at the end of a finished seam stitched on the machine, turn and stitch back again for about an inch. Then cut the thread and one will avoid the task of tying the ends.

Canned Food
If a can has a bulgy appearance or emits gas when punctured, throw it away. Do not risk eating it.

Thompson - Rix Nuptials

A pretty August wedding took place at Trinity United Church on Wednesday afternoon when Miss Arlene Louise, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Rix and Harry, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Thompson of Charlottetown were united in marriage.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. T. E. MacLellan, the church being attractively decorated with quantities of variegated gladioli making a colorful setting for the pretty bride party.

The young bride looked very attractive in her long graceful wedding dress of white satin en train, carrying a shower bouquet of white roses. She was attended by Miss Louise Brown wearing a fetching blue gown and carrying a basket of matching flowers and sweepers and Miss Pearl Livingston in pink with similar flowers.

The little flower girl Norma Jean Gay was winsome in pink as she scattered flower petals in the path of the happy bride party. Mr. Wendell McLaine acted as groomsmen, while Mr. Lorne Storey and Mr. Norman Lowther ushered the guest to the flower marked pew.

The groom, best man and the bride's father, who gave his daughter in marriage, wore white flannels and dark jackets. The bride's mother chose a rose for her costume with a corsage of white gladioli and the groom's mother a light green suit with corsage of pink roses. Following the ceremony a reception was held at Brighton Shore, the lovely garden and indoor setting for such an attractive gathering.

Tea was served by Mrs. Ralph Gay and Mrs. Olive McMillan. The bridesmaids, Mrs. Thompson left by car for Wood Islands thence to Halifax and points in Nova Scotia, the bride traveling in a smart brown suit, chic hat and dark brown accessories. Happiest good wishes are extended to the young couple who received many exquisite gifts prior to the happy event.

Ellen's Diary

By an Island Farmer's Wife

James, mine husband, tore himself away from his imposing round of duties at Alice's this afternoon, and together we went with School picnic. No really merry folk are the A's whose farm adjoins ours to the North-part of which once belonged to this farm and covered with virgin growth of forest had been disposed of to Mr. A's father—but then in James' memory of church history when elders were old and patriarchal in appearance, bearded and stern-looking, who weighed their words and gave impressive utterances. Good and much respected men, certainly, but unapproachable to the young and so fearful of their given the smallest opportunity, selves into quiet corners after they had dutifully and wordlessly green-
