THE HUMAN PROCESSION

Alfred Noyes, the distinguished English poet who recently visited America as a "peace emissary," will celebrate his thirty-third birthday to-day. Mr. Noyes enjoys an enviable distinction among bards in that, from the very beginning of his career, he has been able to dine regularly from the proceeds of his verse. The young poet who lives in an attic and subsists on occasional repasts of bread and beer and cheese is a common enough figure, but the bard who can translate the muses into "three squares" per diem, and who lives in a luxurious hotel, is unique in literature.

James Jerome Hill, the great railroad builder of the Northwest, will pass his seventy-fifth milestone to-day. He was born on a farm near Guelph, Ont., Sept. 16, 1839. What Cecil Rhodes accomplished for the British Empire in South Africa, Hill achieved for the United States, and his title of "The Grand Old Man of the Northwest" has been fully merited. The eminent Scotch-Canadian has done more for the development of the resources of his adopted country than any other living man. The rich Northwest, with its broad farms and fertile fields and its network of railroads and its thriving cities, is a monument to Hill's energy and ability and breadth of vision—a monument that any king might well envy.

Charles Battell Loomis, the humorist, was born in Brooklyn fifty-two years ago to-day. Before winning fame as an author he was a grocery clerk and a chicken peddler. He is one of the most solemn-faced of men, and looks about as much like a professional man as St. Patrick's Day parade resembles a funeral procession.

DIPLOMACY THAT FAILED.

President Wilson's first essay in diplomacy has been unfortunate. The President is a stern moralist, upright, fearless and honest, but in diplomacy something more than these is necessary to constitute the best policy. He wished to brush all international technicalities aside and settle the Mexican trouble with the "big stick" of righteous indignation, alas neither Mexican Government nor Mexican insurgents concede his right thus to intervene, and the President has had to accept the rebuff with the best grace possible.

He demanded that President Huerta should resign the Presidency and not come forward again as a candidate for office. President Huerta refused thus to efface himself, and all that President Wilson can now suggest is that Americans should boycott Mexico.

If the truth were told, Washington has had no sufficient diplomatic ground for interfering in the domestic affairs of Mexico. Moral ground she may have had, but that is another question.

As international law now stands something more tangible than moral indignation is necessary for a casus belli. The only reason President Wilson assigned in his message to Congress for intervention was that the Huerta regime is growing steadily weaker, and that the best thing for the Government to do is to resign before it is violently turned out by the insurgents. The Mexican Foreign Minister flatly denies this, and curiously enough the foreign dwellers, including many Americans, support him. The various foreign colonies in the country have gone so far as to transmit a favorable resolution to their respective Governments, and this taken in conjunction with the fact that Britain and other leading Powers have recognized Huerta's regime, rather takes the ground from beneath President Wilson's feet.

A candid review of the situation leaves one with no other conclusion than that Washington acted too hastily in withdrawing Ambassador Wilson, and sending a special envoy from President Wilson to supersede him. The whole diplomatic body in Mexico considers this a reflection upon them individually and collectively, as the American Ambassador had acted as their mouthpiece in formally recognizing Huerta's Government. Whatever antipathy the foreigners may have had to Huerta, it was forgotten in the indignation at the slight thus put upon the diplomatic corps.

A further evidence of President Wilson and Secretary Bryan's inexperience in diplomacy was shown in their astonishing haste to apologize to Sir Edward Grey for a supposed indiscretion on the part of Ambassador Wilson. The latter stated to an interviewer that a report from London concerning Sir Edward's views on the trouble was incorrect, or if correct, was contrary to British Foreign Office precedent. No one was more surprised than the British press that President Wilson should have thought the incident deserving of notice, far less an apology. Instead of gaining credit for their action, they merely afforded cause for amused comment in the chancelleries of Europe.

It appears the best thing Washington can do now is to leave the Mexicans to their own devices. So far as can be ascertained from reliable sources, Huerta has the bulk of the country at his back. He represents the Diaz faction, and it was that faction which kept Mexico in peace and tranquility for forty years. The manufactured revolution which deposed him never had any real backing in the country, and it is this same pusillanimous revolutionists which have caused the trouble President Wilson would like so much to settle off his own bat.

VALUABLE BULLETIN.

One of the sources of information which our farmers should make more use of than they do is the Publications Branch of the Department of Agriculture. This branch has been designed and is being maintained at large expense for the sole purpose of placing before the farmers of Canada the most up-to-date information, the results of experiments and research in short, an almost complete agricultural education. This information is supplied freely for the asking and farmers who wish to keep in the forefront of the profession should make all possible use of it.

One of the most pretentious bulletins yet issued, and probably the most valuable to Prince Edward Island farmers is one recently issued, entitled Milk production in Canada. It forms Number 72 of the regular series of bulletins of the Experimental Farms.

Its author is Mr. J. H. Grisdale, Director of Dominion Experimental Farms. Mr. Grisdale has made milk production a subject of special study and experiment for many years and has embodied in this bulletin the most valuable of the information obtained.

The subjects treated in the bulletin of some 200 pages are those associated with milk production and deal with crop rotations, Dairy Barns, Breeding Dairy Cattle, Feeding, Care and Management of Milk Cows and other subjects.

The general subject of milk production is treated very fully, the many factors upon which production depends being taken up separately, beginning with the selection of a farm best suited for dairying purposes, nature of its soil, the most suitable crops to grow and the rotations to follow—a suitable rotation being given for all parts of Canada. Diagrams are given showing the arrangement of fields under the different rotations and also showing a good arrangement for farm buildings, pastures &c.

The breed of cattle to be chosen for success in dairying is also discussed. To those who are wedded to some one particular breed it will be a relief to learn that preference is not given to any other. Mr. Grisdale is convinced, from his experience and from that of the different farmers consulted throughout Canada that there is no "best" breed. He says "generally speaking the best breed is the breed the man likes best." Several are mentioned which would be likely to prove suitable where the milk is supplied to a cheese factory and others given where butter is to be manufactured. The character of the farm and the abundance of forage will also affect the breed chosen.

The herd having been established, the method of keeping it in a high state of efficiency naturally suggests itself. This is very fully discussed as is the judging of dairy cows.

Stables and management of the herd, ventilation, air and sunlight, milking and care of milk, with advice on the economical and clean handling of milk, feeding methods and rations are all treated exhaustively and intelligently, the whole bulletin making a course of education in dairy farming that is simply invaluable to the man who would succeed in dairying as it embodies the experiences of up-to-date farmers and experimental farms throughout Canada.

This and any other of the bulletins published for the benefit of farmers can be had for the asking and every farmer should make use of the information.

NOTES

The report of the weather has saved his reputation.

Farmers and exhibitionists have been pinning their faith in the Moon at the Full.

Now farmers are certain of reaping a bountiful harvest and the Exhibition authorities ditto, ditto.

Book agents have just discovered Prince Edward Island and it is now their happy hunting ground.

From the Encyclopedia Britannica to the University Magazine are being pushed for all they are worth—and more.

Curiously and appropriately enough in one respect one of the most popular authors thus being boosted is John Fox, Jr. But does not his "Hell for Sartain and other stories" sound a somewhat ominous combination of name and destination?

Dr. Sharper is the name of a horse that has lost his pedigree. He has been doing wonders at Halifax races, and now people want to know who he is and where he comes from. All known so far is that he is an immigrant dumped with a car load of others in Montreal—like many humans.

A San Franciscan Presbyterian minister has followed the example of a Unitarian parson of the same city in resigning his church in order to become an undertaker. He says "the undertaking field will give him an even greater opportunity for social service than the ministry." A greater opportunity for handling filthy lucre as well.

Toronto Saturday Night is an attempt to be funny advice: an anonymous correspondent that the best way to get rid of $1000 is to invest in a Cobalt mine, a newspaper or Prince Edward Island Fox Industry. Quite recently this same journal invited an investment company to advertise in its columns and when it declined said nasty things about it. A law suit is now pending.

FIRST THINGS

The first attempt of the English to establish dominion over South Africa was made 110 years ago today, when the British flag was raised on the Cape at Good Hope, where a Dutch colony had existed since 1659. The English occupation continued until 1803, when the country was restored to the Dutch by the peace of Amiens. The British again assumed possession in 1806, and in 1814 Cape Colony was definitely ceded to England and became the nucleus of the present great dominion, the Union of South Africa. The Portuguese discovered the Cape, the Dutch settled it, and the English developed it. In 1839 a scheme of public schools, drawn up by Sir John Herschel, came into operation, and has since been vastly improved, until now every child, white and black enjoys the benefit of the best educational facilities. The first newspaper, printed in English and Dutch, appeared in 1824, and was the forerunner of a large, well-edited and influential press. The pioneer paper was suppressed by the despotic governor, and the indignation of the colonists resulted in the dismissal of the governor and the granting of a free press to the colony. Cape Town, founded by the Dutch in 1652, has under a century of English rule, become a beautiful and flourishing modern metropolis.

LINE TRAIN ROBBED

OF $71,900

SAVANNAH, Ga., Sept. 13—Fifty thousand dollars in transit from the Chase National Bank of New York to the Savannah bank and trust company was stolen from the portable safe on an Atlantic coast line train between Jersey City and Savannah. The money should have arrived yesterday morning. Its loss became known today.

Another package containing $21,900 to New York banks in Valdosta and Brunswick also was robbed on the same train. The seals on the $50,000 package seemed undisturbed when the robbery was discovered.

Express company officials here refused to talk. W. F. McCauley, president of the Savannah bank and trust company, confirms the loss of the $50,000, and says it was shipped out from New York on Monday and should have reached here yesterday at 6 a. m. The name of the express messenger who had the money in charge was not made known here.

The seals on the outside of the steal trunk, or safe, it is said, did not show that they were tampered with, but the sealed envelopes in which the money was contained when it left New York, had been opened.

BLUE GRASS STATE FAIR.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Sept. 15.—The eleventh annual Kentucky State Fair opened today under most favorable auspices and with very flattering prospects of the most successful exhibition ever held in the Blue Grass State. A record-breaking list of premiums has been offered by the management and as a result the choicest products of the stock farm, field, orchard and factory are on display. An excellent programme of trotting races will be among the attractions.

TODAY WE CELEBRATE

All good members and pure patriots of the Estados Unidos Mexicanos—the United Mexican States—will join to-day in celebrating the anniversary of the birth of Mexican freedom. The sixteenth of September is the national patriotic festa of the southern republic, when love of country and devotion to liberty is fostered by military demonstrations, oratory, band concerts, fireworks, revolutions, and a liberal consumption of megal, aguardiente and other inspirational beverages.

Many statesmen and politicians who were prominent in the celebration of independence a year ago are now in their graves, while others are being driven to madness, despair and death in the island prison of San Juan de Ulua, where political prisoners are confined in underground cells, so small that the inmates can neither stand nor lie down at full length. To these stone coffins of the living death the light of the sun never penetrates, and the air is unacceptably foul. Sharks infest the waters around the grim castillo, ready to tear and rend any unfortunate who seeks to escape. Into this terrible hole—worse even than Sing Sing—Diaz used to throw his political enemies. The overthrow of old Porfirio resulted in the release of those who had outlived his vengeance and the loss of Madero took their place. These in turn have been freed, and Maderistas now occupy the subterranean cells of the old castle.

Mexico's long and blood-spattered history began early in the sixteenth century, when Cortes established New Spain on the ruins of the great Aztec Empire of Montezuma. The country was governed successively by sixty-two Spanish viceroys.

Mexican "liberty" was born on Sept. 16, 1810, when a native priest, Don Miguel Hidalgo y Costilla issued that glorious "El grito de Dolores" which was the Mexican declaration of independence. After gaining several victories over the royalists, the priest was captured and executed. The revolution broke out afresh in 1813, just a century ago this year, when a congress of patriots, at Chilpancingo, declared Mexico free and independent. They failed, and in 1815 another priest, Don Jose Maria Morelos, took up the cause, and in September, 1821, entered the city of Mexico at the head of the patriot army. He was elected emperor, as Augustin I., but was soon overthrown, and was executed.

General Santa Ana proclaimed Mexico a republic. Since then Mexico has had one political convulsion after another, and the people have stopped fighting among themselves only long enough to resist, in vain, the expansion movement of the United States, and to oppose successfully the attempt of Maximilian to found a New World empire. Diaz, ruling with an iron hand, gave Mexico an era of comparative peace, and it remains for another Diaz to bring order out of the chaos.

Scottish scientific organizations will celebrate to-day the centenary of the birth of Robert Fortune, the great Scottish botanist. He spent many years in China and Japan, studying the fruits, flowers' plants, vegetables and other natural products of the Orient, and his many books treating of these subjects are still accepted as authorities.

TODAY IN DOMINION HISTORY

The first State visit of royalty to the Dominion of Canada began twelve years ago today, when old Quebec gave a glorious welcome to the Duke and Duchess of York and Cornwall. The streets of the ancient capital were gay with flags and the houses blazoned with banners bearing the French greeting "bienvenue." The guns of four warships in the river boomed out a royal salute, and when the future ruler of the empire set foot on Canadian soil he faced a vast assemblage, including the Governor-General, the Premier, nearly all of the cabinet members, and most of the leading men of the Dominion. There was a royal review of troops on the Plains of Abraham. Out of respect to the memory of President McKinley, the social receptions in Quebec and Montreal was canceled. Quebec's welcome was duplicated in Toronto, Ottawa, Winnipeg, Calgary, Vancouver, Victoria, and other cities, and when the royal pair sailed from Halifax on October 21st it was with the remembrance of an imperial tour without precedent in history.

September 16 is the birthday of Andrew Bonar Law, British statesman, in New Brunswick, 1858; Lewis Franklin Barker, famous physician, at Norwich, Ont., 1867; and of James J. Hill, American railway builder, near Guelph, Ont., 1838. On this date the first organized ministry of the Province of Manitoba was constituted, with Hon. M. A. Girard as Premier, 1870; and Mgr. Pleiss issued his famous "Mandement," urging French-Canadian loyalty to Great Britain, in 1807.

HUNT SEALS IN AEROPLANE.

GLACE BAY, Sept. 13.—If Captain Farquar, the veteran of the seal field, who left last week for England, succeeds in his mission, he will revolutionize seal hunting in the Gulf and Atlantic waters, says the North Sydney Herald. Captain Farquar's mission is ostensibly to give the contract for a new steamer to work in conjunction with the Seal, which is unable to cope with the ever-increasing traffic offering, and on his arrival in the old country will conclude arrangements for the new boat.

As is well known, the veteran Halifax mariner and seal killer, was one of the high-liners last year, as well as in other years, in the hunt for seals. And it was on his trip last year that he conceived the idea of lessening the dangers encountered by the men who risk their lives on the ice floes and at the same time facilitating them in their work.

This new idea is the use of an aeroplane or flying machine, which would enable the aviator to fly over the ground where the seals are supposed to be, and then reports back to the ship, which would mean 'not only a saving time, but would enable the hunter to locate the pack without danger and without disappointment. Not only this, but in cases where steamers are rendered useless by reason of their being wedged or crushed by the immense ice floes, communication could be made which would bring immediate relief to the victim, and thereby lessen the danger of loss of life.
