Enemy Captures

In an earlier outflanking sally, a mixed force of Japanese horsemen and plain-clothes infiltrators managed to cut the Tounpoo-Mandalay road at Yedatze, 20 miles north of Tounpoo, but Chinese forces drove one cavalry and another mixed up the others. It was stated.

This implied that the main road to the north still was open despite the Japanese occupation of the air-drome.

Air action was heavy in the Burmese theatre, with mounting losses on both sides. Japanese bombers with fighter escorts made heavy attacks on the remaining R.A.F. airbases, one coastal landing ground having been bombed yesterday by 26 enemy raiders, who did slight damage. There also were four enemy raids Tuesday on Chinese forces.

British fighters shot down one enemy fighter for sure, probably destroyed two bombers and another fighter and damaged several others. One British plane thus engaged in defence of its landing fields, the "Flying Tiger" of Col. Claire L. Hume, shot down the Japanese volunteer squadron are blasting at the big Japanese air bases in both Burma and Thailand. Yesterday they smashed 40 to 50 grounded aircraft at the Chienanai, Thailand, base but lost Squadron Leader John Newkirk, who crashed near the scene of the raid.

Limit positions Open to men Physically fit

OTTAWA, March 24 — (C.P.)—In order to increase the number of men available for service in the armed forces, in war industry, or in other essential occupations, regulations have been issued by the War Relocation Commission. The regulations allow entry into employment in a wide variety of occupations, of men who are of military age and physically fit. Prime Minister Mackenzie King announced today. These occupations will be known in future as restricted occupations. The regulations include a schedule of the restricted occupations.

The schedule comprises: Bookkeepers, cashiers, stenographers, typists, clerks, office appliance operators, messengers, salesmen and sales clerks; taxicab drivers. Any occupations in wholesale or retail trade, advertising and real estate.

Any occupations in or directly associated with, entertainment, recreation or personal services, including but not restricted to theatres; film agencies; motion picture companies; for or released from military or naval occupations. The governor-in-council is empowered to amend the schedule of restricted occupations.

By applying the negative compulsion of restriction, where possible, in preference to the positive compulsion of allocation, the waste of manpower in unessential activities is prevented. At the same time, men and women are maintained in or directed into the form of service they prefer. It is obvious that the greater the measure of willingness that can be preserved, the more effective the service will be.

If Necessary

"May I say, in conclusion, while the government has not created and will not create any compulsion where compulsion will serve to increase the total war effort, the government will not hesitate to use compulsion which means wastefully to governmental machinery. It is essential that at a time of war, the services of men and women should not be consumed in unnecessary tasks. It is imperative that the services of all should be directed into war-time tasks.

In those aspects of our war effort in which voluntary methods are working satisfactorily, voluntary selection, including a measure of choice by the individual, will be continued. The more expensive and complicated methods of compulsion have been employed only where it is felt that compulsory selection is necessary in the prosecution of the war. Compulsion, however, will be applied without fear or favor wherever in the opinion of the government its use will aid in the achievement of a maximum war effort."

Any occupation in the manufacture or production of: (1) biscuits, confectionery, cocoa; (2) bread and bakery products; (3) aerated and mineral waters and other beverages; (4) liquors, wines, beer; (5) rubber and plastics; (6) leather and fur products; (7) textiles products; (8) furniture and upholstery; (9) photography; (10) printing, publishing and engraving; (11) radios, refrigerators, washing machines, and vacuum cleaners; (12) electrical and electronic apparatus; (13) pottery and china; (14) soap, and toilet preparations and articles; (15) mattresses; (16) musical instruments; (17) barber and beauty shop equipment; (18) cameras and films; (19) sporting goods; (21) games, toys and novelties.

Any occupation in the repair of clothing, boots and shoes, furniture and household equipment, jewelry or watches, musical instruments.

After March 23

It is provided that, on and after March 23, 1942, no male person shall accept employment, and no employer shall engage any male person in any of these restricted occupations, unless such person presents to the prospective employer a birth certificate or other incontrovertible evidence that his age is less than 17 or more than 45 years; or a certificate of honorable discharge from the armed forces; or evidence of rejection on grounds of physical unfitness for active service in the armed forces during the present war; or a permit from a national selective service officer authorizing him to accept such employment.

The conditions which govern the granting or refusing of permission by national selective service officers are to be made, and may be revised from time to time, by the minister

MIDDLE EAST

North Cape to the Bay of Biscay. All the evidence is that such raids will increase in number and intensity.

The Libyan front into which Britain poured brains, men and equipment for two years is vastly important.

Strong British forces there will divert as many Germans from the Russian front as they would if they were deployed here. It was revealed recently that an anti-German air fleet was sent to support Rommel's advance.

The Times recently outlined British strategy for 1942 in an editorial which declared the "grand pattern" of the Allied war effort was taking shape.

This pattern, according to the Times, is—

"While Russia boldly confronts the weight of German land power on the continent, Great Britain must guard her own and Russian maritime communications and must hold the crucial Middle East bridge and the Indian bridgehead."

Many military men emphasize that a British landing on the continent would not divert sufficient troops from the Russian front to make any difference there. They are confident the Red Army will check the German offensive in the spring.

Russia has received sufficient supplies to embark on an invasion unless all equipment was complete and training finished.

The basic tactical arguments against landing on the continent rest on the size of forces involved, German defences, shipping and comparative training, and equipment of combatants.

The Germans could concentrate workers now available.

OTTAWA, March 25 — (C.P.)—A. R. Mosher, president of the Canadian Congress of Labor, in a statement issued today on the government's manpower program objected to the introduction of such an important plan without consultation of organized labor and said there was no coordinated plan for using the German workers now available.

Analyzing the figures further, it is found that 637 cars of potatoes and 128 cars of turnips left the Island in February of this year against 966 for the same month in 1941; in January outgoing freight totalled 918 cars compared with 827 last year.
