FOR NEURALGIA

ASPIRIN

You doubtless depend on Aspirin to make short work of headaches, but remember that it's just as dependable an antidote for many other pains! Neuralgia? Many have found real relief in an Aspirin tablet. Or for toothache; an effective way to relieve it, and the one thing doctors are willing you should give a child—of any age. Whether to break up a cold, or relieve the serious pain from neuritis or deep-seated rheumatism, there's nothing quite like Aspirin. Just make certain it's genuine; it must have Bayer on the box and on every tablet. All druggists, with proven directions.

Physicians prescribe Aspirin; it does NOT affect the heart

Bayer is the trade mark (registered in Canada) indicating Bayer manufacture. While it is small in size, Aspirin means Bayer manufacture, to assure the public against imitations. The tablets will be stamped with the "Bayer Cross" trademark.

ONE DIES IN THEATRE

ANOTHER TAKEN ILL DURING MOVIE SHOW.

TORONTO, Feb. 18.—Laughter was stifled into a sudden deathly hush twice yesterday in the Tivoli Theatre, and while the forgotten comedian continued his antics all unnoticed on the screen, doctors rushed to the aid of stricken members of the audience. One of the two was revived.

The man whose enjoyment of the picture was ended by death was William F. Sangster, aged 46, a prominent insurance broker of Vancouver, who was staying at the King Edward Hotel. The identity of the other person was not learned.

Doctors Are Called.

The first occurrence was during the afternoon performance. In the midst of the laughter of the audience a loud gasp was heard from somewhere in the house, followed by a slight commotion. Then a voice was heard calling for doctors, and several responded.

In spite of the dramatic interruption, the show proceeded, and as nothing further was heard of the stricken person recovered or was assisted from the theatre.

Again about 9 o'clock, during the evening performance, some one suddenly called for a doctor, and again a physician answered the call. A few minutes of perfect quiet ensued, and then the police were sent for.

Body Taken to Morgue

Sergeant Hill went to the scene from headquarters, and Constable Sangster was declared dead, and his body was conveyed to the Morgue, where it was viewed by Chief Cor-

FAMOUS SHRINE THRONE OPEN

(By British United Press) JERUSALEM, Feb. 18.—A forbidden area, held by the Moslems, has been declared open to Christians and Jews. They may now visit the tombs of the Jewish patriarchs at Hebron in the mosque built over the legendary site of the Cave of Machpelah. The mosque was built by the Crusaders between 1167 and 1187. It was the seat of a bishop until in 1187 it fell to Saladin. This shrine has been guarded most jealously by Moslems, the only Europeans admitted from time to time being princes and ambassadors. Other "infidels" could ascend only to the seventh step of the flight on the south side.

Jews, unable to come near the tombs of their patriarchs made a shrine of a hole in a large stone beside the fifth step. They put written communications to the patriarchs down this hole, imploring their ancestors' intercession in time of illness or distress. Pious Jews assembled there at dusk on Friday for worship.

The walls are incrustated with marble, above which runs a band with inscriptions in Arabic from the Koran. Two openings in the floor lead direct to the Cave of Machpelah. Six shrines or cenotaphs, above ground, are said to stand exactly over the tombs of the patriarchs below. Richly gold-embroidered green cloths cover the cenotaphs. Cloths of crimson cover the tombs of their wives.

The cenotaphs of Isaac and Rebecca are inside the mosque, those of Abraham and Sarah, in the porch to the north of the mosque, and those of Jacob and Leah, in Chambers at the north end of the sacred enclosure. A two-story structure built in 1383 is supposed to contain two cenotaphs of Joseph and near it, on a stone, Moslems point to a footprint of the Prophet Mohammed.

Sad Drowning Accident

(Taken from Georgetown, Ont., Herald) A sad fatality occurred on Friday afternoon, Feb. 18, about 3 o'clock, when two children, John L. McCumber, aged 5 years, son of Mr. and Mrs. Alex. McCumber, and Charles Spurgeon MacDonald, aged 7 years, son of Mr. and Mrs. John McDonald, were drowned in the swimming hole at the old dam south of H. Kays factory.

Together with Gordon Stokes, aged 4, and Edward Stapleton, aged 4, the little lads had been playing with their sleighs near their home on Main St., but had wandered down to the old dam. They left their sleighs and ventured out on to the ice. The ice broke and all four precipitated into the water.

The pool varies from two to eight feet in depth, and the two who were drowned, evidently fell in the deepest part. The boys had been out playing and sleighing from about 3 o'clock in the afternoon. Shortly before 5 o'clock the Stapleton boy dragged himself into his home dripping wet and in a state of exhaustion. Dr. Crawford, an inquest is unlikely.

The late Mr. Sangster, who had a wife in Vancouver, was manager of the General Accident and Insurance Company of that city. The Corporation has notified the Vancouver authorities of the occurrence.

An Old Recipe to Darken Hair

By JANICE RANDALL

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked, or gray. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is messy and troublesome.

Nowadays we simply ask at any drug store for "Weyth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." You will get a large bottle of this old-time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients, for only 75 cents. Everybody uses this preparation now, because no one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, thick and glossy and you look years younger.

Mr. Muir's Address At Y. M. C. A.

On Sunday evening, Rev. W. Bruce Muir in his address to the Y. M. C. A. said:—
Matt. V.8. "Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God."

Sunset and evening star,
And one clear call for me!
And may there be no moaning of the bar,
When I put out to sea;
But such a tide, as moving seems asleep,
Too full for sound or foam,
When that which drew from out the boundless deep
Turns again home.

Twilight and evening bell,
And after that the dark!
And may there be no sadness of farewell,
When I embark;
For though from out our bourne of time and place,
The flood may bear me far,
I hope to see my Pilot face to face
When I have crossed the bar.

This immortal lyric was composed by Tennyson when he was in his 21st year. He showed the poem to his son, who exclaimed: "That is the crown of your life's work." Tennyson replied: "It came in a moment."

"Sunset and evening star" with one bold stroke the poet gives us a picture and paints for us, the rich, magnificent glow of sunset. The gay morn of life is far behind, and it becomes nothing but a memory. The noontide heat of day, too, is passed, and behold "It is toward evening and the day is far spent." An old man looks out over a waste of waters, and as he looks they grow dark and cold. "And one clear call for me." The significance of the setting sun and the evening star are clear enough. It is the "one clear call." The dark waters are calling—calling.

The time has come when "That which drew from out the boundless deep turns again home." It is from out the boundless deep that our souls come to us.

The soul, brethren, that rises with us, our life's star comes out of the boundless deep. Then, having crossed the horizon of time, and the horizon of space "turns again home." In those words this great Victorian poet declares himself to be one of the great multitude of the faithful who are but pilgrims—and wanderers of this earth—and who desire plainly that they seek a country, and search for the city of God.

"Lord Thou hast made us for Thyself, and our hearts are restless till they rest in Thee,"—thus said the great Augustine, and we find the same thought echoed by Robert Louis Stevenson, in his Requiem.

"This be the verse you 'grave' to me;
Here he lies where he longed to be;
Home is the sailor, home from the sea,
And the hunter, home from the hill.

In that day, when in the incomparable words of the author of Ecclesiastes:

"The silver cord is loosed; the golden bowl broken; the pitcher broken at the fountain, the wheel broken at the cistern." Then does the dust return to the earth as it was, and the spirit of God Who gave it, the boundless deep turns again home."—Twilight and Evening Bell.

Do we tend Brethren, to make too much of what we call death? Separation, no doubt, is a sore ill to these who truly love, but I think we may safely say "it is certainly not the wish of those who have gone behind, should be forever darkened by their departure from this present scene.

Christina Rossetti expresses this thought in one of her short poems:—
One is a "song" of which the first two lines are:—
"When I am dead, my dearest,
Sing no sad things for me."
The other begins: "Remember me when I am gone away, gone far away into the silent land," but the closing words round off the thought, "Enter by far that you should forget and smile that that you should remember and be sad."

We come back again to the figure of the great Victorian poet standing locking out over the sunset seas, and listening to the "one clear call."

"And may there be no sadness of farewell when I embark." The ground of that quietness and confidence with which he looks forward to the end is soon made clear. Doubt may have visited his youth, but with mellowed age has come certitude.

"For though from out our bourne of time and place,
The flood may bear me far,
I hope to see my Pilot face to face
When I have crossed the bar."
This closing strain strikes a chord of memory that recalls two passages of Holy Scripture. One is that chapter in which Paul tells us that, though in this world we see "through a glass, darkly," then, in the world to come we shall see face to face.

The other is the passage in which
