BROWN-REVILLE WEDDING—A quiet and pretty wedding took place on June 27th in Toronto at St. Patrick's Church when Margaret Mary, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Reville, Cardigan, P.E.I., was united in marriage to Robert Douglas Brown, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. G. Brown of Brigden, Ont. The marriage ceremony was performed by Rev. Geo. McKenna, C.SS.R. The bride looked charming in a street-length dress of white silk crepe. She wore a picture hat and her corsage bouquet was of sweetheart roses. She was attended by her sister, Mrs. Robert Goggins of Bristol, Conn., who wore a yellow crepe dress, yellow flowered hat and her corsage was of Talisman roses. The groom was supported by his cousin, Don C. Brown of Toronto. Following the wedding breakfast at the King Edward Hotel, the couple left for Niagara Falls, and from there on a boat trip on the Great Lakes. For travelling the bride wore a rose summer suit with white accessories. Mr. and Mrs. Brown will reside in Ottawa where the groom is an employee of the Dept. of Transport, Purchasing Branch.

Goodwin - Fleming Nuptials

A pretty wedding was solemnized at St. Dunstan's Basilica on June 26th when Mary Gertrude Veronica youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J.B. Fleming became the bride of Maurice Edgar only son of Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Goodwin, both of Charlottetown. The marriage ceremony was performed by the Rev. Dr. McMahon who also celebrated the Nuptial Mass.

The altar was beautifully decorated with cut flowers and vigil lights.

The young bride given in marriage by her father looked very charming in floor length dress of white embrodiered sheer over satin with finger tip veil. Her only ornament wa sa string of pearls the gift of the groom. She carried a bouquet of American beauty roses.

She was attended by the groom's sister as bridesmaid who was becomingly dressed in pale blue lace with flowered hat. Her bouquet was a nosegay of sweet heart roses. Mr. Bernard Fleming, brother of the bride acted as groomsman.

The wedding march was played by the organist Mrs. Joseph Dougan and Mr. Frank McIntyre sang appropriate hymns during the ceremony.

The bride's mother wore heavenly blue, two piece suit of crepe, navy accessories, swin furs and wore a corsage of red roses. The groom's mother wore a flowered jersey with matching accessories and also wore a corsage of red roses.

Immediately following the ceremony a reception was held at the Queen Hotel where a delicious dinner was served to about forty guests. The toast was proposed to the bride by the groomsman and ably supported by the groom's father and other guests present. The groom responded on behalf of himself and Mrs. Goodwin.

The ushers were Clifford Murphy, Mike Hennessey, and Ralph Fleming. The bride and groom remembered their attendants by giving them suitable gifts.

Mr. and Mrs. Goodwin left later by plane for a trip through the Maritimes. Her going-away suit was of lime green crepe gold top coat with white accessories. Her corsage was of Better Time roses. Their many friends wish them many years of happy wedded life. On their return they will make their home at 46 Highland Ave. The bride and groom received many beautiful and costly wedding gifts.

Always Another Spring

that much on anyone except himself. Why did you keep this new man such a deep secret? You never even chirped about him. When is he coming around? I'm simply dying to have a look at him—and remember, if you don't want him for yourself, you might give your little sister a break."

It was at this point that David walked in. Just in time to catch Janice's teasing words about "wanting him for yourself" and to bump into Mrs. Ashton and Vicky struggling with the heavy umbrella stand.

"What's up?" he asked. "Hello, everybody. Hi Tubby. Who wants who, Janice? Is it an anniversary or something?" He gave out a long whistle at sight of the roses. He picked up the card and read it aloud. "Well, what do they stand for?" he asked. He addressed Mrs. Ashton. Apparently it had not occured to him that the roses could be for Anne.

"Everybody knows that red stand for love, David," Janice informed him loftily. "It goes without guessing who wants who, I'd say. You've got a rival, my lad, one who means business. You'll have to be on your toes from now on, or I miss my cue."

"On my toes?" David looked at Anne. "You mean someone sent these to you?" he demanded.

"Oh, just someone I met at the lake," Anne returned with assumed carelessness. "I don't see my everyone's making such a fuss about a few flowers," she added almost crossly.

She repeated the same thing to David later on when he demanded a more elaborate explanation. "You never mentioned this fellow," David said, "when you were telling me about your visit on our way home from the station." David had met her train the night before and had driven her home, but as it had been his night to play poker he had not stayed. Therefore there really had not been much opportunity for Anne to mention anyone.

She pointed this out to him. "Besides, there's nothing to tell," she added. She rather resented David's peremptory attitude.

"Is he in love with you?" David demanded. "Doesn't he know you're engaged to me?"

Anne said, "Oh, yes, he knows that."

"Well, if he knows you're engaged," David persisted, "I shouldn't think he'd waste his cash."

"Perhaps he doesn't consider it a waste." Just because David never sent her flowers . . .

"I didn't mean that." His tone held a tinge of apology. "But take that card—the fellow must have a helluva lot of nerve!"

He certainly had, Anne thought, smiling secretly at that. Her resentment had cooled. Could it be that David was jealous? If so, that was what she wanted wasn't it? She sat down now on the piano stool beside which the roses reposed in the umbrella stand, bent to bury her nose a moment in their spicy rich fragrance. She and David had the living room to themselves now. "Gil did not seem to think it so important, my just being engaged," she said. "After all, David, I'm not married to anyone yet." She had not known she was going to say that, and in the same careless tone she had adopted before. She was almost as surprised as David.

He did not attempt to hide his astonishment. "Well, I'll be damned," he said. "That's a fine way to look at it. Sounds to me as if you had deliberately encouraged this guy, Anne."

"Does it?" Anne struck a few chords, ran a scale. The funny part was that she felt careless and light inside. She felt as if she had David on the end of a pin like a specimen, watching him wiggle—and enjoying the experiment. She saw now that the thing for her to do was not to keep Gil a sentimental memory but to use him as live bait—employing her father's simile. "I can't help it, can I," her grey eyes were amused, "if someone falls in love with me and wants to marry me, besides you, David?"

"Wants to marry you!" David squirmed on the end of the pin now. His eyes held more than accusation and injured dignity. "You don't mean to tell me he had the brass to propose to you, knowing you were engaged! What does he think that's going to get him? That and his rotten roses. He hasn't any intention of coming here, has he?"

"Um, he might." Gil had every intention in the world of doing just that if she was to believe all he had said. "He said he could do it in forty minutes with a good stiff tail wind. Gil pilots his own plane, you see. He gets around. And of course," Anne sat down on the arm of David's chair, "I couldn't very well slam the door in his face if he does come."

PLAID GINGHAM

NEW YORK —Designers use bright plaid gingham for a vacation costumeff or white qipus or spun rayon, or fine chambrays.

Look for interesting shoulder detail, for snug waistlines and for skirts with new ease and swing. This is not the type of costume in which pencil slim lines are important. It requires freedom and ease, and a real, though often hidden, holiday spirit.

WHAT FILIBUSTERS WERE

The term "Filibuster" originally meant a buccaneer or free booter according to the Encyclopedia Britannica. American adventurers who took part in the West Indian and Central American War were known as filibusters.

Church Boys' Camp Held At Crapaud

For the past ten days thirty-five Anglican boys have been under canvass in Camp Kingston, Crapaud, P.E.I. under the leadership of Rev F. Douglas Henderson, Camp Chief; Rev. S.J. Davies, Assistant Camp Chief; Rev. Douglas E. Noel, Camp Chaplain; Mr. Wm D.L. Sherren, Boys' Supervisor.

The staff were fortunate in securing as camp cook Mrs. Leslie Haines of Kensington who has provided wholesome meals for the boys.

The Right Rev. G.F. Kingston, Bishop of the Diocese of Nova Scotia and Patron of the Camp, in a message to the boys, sent his sincere greetings and God's Blessing upon all.

This is the third Anglican Boys' Camp of its kind on the Island and combines Scouting for boys with training in citizenship for Church and State. A full programme has been provided for the boys in scouting and Church teaching as well as games, the idea of the camp being to develop each side of the boy's character in training for the life which is ahead of him.

Camp Kingston has been permanently established at Crapaud and provides an opportunity for camping for Church Scouts and other Church boys. A typical day in camp consists of:

6.30—Cook up— Duty patrol.
7.00—All up. P.T.
7.10—Wash and tidy camp.
7.30—Morning Prayers.
8.00— Breakfast.
9.00—Inspection.
10.00— Pioneering and work on property.
12.00—Noon Day Prayers.
Duty Patrol to help cook if needed.
12.05—Bible Class.
1.00—Dinner.
2.15— Swim and swimming tests.
3.30—Tracking and athletics.
4.30—Rest till supper.
5.00— Duty Patrol help cook.
6.00—Supper.
7.00—Competitive games.
8.15—Canteen.
9.00—Council fire.
10.00—Off to bed.
10.15— Lights Out.

The Deanery of Prince Edward Island is to be highly commended on the move that they have taken in establishing a camp of this type for the youth of the Church and it is hoped that the Church, through her young people will be better able to face and cope with the ever changing conditions of humanity. It is understood that two more camps are to be held at Camp Kingston this Summer. One in the latter part of August— a summer school for all young people who are interested— and the other at the first of September which will be an A.Y.P.A. Conference. It is the vision of the Deanery to hold successive camps each summer at Crapaud and for this purpose camp land adjacent to the Church has been bought including the large rectory which will be used as administrative headquarters.

On Sunday, services in St. John's Church in Crapaud were conducted by the Rev. F.D. Henderson with the whole camp of boys in attendance. Mr. Henderson's text for the day was Proverbs 29:18—"Where there is no vision the people perish". With this as his theme, he outlined to the people the crying need for a greater vision of the needs of the world in building for the Kingdom of God; and in the evening, speaking to the boys, Mr. Henderson brought to their attention that they must plan and develop the trinity of man—body, soul and spirit—in order to fulfill their duty to God and their fellow man.
