IN MEMORIAM

MRS. WILLIAM S.H. KNIGHT
The death of Mrs. Knight, widow of the late William Knight of Souris, occurred June 1st, in Chicago in the 72nd year of her age. She possessed a keen sense of humour and a kind heart. Especially as she aged she became more and more devoted to her family. She is survived by four sons, Mr. Matthew XXV. The poor never left her door hungry nor empty-handed. She was married to her husband in 1918. She had two daughters, Mrs. John and Mrs. William. She was a member of the St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church where the service was conducted by the Rev. Randolph MacKay. She was laid to rest in the St. Andrew's cemetery. Her husband, Mr. William S.H. Knight, died in 1938. She was born in the town of Souris, P.E.I. 6-20-45.

to shun crowded and noisy cities like Moncton.

As we lingered over breakfast I took my nephew to task for not having secured an apartment farther removed from the downtown section but into a few places that anyone would be disturbed by a bit of extra traffic. He's with the R. C. A. F. and says that noises only makes him sleep better.

Perhaps I'm beginning to slow up - Well, why shouldn't I, for when one reaches that time in life called the "late forties" you simply can't take it like the young fellows. That's the difference between middle age and youth, a difference which no amount of arguing can ever change.

After breakfast I nosed about Moncton and ran into a few Islanders all of whom I was pleased to meet once more.

Going to the Windsor Hotel, I met Mrs. Roma MacLure. She was holding down the position of cashier at the Windsor's up-to-date grill. Mrs. MacLure is well known in Charlottetown where her husband, the late Allan MacLure, operated what we used to call the "New Method Cleaners". Roma's old home is Wackley Point. About five blocks down from the old Windsor Clifford Road conducted a modestly neat and cleanest and most modern of its kind to be seen in any city.

After showing me about the premises we went to his beautiful apartment where I was introduced to his charming young wife, the former Rena Kennedy of Charlottetown.

Here they dined me right royally, and we spent most of the afternoon discussing people and places in our land across the Strait.

Mr. Rodd likes Moncton. His people and his business activities in Moncton has been good to him since his arrival here four years ago.

The late afternoon being very hot, I strolled for a short time in the beautiful residential part of the city an then had to call it a day.

Latest to join the characters in the Langford murder case is Mrs. Beatrice Coleman, also known as Baroness de Chaney. Confessing that she was a close friend of the slain Albert E. Longford, police hope she will shed some light on the mystery of the New York crime.

having been tucked away notwithstanding his fears of ever getting it done this spring. And another, a farmer from a distance and living on our side of the river came in to sit awhile and chat. Referring to this family, James "meanie" they are the farmers and not from any whim of circumstance and therefore they glory our vocation - farming, and like those in every walk and calling who are a credit to it, farmers neighbor from the hill was over too and Judy whispered to me in the pantry, where we fixed up a bit of lunch. What was I to do? I bought fresh mackerel or else fresh mackerel and bread. Judy said "You'd better not think them talk that beef or seed potatoes or fat pigs were the 'chief end' in life." They are in one way to interested farmers, but not to Judy. Here? I sometimes think it's a word of seven letters that is sweeter than honey - Judy with a capital J, and begins to Judy with a capital J.

Until tomorrow - Diary - Good-night.

and believe it possible for him to be. We are both 40 years old. I am confined to a wheel chair due to an attack of infantile paralysis when I was a child. I do all of my own housework and teach violin and piano. What do you think our chances of happiness would be?

and then a very sad woman the balance of your life. Evidently the man would not have even that little hour of grace, for, if he marries you, it will be paying a debt of honor, not because he desires you. He has told you this in effect. He feels that after all of your years of devotion and service to him that he is practically bound to marry you if you are so determined to have him, but he is putting no heart in it and is dreading it.

My advice to you is to keep this beautiful friendship just where it is. Keep him looking upon you as an angel of mercy and not as a Shylock who is collecting her pound of flesh. Gratitude is a lovely thing in friendship, but it is dust and ashes in the teeth of those who have to substitute it for love.

(F. H. McArthur)

June 15th, 1945.

Last night citizens of this city went to bed under what one might call a terrific heat. But towards morning, heavy rain descended on the just as well as the unjust, leaving city and country-lands refreshingly cool.

Stimulated by the invigorating atmosphere, I took to the street in search of pleasure and material to renew these numerous friendships. - The St. Maurice Valley Chronicle, Three Rivers, Que.
