NOT SUFFRAGETTES.—A peaceful and happy home in beautiful Brighton, in which the echoes of Mendelssohn's wedding march still linger, was startled Tuesday night by a visitation which looked not unlike a charavari, but wasn't. It came in the midst of the storm and consisted of a party of young ladies who, when the disguises were penetrated, proved to be invited friends, not suffragettes or immigrants as their costumes seemed to indicate. Although their garb was sadly out of harmony with the surroundings they enjoyed a delightful evening in games, music refreshments and general merriment.

A HORSE TRICK.—A. D. Murchison's grey mare played a somewhat curious trick yesterday. Mr. Murchison and Mr. McLeod drove from their home in Pinette en route to Charlottetown. The roads were bad and the fierce snowstorm made the journey exceedingly unpleasant for the occupants of the sleigh as well as for the grey mare. The latter evidently became disgusted with the whole situation and when at Southport determined to end it. Sweeping suddenly around, as they were just getting on the ice, she upset the sleigh spilling the occupants out in the soft snow, then wheeled about and set off for parts unknown. Mr. Murchison and Mr. McLeod were obliged to walk the rest of the way to Charlottetown while the faithless beast probably took shelter in some friendly barn. On later advice the Guardian learns that the horse has been found and no damage has resulted.
