What Every Widow Knows!

By

LUCILLE VAN SLYKE

CHAPTER 37

EVEN A WIDOW CAN'T KEEP A SECRET

It was a restless and unhappy Molly who went drearily about her final preparations for leaving for Greenwich. She had been lucky about one thing: Mrs. Morson's unexpected return from the country. The pleasant old soul had come down on business matters intending to remain overnight only. But at noon she came back with tears in her eyes to say,

"My dear, I'm sorrier than I can say but I'll have to give up our rooms at once and take a chance on getting them back in the fall." Her colorless old lips trembled, "I'm just from my lawyer's and he tells me that our income for this year will be less than half what we anticipated. Morrie's heart is so much worse that it's out of the question to worry him with it. I think I can send most of what there is up to him—and find something to do. Maybe I could take care of children or—"

"You poor darling!" Molly's arms went sympathetically around the shaking old shoulders. "I'm sorry for you but your hard luck is my good luck," she pulled her over to a chair. "I'm selfishly glad you need a job. You can take charge of the tearoom for a while and have my rooms and we'll rent yours until I'm back. I have to be out of town a while."

"I think you're just saying that to save me—"

"'Deed no!" ejaculated Molly. "I was at my wits end to know what to do. Lilla isn't competent enough—and anyway I'm letting her go when Sadie gets back from her holiday." She slipped into practical details at once, sensibly jotting down a memoranda of the most essential things, punctuating her instructions by encouraging pats on Mrs. Morson's arm. "I'm more grateful than I can say that you'll do it—and I know you won't find it so hard. Business is very light now and the place is only about paying expenses but you'll have your food and room and I can pay you a fair amount until things get back to normal. Cheers me awfully to know you'll be here."

But she was far from as cheerful as she professed to be as she went upstairs to pack. Over and over in here unhappy thoughts she pondered about Dexter's cold refusal to come to her. She felt shamed, humiliated and puzzled. She was expecting Mr. Olvany back about five, but so feverishly restless was she that she was bathed and dressed a good hour before that with Pard's muzzle and leash ready on the hall rack. She was a bit dubious about the propriety of taking the great dog with her but she certainly couldn't leave him.

She went back to the tearoom to bid the cook and the girls good-bye and to pause by her own desk where Mrs. Morson, her faded old eyes shining with excitement, sat awaiting the guests.

"Don't worry! Molly told her. A tiny figure she bent over the older woman's shoulder to jot down her telephone number. She was wearing an old dark frock and a dull blue hat. She was pale, with dark circles under her brown eyes but her lovely lips were glowing red.

"If Mr. Hatch should telephone here, give him that telephone number and have him call me there—but don't give it to anybody else. Make them give you the messages and I'll call you every night and morning. I—Dex' wasn't here—" she added helplessly "and I wanted to see him."

She glanced up as a bronzed and smiling man entered.

"Jimmie Gordon!" she exclaimed joyfully.

Jim his last month's grouch completely cured by weeks of fishing in Canada, hurried toward her to catch both her hands in his as he cried,

"I fully intended to be gruff with you, Molly," his old scolding tone made her smile, "for I could shake you cheerfully but you look so tired I haven't the heart. Don't worry about that Sans Souci mess—I'm back to help you face it——"

"Oh." Molly stammered. "I've had so much else happen that I'd forgotten that!"

"Come up Thursday," he reminded her. "I'm glad your hat is on. We'll drive out where it's cooler and I'll talk things over with you."

How sweet he was to her! Molly's heart thrilled gratefully. Dear old Jimmie! He might be middle-aged and a trifle bald and bit overweight, to be sure, but she was so glad of his blessed thoughtfulness for her after the snubbing that Dexter had given her that she was incautiously cordial with her oft-dismissed suitor as she explained that she couldn't go riding with him but that she'd like him to go up to her sitting room.

"I've only a few minutes and a heap to tell you."

But upstairs when he put his fingers under her chin to tilt her head upward she grew suddenly shy.

"Miss me some?" he asked tenderly.

"Awfully," she sighed, moving away from him. "Sit down, Jim. I've a secret to tell you that you must not tell anybody. I'm going visiting Kerry's mother." His quick ejaculation made her hurry along with her explanation. "She is ill, dying in fact, and needs me an—"

"Molly," he interrupted. "Won't you need some money?"

"Jimmie, you generous dear!" her brown eyes filled with tears. "That is thoughtful of you. I—it's hard to tell even you. She isn't poor. She's very rich really."

"And had let you starve along—" he began angrily.

"Didn't know where I was or that I was Kerry's wife," her heightened color made her lovelier than ever. "Jim dear, don't judge him too hardly. He—well—I'm not Molly Benedict, really, I'm Molly Rogers—he was Kerry Rogers."

Jim's eyes narrowed.

"So that's why what I had to offer you didn't interest you," he began bitterly. "Well, congratulations. I guess you have scads of money coming."

"Jim, don't," she put both hands on his shoulders. "That wasn't why I couldn't marry you. I don't love you. I'm sure I can never love anybody. I—oh, it hurt awfully the day I found out that I wasn't Kerry's first wife—that he—well, I can't talk about that. Or the money part of it. I'm not sure that I want it even if some of it does belong to me. It's—oh, I'm awfully upset—things have happened so queerly. You're the only one I've told Jim. I'm sorry I told you but I was so miserable. And I don't know how long I'll be gone—I—couldn't you drive up to see me in a few days, Jim?

"I'll drive up to get you for Thursday," he said slowly. "Great Scott! Molly, the Rogers have millions!"

Port Of Spain Bananas For Can.

(C. P. Cable)
(By Guardian's Special Wire)

PORT OF SPAIN, Trinidad, April 24. — Trinidad's Banana Control Board, formed to establish a steady supply, provide for a higher standard of fruit and improve transportation methods, was appointed today. Hon. E. J. Wortley, O. B. E., director of agriculture was named chairman.

At the first meeting of the new board, scheduled for Thursday, they will sign a contract with the Canadian Banana Company which will guarantee to take all bananas grown for export. Shipments to the Dominion, by terms of the agreement would be made in Canadian National Steamships.

Under terms of the agreement the Canada Banana Company would pay fixed rates for the fruit. The contract extends to the company a virtual monopoly of bananas shipped from the Island and is similar to contracts which have been entered into with fruit growers' associations on other West Indian islands.

Other members of the new control board are: Hon. Errol Dosantos, Colonial Treasurer; Hon. C. H. Pierre, K.C., Hon. S. W. Fitt and F. Anduze.

ON WAY TO SEARCH FOR FORTUNE

LONDON, April 24—Seven hundred men, including 10 generals, left England tonight for Gallipoli peninsula where they fought in the Great War to search for a fortune in gold coins buried for safety by British soldiers before they went into action.

The men left for the old scenes of conflict on a pilgrimage cruise organized by a Royal Naval Division. The party leaving London was bidden farewell by General Sir Ian Hamilton who commanded the Mediterranean Expeditionary Force in 1915.

Winston Churchill, former Conservative Chancellor of the Exchequer, sent his best wishes to all ranks revisiting the "scenes of their glorious deeds."

The men will also search for a gallon jar of Jamaica rum buried at Sulva Bay by Welsh soldiers. A map of the bay will be displayed aboard their ship so that all will have an equal chance in their hunt.

Safe Way To Reduce

39 lbs. Off—and She Feels Better

A woman who has found a sure, safe way to lose fat—without freak dieting or dangerous drugs—writes:—

"A year ago I was eaten up with rheumatism, and was far too fat. I weighed 154 lbs. and, as my height is only 5 feet 2 inches, you can judge my appearance. I have taken Kruschen regularly, and not dieted, and now I weigh 115 lbs., which is just nice, and, further, I feel better in health and my rheumatism has vanished."—(Mrs.) D. N.

Unlike certain drastic drugs, Kruschen does not aim to reduce by rushing food through the body; its action is not confined to a single part of the system. It has a tonic influence upon every organ of elimination, every gland, every nerve, every vein. Gently, but surely, it rids the system of all fat-forming food refuse, of all poisons and harmful acids which give rise to rheumatism, digestive disorders, and many other ills.

Will Consider Brave Action Of Sydney Youth

(C. P. By Guardian's Special Wire)

HAMILTON, April 24—Governors of the Royal Humane Association will consider at their next meeting, to be held shortly, the case of Freddie Snow, Sydney telegraph messenger who saved three children from drowning in Nova Scotia waters, it was announced today by H. E. Waterman, Secretary.

The official said the Association had been provided with full particulars of the youth's actions, through affidavits from the Mayor of Sydney and from officials of the Canadian Pacific Railway.

WILL VISIT SHEFFIELD

(By The Canadian Press)

LONDON, April 24—The Duke and Duchess of York will visit Sheffield July 5 to open the new public library and art gallery and extensions of the Royal Sheffield Infirmary.

MINISTER IS DISMISSED FROM CHURCH

SEATTLE, April 24—The "battle of murals" at the fashionable Pilgrim Congregational Church came to a sudden climax today with the expulsion of its pastor, Rev. Fred W. Shorter, characterized by his opponents as the "anti-capitalistic minister."

By a vote of 171 to 121 the congregation voted to oust the minister, who immediately announced he would start a new church in which he can preach "liberal, militant Christianity and the brotherhood of man."

In Memoriam

PATRICK McINNIS, ELLIOTVALE

Death came suddenly and unexpectedly to the late Patrick McInnis at his home in Elliotvale. The deceased, although in his seventy-sixth year, was still actively engaged in the farming profession, of which, by his industry and thrift, he made a complete success. Having retired in its usual good health on April 6th, he passed away early the following morning. His Pastor, Rev. Basil Croken, administered the last sad rites of the Catholic Church.

To his wife, nee Margaret Ellen Gormley, who has been in failing health for the past few months, his death came as a distinct shock. To his family also, his death came as a saddening surprise. Truly, God moves among us mysteriously, calling from our midst those to whom at the time, we least expect the call of death to come. The consolation of the bereaved is the knowledge that the deceased performed his duties faithfully and well, and has merited the reward of a faithful servant of Christ.

He was a devoted husband, a kind and loving father, a true friend, and charitable neighbor. He was just and upright in all his dealings, and always ready and willing to help those who were less fortunate than himself. His loss is felt not only in the home left desolate, but by the whole community.

The funeral to St. Teresa's Church was attended by a large concourse of people, who came to pay their last sad tribute to his memory. His remains were laid to rest in the quietude of St. Cuthbert's Cemetery, beside his son who pre-deceased him. Service at the grave was conducted by his Pastor, who also sung the Requiem Mass. The pall-bearers were: Patrick Gormley, John Gormley, John Power, and Patrick Connolly, hearse-director, M. J. Kelly.

He leaves to mourn his loss a grief-stricken wife, two sons, Ambrose, New York; John, Elliotvale; three daughters: Mrs. John P. Cashman (Minnie), Peabody, Mass.; Margaret, Registered Nurse, Dorchester, who was called home to attend to her mother; Mrs. George Kenny, (Hannah), Elliotvale; and twelve grandchildren. Eternal rest give to him O' Lord, and let perpetual light shine upon him."

MRS. P. MCNICHOL

The community was shocked on Saturday evening to learn of the sudden death of Mrs. McNichol, wife of Dr. Peter McNichol, of this town. Mrs. McNichol was spending the evening with friends at the home of Mr. and Mrs. N. C. McKay when a sudden heart attack, shortly after eight o'clock caused her death in less than an hour. Her gracious personality will be missed by a large circle of friends on the North Shore and elsewhere.

She was 56 years of age, and prior to marriage was Miss Mamie Campbell, youngest daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. John Campbell, New Richmond, Que. Aside from a short residence in Bathurst, following the Campbellton fire of 1910, she had lived in Campbellton since her marriage to Dr. McNichol, some 34 years ago. She was a devoted member of the First United Church, and was active in many welfare activities.

A funeral service was held Sunday evening at 9 o'clock at the deceased's late home, Rev. F. H. McIntosh, assisted by Rev. Geo. S. Mitchell, officiating. The body was taken to New Richmond for interment on Tuesday.

Mrs. McNichol is survived by her husband, three daughters, Mrs. Edwin Reid, Campbellton; Mrs. Ernest Butler, Winnipeg, and Miss Loraine, Montreal; one son, James, Halifax; one sister, Miss Christine Campbell, and two brothers, James and William, New Richmond, to whom the heartfelt sympathy of the entire community is extended in their sad bereavement.—Campbellton Graphic.

The late Mrs. McNichol had many friends in New London.

Spanish Royalty Take Cuban Girl Into Midst

PARIS, April 25—A small hotel in Paris has recently been the scene of the first dramatic meeting between Queen Victoria of Spain and the beautiful Cuban girl for whom the Prince of the Asturias sacrificed his rights to the Spanish throne so that he might marry her.

This meeting was brought about as a result of the illness of the prince who, as the Count of Cavadonga, has been living here with his pretty vivacious wife.

All Europe was thrilled last June by the news of the romantic marriage in Lausanne of this happy couple.

The Spanish royal family, in law, however, could not officially acknowledge this marriage, and for some time King Alfonso, for private family reasons, was much incensed at his son's insistence on the love-match with his commoner bride.

The fact that the prince was taken ill with influena and that his wife has also been in delicate health swept aside all other considerations and led to the family meeting in Paris.

Queen Victoria, when she visited the prince's bedside at the hotel, found her daughter-in-law devotedly attending him.

Since that first meeting not only Queen Victoria, but King Alfonso as well have visited the young couple.

On each occasion she has been most affectionate towards her daughter-in-law, brushing aside court conventions.

It is stated in Spanish court circles, however, that the visits are entirely private and do not in any way constitute a reversal of the decision taken by King Alfonso that he cannot recognize the marriage nor officially receive the Countess of Cavadonga, even though he may be pleased to see her.

FORETOLD OWN DEATH

LONDON, April 25 — Three months after he had announced from the pulpit of his church—St. Anne's, Soho—that he was going to die, the Rev. Basil Bourchier, one of London's most famous preachers, died in a Cambridge nursing home. He was 53.

During his farewell sermon at St. Anne's, Soho, he said: "I am passing into the shadow of death. I cannot stay with you long. I have no fear."

Reach Accord Over Moncton Stadium

MONCTON, N. B., April 25—The city council and the Moncton Exhibition Association were in agreement last evening on plans for the leasing of the Stadium for next winter and keeping the Moncton Hawks, holders of the Allan Cup, the North American championship and virtually the world's amateur championship, in Moncton for at least another year as a unit.

The Proposal

A proposal was submitted to the council yesterday by a committee from the association whereby the latter would lease the big community building for a period of five months at a rental of $600 per month, payable in advance, or for a minimum rental of $3,000. The proposal also included the offer of the Association to turn over to the city the loud speaking equipment now in the Stadium and owned by the Association as part payment of rent now due. It is valued at $3.000 and would become city property.
