Delegates to the 1935 convention will remember with pleasure the outstanding hospitality of the people of Georgetown.

Rev. P. D. McGuigan, Vernon River, and Rev. Basil Croken, St. Theresa, were present at the convention.

A very pleasing feature during one of the sessions was the presentation of an old fashioned English rosegay to the National President Mrs. J. Coffey, Montreal. This was a token of appreciation from the Diocesan Sub-division.

Mrs. Coffey left Friday morning for St. John, N.B., where she will attend the convention there on Monday.

ENJOYABLE REUNION OF GALLANT FAMILY.—An enjoyable reunion of the family of Mrs. I. Gallant of Portland, Me., was held recently at the beautiful summer cottage of Mr. and Mrs. Leo Farrell at Seymour Lake, Island Point, Vt. Mrs. Farrell, formerly Bina Gallant, is a former resident of Egmont Bay. Needless to say the function, which brought the members of the family together at this ideal location was pleasant and the week-end spent in the most picturesque locality in the State, will be long remembered.

The love of music is instinctive with every normal child. There are many books of song suitable for this period in proper range for the child voice.

Fortunate Is The Child Brought Up On Music

Melody and Rhythm May Be Inculcated in the Very Young and Developed in School Years

Music is a kind of speech, and the most perfect one for the expression of feeling. It should, then, begin where the speech begins, with the mother singing as well as speaking to her child.

Finally, let us remember that the fundamentals of music and instrumental playing should be well established before the boys and girls go to advanced schools.

Learning An Instrument
After the musical experiences of the lower grades the child's next desire is to play some instrument.

Up to this time the child's training has been entirely non-technical, as it should be. It is a critical time in his experience when he comes into contact with the technical side of music—learning the names and uses of signs and symbols; in other words, learning to read and play.

Successful Rehabilitation of Transport Services

The fight for supremacy between the roads and the railways has been taken up in New South Wales in a very determined spirit by the Government, which has the burden of maintaining one of the chief assets of the State.

The tramways and many buses in Sydney and Newcastle, the two largest cities of the State, are also the property of the Government, and a strong policy of modernization has been carried out.

Meeting Potato Growers
Current reports say that the Provincial Government is seriously thinking of guaranteeing payment of the obligations of the Potato Growers' Association and their Trading Account as well.

This is such a serious proposition that all Tax Payers of the Province should consider it.

We, the undersigned, therefore call a public meeting for this purpose at Souris on Tuesday evening, September 17th, at eight o'clock. The meeting will be addressed by Senator Hughes and others. Government representatives of the first District of King's County are cordially invited to attend.

Labour Men Seek Work

The labor men of the town of Summerside with Mr. Jerry Bernard as their spokesman strongly petitioned the Mayor, and councillors for work at an adjourned meeting of the Council last night.

There are reported to be about 300 laboring men seeking work. The Council adjourned to Thursday when they hoped to find a solution to the difficulty.

Councillor Carruthers moved a motion to petition the government for permission to close and change a part of Beaver Street according to a plan that would be submitted. Councillor MacKay seconded the motion, which was carried.

Torch Singer's Death Suicide
(A. P. By Guardian's Special Wire) WEST CHESTER, Pa., Sept. 13—The death of Evelyn Hoey, Broadway torch singer, was branded "suicide" late today as young Henry H. Rogers, in whose country home she died, was released on bond.

Dr. H. B. P. Davis, who performed an autopsy on the dead actress, said "every evidence pointed toward" suicide, but the official report of the autopsy was not immediately made public.

The district attorney pointed out the men faced no charge when they were released on bond.

While authorities said their investigation tended to support a theory the actress may have killed herself after a violent quarrel with the intemperate Rogers, parents and close friends of Miss Hoey refused to believe she committed suicide.

Left-Handedness
Inquiries at the National Institute of Industrial Psychology seem to confirm the statement of Sir Frederick Mauter, made in a report on the London school child, that left handedness is a disadvantage and is often actually a bar to employment.

According to the Institute, which carries out a vast amount of research in industrial problems, some employers refuse to employ a left-handed clerk as "they consider his handwriting is less tidy" than that of a right-handed man.

"Where packing machines are designed for right-handed operators," an official of the Institute states, "the left-handed worker is at a disadvantage. This is also noticeable in the case of a conveyor where everyone else is using the right hand. Otherwise, however left-handedness is no disadvantage."

Australian Leads In Movie Theatres
Australia now has, proportionately, more movie theatres than any other country in the world.

There are 1286 for a population of 6,650,000 or one for every 5,267 people, according to figures just issued. America has one for every 10,400, and the United Kingdom 9,333.

Melbourne has one movie seat for every 6.7 persons, and the largest picture theater south of the equator. It is a palatial building seating 3,274 people. Now Melbourne is planning to build six more.—Australian Press Bureau.

Concentration is Different
"Open the window, Jane," means just that. Jane should not be answered when she says, "What did you say?" when she has heard perfectly well. "See who is at the door, Billy," or "Where is the paper?" should "register" at once. Why repeat it?

It is true that children are often deeply engrossed with something and actually do not hear. True, too, that we rudely interrupt others deep in a story or a game by some unimportant remark that could wait. But this is different from the vacuum of inexcusable "rigor mortis" of the brain.

Nothing is more restless to the eavesdropper than to hear people converse with ears a-ja and wits on the trigger. Children need to be taught both. Whether dumb or not, the mentally-lazy child will certainly earn the name if he does not "snan oot" of it, and act and look intelligent when spoken to. Molly might actually be a smart girl. But if so she is keeping it a good secret.

The Hospital Collection

Contributions of the generous hearted public toward the Prince Edward Island Hospital have always been necessary since the first little hospital out on Longworth Avenue opened its doors more than fifty years ago. It is probable that contributions from the generous hearted public always will be necessary. This year the annual collection is to be taken up the week of October, and it is hoped that every friend of the hospital, perhaps the most outstanding of all Prince Edward Island's charitable institutions, will give something, while those who enjoy good health and are blessed with a share of the good things of this world are asked to be especially generous at this time.

Requests to hospitals from Government, Provincial and Municipal, in Prince Edward Island, always have been on a much smaller per capita scale than in any of the other Provinces, in a number of which special extra taxes are levied solely for this purpose.

The new Prince Edward Island Hospital is carrying on a wonderful work in this community. In its annual collection it asks for your tangible support.

Inattention To Spoken Word A Bad Habit
Molly, seventeen, goes to the telephone. Someone announces himself and Molly gets it like a shot. "Oh, Bill, I thought it was you. What are you doing?"

"Just sitting here. Talking to you." "Huh?" says Molly. Bill repeats it. Then he says, "What are you doing?"

"Huh?" says Molly again. Bill says "What are you doing?" Molly says, "Oh nothing. Just reading."

Bill asks Molly what she was reading. She says "Huh" again, and Bill tries hard to remember that Molly's curls are golden and her eyes very blue. After a few dozen "huh's" he is vaguely irritated although he is only subconsciously aware of her stupid habit.

She hears perfectly well the first time but won't rouse her attention to the sticking point and lets the idea soak in by absorption. It is the latest and most slowly trick in the world, this habit of putting all the work on another. If Bill had said he had been trying to find out the difference between ichthyology and entomology, Molly would have been justifiably in asking for a repetition, but it is the case with the sticky-minded that nothing at all soaks in at the first telling; easy or difficult it's all the same.

Children pick up this habit so easily that a mother, or even a teacher may let it go unnoticed. They patiently repeat every sentence they utter. This mental lethargy is almost as blameworthy as the other.

At the moment we have in mind two families in whose homes no right-minded person could stay completely sane for twenty-four hours. Each member of the family has to repeat whatever he says twice. Each one asks to be told over again. A day is a succession of echoes that tell a tale of frustration if not actual stupidity.
