CHAPTER 57.
THE MEETING

It seemed to Basil Harcourt, as he paced the drawingroom, torn between hope and despair, that years passed before he heard a light step in the hall.

Then the silk curtains at the doorway parted, and Cynthia stood before him—the same, slim, lovely Cynthia he remembered, the Cynthia whose image was engraved on his heart.

She was holding his card in one hand, and her puzzled, questioning gaze sought his.

"Major Harcourt? You wished to see me? You are a friend of my father's, perhaps? Unfortunately he is not at home this afternoon."

He took a step toward her, his arms lifted beseechingly.

"Cynthia!" he said.

She drew back startled.

"Don't you know me?" he pleaded despairingly. "Or—or are you so angry, so bitter?"

Her eyes turned to the doorway as if she wished to assure herself of a ready escape from a madman.

"Know you?" she asked politely. "Have we met before?"

Harcourt was desperate.

"Cynthia, I've come to explain, to tell you why I acted like a cad. I was mad, frantic. I didn't know what I was doing—"

Cynthia was staring at him. She seemed to take no heed of his wild words. Her pretty brows were drawn together in a puzzled frown.

"Forgive me, I've a wretched memory lately. I—yes, I believe I have seen you somewhere. You remind me of some one—"

"Of some one!" he echoed bitterly. "Of the man you were going to marry?"

She stared at him for a moment. Then she smiled.

"There's a frightful mistake somewhere. I have never been engaged to marry any one."

He came closer to her, and she didn't draw back. She looked at him quite fearlessly. He saw the candor in her lovely eyes and realized that there was no guile there. She was not pretending, through pique or injured pride, not to know him.

"May I stay for a little while and talk to you?" he asked quietly.

"By all means." She motioned him to a chair and took one opposite him. "It's a trifle early for tea, but would you care for some?"

"Thanks, no. I want just to talk of the enunciation of a fundamental law, universally and perpetually applicable. They inhere in the ter all that's happened, pretend to be formal. I love you, Cynthia, with all my heart and soul."

"You love me?" she asked, her eyes widening with astonishment.

"Don't think me mad," he begged. "I must sound to you as though I were an escaped lunatic, but, if you will listen, if you'll promise that every word I tell you is the truth, you will understand. Tell me, you honestly don't remember that you were engaged to me."

Golden Text: Seek good and not evil, that ye may live: and so Jehovah the God of Hosts will be with you as ye say. Amos V 14.

AMOS DENOUNCES SIN: (The Story)

Amos' period has been aptly called the Indian Summer of Israel. Its very glory was token of approach of winter. The ancient limits and splendor had been regained under Jeroboam II. But the wealth was that of conquest not of industry and with it came that which seems inseparable from conquest, namely, temptation to oppression and luxury. The faces of the poor were ground, religion was esteemed a burden. Idleness and extravagance were the rule of the upper classes. Amos gives a graphic description of a self-indulgent people. Violence was enthroned, judgment postponed. The dilettanti reclined upon their ivory couches, they idly stretched themselves there. They used for ignoble purposes the musical instruments which David had invented for worship. Those strangled instruments were for God's honor. A quaint commentator says Israel used them also for his god which was his belly. They used only the finest oil in their boudoirs. They could not see, much less be grieved, by the moral havoc they were making. "They were not grieved for the afflictions of Joseph."

Now the fierce, ascetic, unafraid prophet squares himself to pronounce the doom of a recreant nation. Their goodly banquet already spread shall be snatched away. Israel is first in luxury. He shall retain his primacy. He shall still be first but it will be first in captivity. "The Lord God hath sworn by himself, I abhor the excellency of Jacob and hate his palaces, therefore will I deliver up the city with all that is within."

These fateful words were uttered two thousand seven hundred years ago. They are not the edicts of an angry deity. They are the enunciation of a fundamental law, universally and perpetually applicable. They inhere in the ter all that's happened, pretend to be formal. I love you, Cynthia, with all my heart and soul."

- KILL INCURABLE MEN URGES CONAN DOYLE
- LONDON, Oct. 27.—All England had been plunged into discussion of "the right to kill" as the result of the acquittal Sunday of a young widower, Albert Davis, of a charge of murder for drowning his three-year-old daughter to save her further suffering from an incurable disease.
- Most of the newspapers applauded the acquittal, but say the case is exceptional and that there should be no loosening of the laws protecting human life.
- On the other hand the Daily Express quotes Conan Doyle, famous as a person with no hope of life, father and himself a physician, as would be a great improvement."

Oven-kist - The Only Arrowroot Biscuit with the Hole In the Centre

The modern arrowroot with the vital life-giving elements of Phosphorus, Lime and Malt.

OVEN-KIST, the Modern Arrowroot, contains Malt, Phosphorus and Lime—Phosphorus improves the blood; Lime strengthens the bones and helps to prevent Rickets, the dread ravager of childhood; Malt aids digestion. Together these three exclusive ingredients give Oven-kist Arrowroots a most delectable and tempting flavour.

No other arrowroot biscuit is so healthful a food for children and invalids. None has these exclusive ingredients—only Oven-kist has the hole in the centre.

Sold in one-pound packages and in bulk.

UNDER THE STUDY LAMP

Amos' prophecy has been described as a thunder storm, rolling over the surrounding kingdoms, Syria, Basil Harcourt? We were to be married, and on the eve of our wedding, I left you," he flushed under his bronze, "to return to England?"

She flung back her pretty head and laughed.

"Oh, do forgive me," she begged. "It's too—too ridiculous for words! Then, seeing the agony in his eyes, she sobered instantly, adding: "Perhaps I had better explain that I was very ill last summer. I had an accident, and my memory left me. Is it possible that you figured in the part of my existence that I can't remember?"

Harcourt was inordinately relieved.

"You had an accident? When?"

"Sometime in May. I was driving my car. I believe some one ran into me. I don't know. That is what they told me."

Harcourt began to breathe more normally. His despair gave place to faint hope.

"Then let me help to reconstruct for you that part of your life that you can't remember," he said gently.

"Very well," she said resignedly, with a little skeptical smile.

He began with their first meeting in London, during the fashionable season. He reminded her how he had wooed her; how she finally had become engaged to him, and how he had come to America to marry her in May.

Here he faltered. It was no easy task to tell her the rest of the story in which he had played so sorry a part. Moreover, she was regarding him with the polite interest of one who listens to an amusing story that concerns some one quite remote from one's own circle. There was no flicker of returning memory in her lovely eyes.

"Cynthia, how can I go on?" he groaned. "How can I tell you what a cad I was?"

"Oh, I'm sure you could never have been that," she murmured politely.

He hesitated, reddened, and took the plunge.

"I left you on the eve of our wedding. When the guests were invited, the hour for the ceremony set, I left you, without explanation and went back to England."

Her comment was a peal of laughter, serene, whole-hearted, totally incredulous.

(To Be Continued)

"Don't you know me?" he pleaded despairingly.

WOMAN COULD HARDLY WALK

Mrs. Horn Tells how Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Restored Her Health

Hamilton, Ont.—"I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and would not be without it now. I had a female trouble so badly I could hardly walk and I was all run-down and could hardly get around to do my household work. I would be in bed three or four days at a time. I was told by a friend to try your Vegetable Compound, and I did, and by the time I took two bottles I was beginning to get around again. I took ten bottles in all, and now I am all right again and doing my own work. I have six grown-ups to look for, so I have plenty to do. I also used Lydia E. Pinkham's Sanative Wash, and I think it is good. But I owe my health to the Vegetable Compound, and I think it more of it was used by women would be better off. I would not be without it if it cost much more."

—Mrs. Nellie Jameson, 805 East Canon Street, Hamilton, Ontario.

Do you feel broken down, nervous and weak sometimes? Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is excellent to take at such times. It always helps, and if taken regularly and persistently, will relieve this condition.

If Hair is Turning Gray, use Sage Tea

That beautiful, even shade of dark, glossy hair can only be had by brewing a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Your hair is your charm. It makes or mars the face. When it fades, turns gray or streaked, just an application or two of Sage and Sulphur enhances its appearance a hundredfold.

Don't bother to prepare the mixture; you can get this famous old recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients for only 75 cents, all ready for use. It is called Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound. This can always be depended upon to bring back the natural color and lustre of your hair.

Everybody uses "Wyeth's" Sage and Sulphur Compound now because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through the hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair has disappeared, and after another application it becomes beautifully dark and appears glossy and rustrous.
