An Adventure In Years

By CAROLYN BEECHER

Chapter IX.

Is there anything more bitter in life than for a woman, especially a woman in love with life to feel that her beauty—the glossiness of her hair, the brightness of her eyes, her slender gracefulness—is slipping from her?

How Sonia longed for her youth again. Not for herself, but so that she might dedicate it to love—the love that she now knew she had missed, perhaps forever, when she married Beverly Strong, the artist.

And with this longing keen in her heart Sonia had to smile, keep engagements, pretend. How cleverly nature tortured her. She felt at times as though the Creator had singled her out, had a personal grudge against her. Had many married women such things to go through as had she? Had they looked for happiness with the man they had married only to find it turned ashes?

"Is anything more lonely than the human soul?" she asked herself. Then added: "A woman's soul? A starved soul?"

That night the people from the hotel came in and they played bridge until late. Ned was not at her table and Sonia occasionally stole a look at his handsome boyish face as he studied his cards, a frown on his smooth forehead. She wanted to call out to him never to mind, that it made no difference that he played so indifferent a game. He looked so anxious, at times ashamed like a little boy who tries to show off before grown people and fails to interest them.

"I wish I played a better game," he said pettishly after they had done. The tone he used was that of a spoiled child. Sonia wanted to take him in her arms and mother him. Just for a moment she was the mother-woman. The thought filled her with a sort of delirious joy. Could she put away the other feeling that had come over her so insidiously and be just mother? Eight years—scarcely enough, yet at times seemingly too many.

She longed to comfort him, that pouting boy who probably never thought of her save as Beverly's wife,—a middle aged woman, she supposed, she seemed to him.

In the morning immediately after breakfast Beverly set out.

"I'll ask them for tomorrow night," he remarked as he went out the door. "If they can't come, then the day after."

"Very well," Sonia replied. "Shall you be back for luncheon?"

"I don't know—why?"

"Oh—nothing. I only thought perhaps we might sail today. There is a breeze."

"You forgot you are having your portrait painted. You will spend the morning with Ned.

"Yes—but this afternoon. Can't we sail then?" She felt an intense desire to be on the water, to watch the wind in the sails, to lie on her back on the little white deck and gaze her fill at the changing sky.

"Yes, I don't see anything to prevent it. Good luck with the portrait, Ned," he said as Ned returned to the room. "I shall be interested to see what you do this morning."

"I hope I shall get along faster than I did the other day," Ned returned. "If I don't I shall be all winter, as well as all summer, finishing the job."

Before he had finished speaking Strong had gone.

Sonia led the way to the porch.

"We shall have time enough for the portrait," she said as he spoke of getting to work. "Are you pleased that we will have her—a young girl to dinner?"

"No—why should I be? I don't know her," he said bluntly. Then: "Of course, if you want her it's all right."

"But it is Beverly who wants them—not I."

"It would be a good joke then to let him entertain her. I hope she won't want to play bridge. I had all I could stand last night."

"Wait until you see her, Ned, before you make up your mind about her. She may be very sweet—very charming."

"Oh, I don't know! She's awfully young for a girl. I never liked flappers much—always fuss me. I don't know how to take them."

"Perhaps you are too serious with them. Young girls like Miss Delong, aren't apt to be serious."

"Oh, let's forget all abut her," he returned impatiently. "We'll see what she's like soon enough. Come on and let me get to work. Mr Strong will think I am an idler if I don't accomplish something today."

Sonia hurried to change into her Russian costume. For two hours she posed for Ned. Neither talked much, each content in the knowledge of the other's presence. When Strong returned with the news that the Delongs would be their guests the next day for dinner he scarcely concealed his surprise at the amount of work Ned had accomplished.

And yet—Sonia thought he did not act as pleased as his warning to work would have led them to expect.

There was always this feeling of mystery—somthing back of everything he said and did. She felt at times that it would drive her mad

The Old Gardener Says

That the way to get the biggest crop of peas is to make a trench as wide as the hoe blade and about four inches deep, although, if you can make it an inch deeper and put in a layer of old manure, so much the better. Scatter the peas the full width of the furrow instead of in a single row. It requires more time and labor to plant in this way, but you will feel well repaid when you come to harvest the crop.

Hints for the Motorists

BY ALBERT L. CLOUGH

THE SCORED CYLINDER (CONTINUED)

AMONG THE LUBRICATION DEFICIENCES that sometimes result in scored cylinders are the following: A low oil supply, clogged strainer, an air leak on the suction side of the pump, water frozen in the pump, a broken or leaky delivery pipe or anything else that interrupts the supply of jibricant. The clogging of any of the pipes or passages through which oil is distributed to a bearing or to a trough, for splash lubrication, or the breakage of leaking of such pipe. The use of oil, which becomes solid when very cold and which fails to flow or to and not until the pistons perhaps have struck in their bores. The use of oil so greatly thinned with condensed fuel that its lubricating qualities are practically nil and not sufficient to keep down piston friction, when an engine is given hard sustained work. Too scanty oiling of the uppper part of the pistons, produced by the installation of piston rings, which wipe down the oil to an excessive degree. Failure of the oil to remain viscous enough to lubricate, due to its extreme thinning by heat, this being one circulation—the abnormal heat expansion of the pistons conspiring with the thinned oil to cause scoring and siezing. A new engine or one with new pistons or rings, should be operated considerately for sometime to avoid the scoring danger. Under ordinary circumstances, the best safeguard against this evil is careful attention to every detail connected with engine lubrication.

INSTANT BEAUTY FOR EVERYONE SAYS THAT FAMOUS ACTRESS VIOLA DANA WHO TELLS WHAT TO DO Just Make This Simple Test

NEW YORK—"I am often asked how I keep my complexion so fresh looking," says Miss Viola Dana, the Screen Classic Star, in a recent interview. "It's a simple process for anyone to have a smooth, velvety, rosy-white complexion and an wrinkled skin if they will devote just a little time in caring for it. Cleanliness is absolutely necessary in developing a clear healthy skin. For this purpose use a good cleansing cream. Liska Cold Cream I have found to be the best. Follow this by bathing the face with warm water, then rinse with cold water, dry thoroughly and apply Derwillo, a simple toilet preparation which can be obtained at any up-to-date drug or department store." This marvelous preparation instantly beautifies the complexion and its continued use makes the results permanent. You can form no idea what a wonderful effect it has upon the skin until you try it. Here is the best way to test it. Put it on one side of your face, then look in your mirror and note the surprising change. You will need no further argument to convince you that there's nothing like it for beautifying purposes. The instant results it gives is the reason for its popularity with actresses and those who realize the value of a rosy white smooth clean complexion. It takes but little of your time compared to the splendid results it gives, and the fact that it is used and endorsed by leading beauty specialists speaks volumes for its efficacy. Derwillo is especially recommended for dark, sallow skin, tan, shiny nose, blackheads, coarse pores, freckles and numerous other facial blemishes. Many use it in preference as it is mere life-like in appearance. Perspiration does not effect it, therefore it stays on better, does not rub off on clothing and its use cannot be detected. It is guaranteed absolutely harmless on the most delicate skin and will not stimulate or produce a growth of hair. Now that short sleeves are in vogue you will want beautiful hands and arms; there is nothing like Derwillo for this purpose. Over five hundred thousand girls and women are using it and they are just as enthusiastic over it as Miss Dana. It is rapidly becoming a regular fad and if you wish to have a complexion which will attract favorable comment everywhere, just give Derwillo a trial and you are sure to be delighted with it. Do not accept substitutes then you will not be disappointed, as there is nothing just as good, "better," or "just like it."

NOTE—Here is a fair, honest proposition by the druggists and department stores of this city. Get a bottle of Derwillo from any toilet counter, give it a trial for a few days and if you don't like it bring it back and get your money. Could anything be fairer? It is sold in this city by all up-to-date druggists and department stores, including J. G. Jamieson, G. E. Hughes.
