

IN THIS CORNER

Still without a victory but showing definite signs of a new lease on life in their performance against the Collegians last Tuesday night, Navy hockey team tackle No. 2 A.N.S. squad in tonight's City Hockey League encounter at the Forum.

The "Tars" will be minus the services of Bert Steele for tonight's game but the two Whitlock boys, Jackson and "Pud" Roach, will again be on deck to carry the offensive strength for the team from H.M.C.S. Queen Charlotte. With several practice sessions under their belts and rapidly regaining their real form the four boys mentioned above should have plenty to say before the night's game is completed.

Each one of them carries potential goals in his stick in every dash they make towards their opponents' net and the fact that they were held pretty well in check in their appearance against the Collegians was not due to any lack of effort on their part but rather to the brilliant performance staged by the combined St. Dunstons and Prince of Wales College teams.

Despite their low standing at present the Navy team made a lot of new supporters in their losing performance the last time they appeared. Tonight, pitted against the co-leaders of the league, they are fully expected to put up even a greater battle and again it should be a close-knit affair throughout all three periods.

No changes, with the exception of Steele, have been announced in the lineups of the competing teams. Airmen will probably use the same lineup that dropped their close 4-3 decision to Summerside last Thursday night, while the "Tars" will rely on the strong offensive strength contained in their three sets of forwards.

Wally Stanowski, who was reported accepted by the army, has actually been rejected, so he can play for Leaside without any further waiting around for a service call.

When Stanowski came back he reported he had found the game so changed, he thought it would take him a long while to get accustomed to the style of play for Leaside. Wally had changed a lot, too.

He had been playing out at Winnipeg, but in lesser company. That was fun stuff and he didn't take too seriously the fact that when he stepped back into the N.H.L. he found the pace a lot faster than he expected.

Stanowski at that has taken a little time to come to hand, but he has been a real attraction. He can light up a game with those rushes so reminiscent of Joe Simpson at his starting when he was an Edmonton Eskimo.

"Red" Dutton has taken a cue from Mark Twain's remarks about the weather and plans to do something about the extreme generosity of scores in the matter of hockey assists.

Whether or not Dutton's latest instructions will achieve the desired results remains to be seen, but at least one or two definite rules laid down in his instructions are curbing effect on the country's scorers and referees who, as a rule, take their pointers from the N.H.L.

Dutton has placed his finger on the most abused feature of the system in refusing points to those who do not aid in the scoring of goals after the puck has been out of a defending player's hands. The assists have been laded on on such occasions so frequently as to make them almost ridiculous.

The opening is still presented to players to earn a assist in the execution of a brand new play, but the former popular practice of crediting points to assisting players after the play has obviously changed hands is ruled out. And good riddance, too, if it's observed.

Dutton's edict won't correct all the abuses. But it singles out one of the most objectionable features and it is at constructive approach towards a problem long in need of some attention. The only trouble is that to now everyone talked about it, but no one did anything about it.

The argument among Canadians' Maurice Richard's rating as compared to that of Howie Morenz has just about come to an end. It's been a rather one-sided exchange as most hockey observers predicted it would be.

Back around a month ago it was suggested that though Richard was a capable and highly spectacular performer in these days it was a good bet "that a poll of hockey men wouldn't give him in the same class as Morenz."

That has proved just about true though we thought "Dink" Carroll of the Montreal Gazette summed it up most effectively with a remark to the effect that in the side of sanity, let's wait for another 10 years.

Improved Navy Squad To Battle Local Air Force Team In Tonight's Game

Navy tackle No. 2 A.N.S. squad from Charlottetown Airport in tonight's City Hockey League encounter which will be staged at the Forum and one of the best games of the season is on tap for local hockey goers.

Barely beaten by the Collegians in their last start, Navy despite the fact that they have yet failed to get into the win column this year, are confident that tonight they will be able to take the measure of the co-leaders of the league.

They have been practising steadily ever since their last start; new comers to the team, including Whitlock boys, Jackson and "Pud" Roach have shown definite signs of returning to their best form in recent practice sessions, and together with the other boys comprising the team are expected to put enough power to the "Tars" lineup to give the Airmen a battle of it all the way.

Following is how the Navy will lineup (with numbers) for tonight's game which will get underway at 7:30 sharp: Goal, O'Shea; defence, McAdam (2), A. C. McLeod (7), W. S. McLeod (11); forwards, Jackson (3), B. Whitlock (6), Junop (8), Roach (13), T. Whitlock (14), Lecky (5), Richard (10), McCluskey (12), Thompson (19).

At the time of writing the Air Force lineup was not available but it was expected that the same players would be in action that performed against the Summerside team.

140 SCHOOLS—(Continued from Page 1) all crippled children in the Province. To all these 140 schools and to the crippled children, the course are sent free of charge.

On the other hand, the Department charges $1.00 a month for a course of study going to a pupil where there is no teacher, but in no case is the charge of lessons sent to a school district without a teacher to exceed the supplement money voted. This means that children in a district without a teacher would pay $20. a month or $200. for the school term of ten months. But if the supplement voted in that district were only $5. a month, all the total cost would amount to $150.

The school districts of Afton Road, Bellevue, Georgetown, Royalty, Glenora, Clear Springs, Corvallis, Rock Barre, and Valley are now receiving the courses regularly.

Grade 1 to 3 lessons are being corrected by Miss Panny Leigh of Prince Street School; grades 4 and 5 by Miss Margaret Butler of Queen's Square, and grades 6 and 7 by Sister Dorothy of Rochford Square School.

Press Search For Overdue Draftees OTTAWA, Jan. 22 (CP) — Military and civilian police, already asking uniformed army personnel in trains, stations, hotels and streets to produce leave passes and papers, may start a check of civilians as a follow-up to the 1,694 3,600 absentee home defence troops gathered momentum.

A Proves Corps official said it was "quite likely" a check of civilian draft papers might be made in an effort to find the men overdue from Christmas and New Years.

In the case of uniformed men they are being stopped and asked to explain their presence. This is easily done by the production of leave passes, or pay books. In the case of civilians they would be asked to produce papers explaining their draft status.

Headquarters were preparing to issue a statement, warning absentees if they don't report back to barracks immediately they will be classified as deserters, court martialled and made liable to penal servitude or other punishment. It also was indicated the statement would contain a warning that persons harboring absentees would be liable to prosecution.

There was still no word as to how successful military and civilian police had been during the weekend as the roundup of overdue draftees was pressed.

A new development during the weekend was a report of a high incidence of active service absentees in British Columbia. There was no indication whether this was general throughout Canada and Western coal become available in the same area.

The Union counsel and company manager spent the afternoon sitting of the board discussing what could be regarded as privileges enjoyed by employees. Mr. Cohen's questioning was based on a brief entitled "Privileges and Welfare Plans Enjoyed by Employees of the Dominion Coal Co."

In his brief Mr. McCall said the U.C. had on occasion failed to live up to the responsibilities and obligations of collective bargaining. He said the check-off—deduction of Union dues from payrolls—was of debatable value and it had not resulted in building up a Union membership which accepted responsibilities nor has it tended to provide the Union with the best leadership.

Under examination by J.J. Frailey, commission counsel, he said he was opposed to a closed shop — which would require the mine to employ only Union members — as being contrary to democratic principles.

In reply to questions by Mr. Cohen, Mr. McCall placed under the heading of privileges such subjects contained in his brief as collective agreements, the check-off, low rental on company-owned houses, low cost for coal purchased by employees, provision of free rental and coal to families of men on military service, assistance in purchasing Victory bonds, free transportation to and from work, vocational training, opportunity for promotion, security of employment, negotiating and production committees and vacations with pay.

Collective bargaining and the check-off were provided for by law but were introduced by the company sometime prior to the introduction of such legislation. Elaborating on his brief Mr. McCall said he believed in collective bargaining and considered it of equal value to the company and the men.

He agreed with a suggestion of Mr. Cohen that the principle of check-off dated back to the period of "company towns" when miners rented their houses and purchased whether the general service absences were recent converts from draftee ranks.

The absentees will be classified as deserters after they have been away from barracks more than 21 days.

A defence headquarters spokesman has said that no date has been set yet when all would come up for such a classification.
