ISLANDER IS WINNER

(By Guardian's Special Wire)

DUBLIN, Irish Free State, Oct. 31.—Prizes of approximately $2,000 were the largest drawn by Canadians this year in the Irish Free State Hospitals Sweepstakes on the Cambridgeshire handicap.

No Canadians held tickets on Wychwood Abbot, the winner; or on Commander III or Highlander, which placed second and third. As a result they were out of the big money in the sweep awards.

But there were 31 in the Dominion lucky enough to draw horses entered in the famous handicap, run at Newmarket, England. Regardless of whether the horses they drew started in the race or not, they were assured of approximately $2,000.

Owing to the fact legislation which would permit confiscation of sweepstakes winnings had been passed in Canada, the sweep authorities did not reveal the names of Canadians drawing tickets. They were identified only by their nomsde-plume and addresses.

Maritimers who drew tickets on horses were Fiat Voluntas Tuas, Prince Edward Island; (Young Native) and Lucky Star, Dartmouth, N. S., (Akela). On some Canadian tickets even addresses were not supplied.

The new speedboat, which is the Mounties' latest weapon against smugglers, is 24 feet long and is intended for a crew of two or three. It is built of a new aluminum alloy which contributes to the high speeds of which it is capable. Authorities refused to tell how fast the new green-gray launch is.

PRIME MINISTER

liament meets, unless circumstances dictate otherwise.

The Prime Minister's letter to Mr. Stevens was sent to the former minister this afternoon, following a brief session of council, and a short time later copies were made available to the press.

In the meantime rumors circulate swiftly of impending cabinet changes but no announcements in this respect are anticipated until the return of Hon. R. J. Manion, Minister of Railways and Canals. It is considered that Dr. Manion will play a prominent part in any ministerial shuffle that may develop. He has been absent from Ottawa several weeks recuperating from an illness and played no part in the deliberations resulting in Mr. Stevens' withdrawal. He is expected home tomorrow or next day.

OTTAWA, Oct. 31—Prime Minister R. B. Bennett late this afternoon sent the following letter to Hon. H. H. Stevens, late Minister of Trade and Commerce, replying to that of Mr. Stevens made public yesterday respecting the latter's resignation from the government:

"Dear sir:

"I received your letter of yesterday in due course.

"As you resigned as Minister of Trade and Commerce and chairman of the Royal Commission rather than resume, as proposed, the amicable discussion with your then colleagues, which, by consent, was adjourned on Thursday last, when all the relevant papers to which you refer were available to you, no useful purpose will be served by anticipating parliamentary discussion and continuing the correspondence with respect to events of which I think it proper to state that your indicated memory is at variance with the recollection of my colleagues and myself.

Yours truly,

(Sgd.) "R. B. BENNETT."

Crows, P. L. Durell Murray, 2nd. Jack Beer.

equipped with telegraph or radio. Experienced navigators shook their heads. They pointed to pieces of merchandise which floated into Seven Islands' Bay, marked with addresses of Gulf points—Natashquan, Havre, St. Pierre—as concrete evidence the vessel had gone down and where the sturdy little motorship failed a row boat would have difficulty in living.

Night of Horror

Captain Nicholas of the St. Pierre vessel struggled exhausted to safety with three other members of his crew at Pigou, an isolated point on Anticosti Island. He was there two days before word of his safety leaked over crippled communications to Clarke City. The brief message did not give the name of his vessel. It merely indicated the horrors of the night, that a raft had been lashed together but that two men, names unknown, had lost their lives.

The storm which overtook the small vessels was the same about which the Washington Meteorological Office sent out a warning Sunday afternoon. The liner Letitia was badly battered in the same storm while three men lost their lives when a little craft sank near Quebec Harbor.

AGED MINISTER WELL AFTER EXPERIENCE

Rev. Henry A. Harley Found In Lonely Cabin After Two Days In Woods.

(C. P. By Guardian's Special Wire)

WINDSOR, N. S., Oct. 31—Though weak from exposure and hunger, an 83-year-old clergyman was still "feeling fine" tonight after surviving two chill fall days and nights in the woods with only three sandwiches and a few slices of bread for subsistence.

One night Rev. Henry A. Harley had spent in sleep beneath a spruce tree; the second in a lonely cabin almost barren of food. But he was as little affected by the ordeal as a man 50 years his junior when he hailed two moose hunters today and ended a search that had been on for 24 hours.

Anxiety Felt

It began early yesterday morning, when anxiety deepened for the safety of the retired Anglican clergyman after he had failed to arrive home from a partridge-hunting trip. And fears grew last night when a long search of the woods by more than 200 persons failed to reveal the missing minister.

But Mr. Harley laughed it all off this evening as he rested in his home here. "I'm feeling fine now," he said, "and about the only disability I've suffered is swollen feet. You know, I tramped for two days over all kinds of country—over rocks, through swamps and slash. That's rather hard on the feet."

Slept Under Tree

Perhaps the worst part of the experience was the first night—Monday night. "I slept under a Christmas tree," Mr. Harley recalled with a smile. "I didn't have such a bad night, but I'm afraid I did more chattering than sleeping." He was dressed only in the light clothing in which he had set out that morning for a day's hunting.

Next morning, Mr. Harley said, he headed for the cabin. "I was not really lost," he said, "because I knew where I was heading." Once in a while he "wasted a cartridge," in a signal shot, but he got no answer. He had no chance to try out his marksmanship on game, for he saw none, though he was in fine game country and hoped to pick up food this way.

Without Food

His lunch—three chicken sandwiches and a few slices of bread and butter—had been eaten by Monday afternoon. For the rest of that day and all through Monday night and Tuesday he went without food. At the cabin, Tuesday evening, he found some stale bread. Washed down with water from a nearby lake, it formed his first food in more than 24 hours.

After a "good sleep" in the cabin, he woke up this morning a few hours before Louis Hogan and Fred Swinnimer came out to the cabin, owned by Hogan, to dress a moose they had killed near there yesterday. The aged clergyman, moving around at the rear of the cabin, hailed them, and soon they were sharing a breakfast of moosemeat, with coffee. "It was the best cup of coffee I ever tasted," Mr. Harley said.

On his long trip, he declared, only one thing had troubled him. "I was greatly worried about Mrs. Harley," he said. His first thought, on meeting the hunters four miles in the woods was to ask one to rush to the nearest telephone with word of safety for his wife.

HOG MARKET PRICES IMPROVE

EDMONTON, Oct. 30. — (C.P.) — Higher prices and increased marketings will bring $20,000,000 to hog farmers in Alberta this year, more than double the amount realized last year. Livestock officials estimate marketings will be 20 percent higher this year.

COMMISSION

from New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island fishermen will start tomorrow.

Lack of competition among buyers was blamed by Bailey and Wilcox for low fish prices. The Maritime Fish Corporation controlled practically all agencies in the Westport district, Bailey said, while Wilcox said in Cape Breton Island, small dealers evidently had a combine.

The collective system was urged by Norman Sollows for the lobster industry in May and June when the Boston market was glutted and prices dropped. Lobsters could be impounded during the season and placed on the market in a steady stream, not breaking the price.

OTTAWA, Oct. 31—(C.P.)—Prices for cod this summer were 90 cents per cwt. and 50 cents for pollock, Norman Sollows of Port Maitland, N. S., told the mass buying commission here today. Mr. Sollows said he represented about 1,500 fishermen in Yarmouth and Shelburne Counties.

Four companies operated fish buying businesses in Yarmouth, but his own market for "boneless cod" was Boston.

Lobster fishing was the chief industry on that part of the west shore and had been good until recent years. He favored some form of marketing control so that lobsters caught in-season might be kept to supply the off-season demand. Boston was again the chief market, but due to lack of regulation there was usually a seasonal glut which depressed prices.

"Impounding"

There was no prohibition against "impounding" lobsters after the close of the fishing season, but the glut usually was due to lack of regulation and lack of co-ordination between the east and western shores of Nova Scotia.

Fishing conditions were bad, said Mr. Sollows. In the past three months there had been a slight improvement in fish prices. There was no buying combine in Yarmouth.

Mr. Sollows figured the net income of the fishermen in the past few years was $400.

"Is that sufficient?" he was asked.

"No, it is not."

"What do you think a fisherman should have?"

"I think he should have $1,000 if he's to bring up and educate his family," replied Mr. Sollows.

At present the west shore fishbuyers sold their "boneless dry fish" at Boston at a lower price than the Gloucester fishermen. Mr. Sollows thought the Nova Scotians should get the same price. Witness feared that continuation of this practice, which was due to price cutting competition among the shippers, might provoke hostile measures on the part of the United States. To remedy this Mr Sollows thought there should be some sort of Government control to regulate the supply of this product to the market.

Mr. Sollows said he had nothing against the National Fish Company but, along with all fishermen, he was opposed to the beam trawlers it operated. The three trawlers took a living away from 300 fishermen. In addition the beam trawler destroyed spawn and young fish.

"I think it is time we ended the beam trawlers," Mr. Sollows said, adding he feared they would kill the fishing off the Maritime coast as the fisheries of France were killed.

"As a practical question," asked Chairman Kennedy, "If we stopped the three Canadian trawlers and other nations allowed hundreds to continue over those fishing beds, would it make much difference?"

"I think it would. We want them to go."

Dr. M. M. Coady, director of the extension service of St. Francis Xavier University, Antigonish, N. S., was the next witness. He had organized the Maritime Fishermen's Federation in 1929 and the extension work of his university included education among the fishermen.

"With a little increase in the price of fish it would give these fishermen a good calling," said Dr. Coady. The fish was there, good fishermen were there and what was required was a slight price increase to the fishermen.

Dr. Coady said in 1917 and 1918 when fish were selling at three and 3 1-2 cents per pound fishermen received good seasonal returns. In 1916, about 200 fishing boats went out of Canso, N. S., alone.

Dr. Coady replied to the commission if an average price of three cents per pound for fishermen were established, it would bring back prosperity to these men.

4,280 Pieces In This Quilt

WINNIPEG, Man., Oct. 31—Four thousand two hundred and eighty diamond shaped pieces hand sewn by Mrs. T. Ramsay into a pastel-colored quilt won the quilt contest at the St. Vital fair. "Trip Around the World" Mrs. Ramsay calls the pattern of the prize quilt, which measures 90 by 63 inches. Yellow, apricot, pink, green, blue, orchid and old rose, in solid and printer patterns, alternate in rows around the quilt. It is one of three completed since last February.

Mrs. Ramsay buys the material for the quilt at one time and chooses good quality quilting material. "You can't put just any material into a fine quilt," she said. Mrs. Ramsay has made quilts since she was a child, but it is only in the last two years that she began to specialize in fine quilts. She has 22 grandchildren each of whom receives a handknitted present each Christmas. "That keeps me quite busy" says Mrs. Ramsay, "but I love to sew and knit. I think making quilts is a fine pastime."

Meeting Of The Catholic Social Guild Held

The Catholic Social Guild of the Holy Redeemer parish held its opening meeting Monday night in the hall. The chairman, Miss Anne Walsh pointed out that at a recent meeting of the executives some ideas and suggestions were discussed relative to proposed work of the Guild for the coming year. These ideas were then discussed and the following adopted:

1. That a committee be appointed to take charge of handicraft class which will meet once a week the articles made to be donated to needy families.

2. That a committee be appointed to arrange for the holding of a bridge, the proceeds to be used to buy books for the library.

3. That a standing committee be appointed to assist in outlining the work of the Guild for the coming year.

Father Fleming addressed the meeting, complimented them on their faithful attendance and urged them to branch out so as to embrace a larger field of activities.

A very interesting part of the program was a demonstration of handicraft by the Reverend Sisters of St. Martha. The beautiful work done on the loom elicited admiration from all, while the crocheted and knitted articles inspired the girls to attempt something on their own behalf in the weekly classes. The Reverend Sisters kindly offered to attend this handicraft class and give the girls every assistance possible.

A violin solo by Miss Carolyn Kenny and a vocal solo by Miss Yvonne Arsenault both accompanied by Miss Florence Mallett added to the enjoyment of the program.

The following committees were appointed:

Bridge committee:

F. Mallett, Elizabeth Connors, E. Curley, L. Larkin and Eleanor Connors.

Handicraft committee—M. McInnis, A. Morgan, L. Duffy, A. Dunn, M. Duffy.

At the conclusion of the meeting lunch was served.

Three New Yorkers In $150,000

(A. P. By Guardian's Special Wire)

NEW YORK, Oct. 31—Wychwood Abbott, racing to victory in the Cambridgeshire handicap today, won $150,000 each for three New Yorkers, but the trio stayed at their jobs.

In all, holders of Irish Sweepstake tickets in the New York metropolitan area won $950,000.

Peter Dolan, aged dock carpenter employed by the city, dropped his tools for a few minutes when he learned his horse had won. But he finished his day's work and will work again tomorrow.

The carpenter signed his ticket with the cognomen "King Macnessor"—an ancient ruler of Ireland.

"Never quit" was the signature Simon Koss used.

Nineteen years old, a candy maker, Koss has been buying tickets for several years. He refused the offer of Sidney Freeman, Jr., representative of the British syndicate, held on to his ticket and tonight was planning to use his $150,000 in giving his father, Peter Koss, a long-earned rest.

Mrs. Amelia Lenz, notified that her husband was one of the $150,000 winners, cried out in her happiness:

"Now my husband can retire. And all the stock and bond salesmen had better stay away."

Lenz works in a chemical plant. His wife waited until he came home to tell him of his fortune.

"We'll give our two daughters a good education, maybe do a little travelling and then be thrifty with the rest," Mrs. Lenz said.
