Ch'town Army Cadet Corps

Off to an enthusiastic start, the Charlottetown Army Cadet Corps recruited 127 live wire members at the Armoures last Friday evening. Under the supervision of Capt. Wellington Dixon, every prospective member of the corps was measured for a smart new uniform and the battalion was established. The enthusiasm could establish the success of a new corps its success in the future would be a foregone conclusion. Many of the boys wished to start work then and there and much impressive drilling and saluting was in evidence.

Capt. Dixon with his two assistant instructors Messrs Fred Driscoll and Hazen Wisnorski had a first-hand experience in controlling the high spirits of the future cadets. They were most ably assisted in their work by Lieut. W.N. Davey of No. 6 District Signals and Sgt. Maj. Liam. Major J.F. Tierney was present representing the Army area committee, as well as Capt. L.W. Goodwin who is chairman of the Charlottetown Army Cadet Corps committee. After each cadet was signed on strength he was expertly measured for a new uniform. This work was done by Sgt. Hugh McKeay of the C.A. (B.T.C.) Beach Grove, with the assistance of Messrs Wm. MacKenzie of S.A. McDonald, Ltd., Ned Rand of Tip Top Tailors Ltd., and George McQuaid of Moore & McLeod.

Each of these gentlemen willingly gave his time and knowledge and the result of their endeavours will be seen in the smart appearance of the Army Cadets, when their new uniforms arrive.

The formation of the Army Cadet Corps in Charlottetown, completes the plan formed by the three services, to give every boy an opportunity to fit himself for later service in either Navy, Army, or Air Force. Every boy who is physically fit and of the proper age should now be in a cadet corps. Whether or not he is ever called upon for active service, the training he will receive will be of incalculable benefit in later life. All parents should see to it that boys in their family enroll in a cadet corps. Let the boys make their own choice but make sure that they join a corps who do not will soon be left out of training periods for the army cadets have been established as at 8:30 p.m. each Wednesday and Friday afternoon. The corps will be established as a battalion with two companies. No. 1 company will include senior cadets of from 16 to 18 years. No. 2 company will be for boys of 12 to 15 years and N.C.O.'s will be chosen from among the most skillful members of the unit. Beside the permanent officer-instructors the training staff of the 17th armoured (R) Regiment will assist in instructing the latter Regiment. His deputy sponsored the establishment of the army cadet corps, and its progress will be of great personal interest to all members.

The navy-army-air force. Each needs the other. Every boy should be training with one of the Charlottetown Cadet Corps.

Sees Housing As Post-War Problem

REGIONS CLUB, Que., Oct. 6 (CP)—Housing is one of the post-war problems which no democratic nation can afford to neglect. Ray Atherton, United States Minister to Canada, said in a speech prepared for delivery here tonight at a meeting of the Quebec union of municipalities.

Because the Minister was called suddenly to Washington for an important state department conference, his speech was read in the French language by Edward Lawton, second secretary of the United States legation in Ottawa.

The four freedoms become mockeries in areas of housing, because the four freedoms must be built upon the rock foundation of a happy family life, said Mr. Atherton.

"No family can achieve its true function when it is miserably housed."

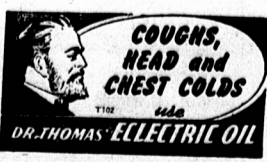

Mr. Atherton said he believes the final solution of housing problems seemed to lie in the successful cooperation between federal, state or provincial and municipal administrations. Before the war the United States had embarked on a large scale housing program to provide dwellings at reasonable rentals for low-income families.

"One thing we did learn, was that no matter what type of financing was employed, the local housing program succeeded or failed depending upon the quality of municipal administration."

"Both planning and designing of the homes and management of the projects must always remain a local concern and no amount of federal remote control can either remedy local defects or improve local judgment."

Canada and the United States might be able to pick each other in meeting this problem by exchanging their experiences and studies, he suggested.

"For it is in mutual aid achieved through mutual understanding that this continent excels."

Says Canadians At Salerno Were Extremely Good

By FRANK LOWE (Canadian Press Staff Writer)

NEW YORK, Oct. 6 (CP)—First definite word from an Allied source that Canadian soldiers took part in the fight for the Salerno beach-head during the invasion of Italy came today when commander Anthony Kimmins of the Royal Navy said "some Canadian commando-type soldiers" formed part of the Allied 5th army that stormed into that Bay.

"I heard," he added, "that they played an important part in the landing operations." He also told a conference that "a great many" Royal Canadian Navy officers and ratings manned landing craft taking troops to the beaches. However, the commander, who not only took part in the Salerno engagement but also in every other landing during the last year in the Mediterranean theatre, was not able to say in what strength Canadian troops were represented. But, speaking from his experience, he described the few he saw personally as "extremely good."

German propaganda sources broadcast early in the September operation that Dominion tanks and troops were a part of the 5th army. London reports, too, indicated that the Canadian 1st army tank brigade may possibly have landed at Salerno.

However, to date British, Canadian and American governments have refrained from making any announcement regarding the makeup of the Allied units in action in Italy with the 5th and British 8th armies. It is generally believed that the Canadian 1st division is with the 8th army as it was in Sicily.

The general commander, tall and dark and wearing the insignia of the Royal Navy Fleet air arm on his sleeve, explained that he hadn't seen many of the Canadian troops at Salerno himself, saying "uniforms were a little too busy to visit much at the time and I saw only a few of them."

But, as a naval officer, he took more notice of the Royal Canadian navy men, describing them as "good chaps."

He said that Allied commanders considered Canadian sailors excellent for this landing craft type of work. "Maybe it is because they get so much experience in small craft in Canada, but whatever the reason, we are always glad to have them along."

Cmdr. Kimmins went on to say that co-operation—he said he preferred to use the word "unity"—between the forces of the Allied countries, fighting in Italy was "amazing."

McNaughton Honored by Engineers

TORONTO, Oct. 1 (CP)—L.A. Gen. A.G.L. McNaughton, commander of Canada's Army Overseas, and William T. Batt, vice-chairman of the United States War Production Board, were honored here tonight at the joint meeting of the American Society of Engineers and the Engineering Institute of Canada.

Gen. McNaughton was made an honorary member of the American Society and Mr. Batt of the Canadian group.

C.J. McKenzie, acting president of the National Research Council of Ottawa, and Dean of Engineering at the University of Saskatchewan, Saskatchewan, accepted the honor for Gen. McNaughton, Robert M. Gates, recently-elected president of the American Engineers, accepted for Mr. Batt.

Gen. McNaughton graduated in electrical engineering from McGill University, Montreal, in 1910, and received his Master of Science degree in 1912. He also holds honorary degrees from McGill, Bishop's University, Queen's University and the University of Birmingham.

In 1935 he became president of the National Research Council through which organization he directed in co-operation with Col. W.A. Steele. At the outbreak of the Second Great War, he returned to active duty as general officer commanding First Division, Canadian Active Service Force, and became leader of the Canadian Army Overseas after its formation.

Mr. Batt, past president of the American Engineers, and President of S.K.F. Industries, has served the American Government as deputy commissioner, Industrial Materials Division, Advisory Commission to the Council of National Defense; deputy director of production division, office of production management; a member of the Harrington Mission in Moscow in 1941; director of materials, office of production management, and vice-chairman of the War Production Board.

The WAR WORKER

"Our part in building Victory," say the tens of thousands of men and women in war work, "is to make sure there'll be no shortage of weapons. We are making sure in two ways. We are working full shifts full time—and we are helping to provide the money by turning as much of our earnings as we can into Victory Bonds."

The RAILWAYMAN

"Moving food to market, raw material to factories, and finished products to win Victory is taxing our time and equipment to the limit," says the railroader. "But you can count on us—both for vital transport and for our dollars to buy Victory Bonds."

The MERCHANT SEAMAN

"We take a lot of pride in beating the U-boats and delivering vital war cargoes safely," says the merchant navy seaman. "Besides, we have a personal interest in the goods we carry because they are paid for with our money invested in Victory Bonds."

The FARMER

"My job," says the farmer, "is to produce more food than ever before. In spite of help shortage we're sending enormous quantities of food overseas as well as keeping home pantries supplied. I'm working harder than ever—and saving more than ever to buy Victory Bonds."

The HOUSEWIFE

"Mine is a war job, too," says the Canadian homemaker. "It is up to me to keep my family well fed and healthy—and to save as much as I can toward another Victory Bond."

VICTORY ISN'T JUST HAPPENING. It is being built . . . built by countless builders.

Victory is being built not alone by the armed services. Victory is being built by the farmer who grows food for our fighters and our workers . . .

. . . by the men and women in war industry . . .

. . . by the railwaymen and truckers who provide the means of transport . . .

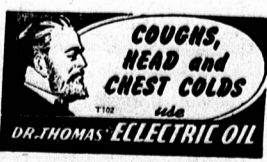

. . . by the braveness of daring merchant seamen in delivering the goods . . .

. . . by the whole-souled willingness of men and women everywhere to make Victory the primary job.

Yes, Victory won't just happen. It will come because all of us have willed it—worked for it—saved for it. It will come sooner as each one of us redoubles our effort. And that means getting ready to buy more Victory Bonds—more than you bought last time—more than you think you can afford.

WANTED PETER'S PIPES

LONDON (CP)—The famous Peter Pan statue in Kensington Gardens has been damaged by someone who tried unsuccessfully to wrench the pipe from Peter's left hand. There are replicas of the statue in many parts of the world.
