Shall We Make It Harder to Marry? Approve Five-Day Wait for License

Dorothy Dix

In Five Days' Notice of Intention to Marry We are Required Before a Marriage License is Granted There Would Be Fewer Hasty Marriages and Many a Wrecked Home and Broken Heart Would Be Saved

The tendency among our lawmakers seems to be to make marriage harder and divorce easier. They are tightening up on the tie that binds at one end, and loosening it up at the other.

In Wyoming, for instance, a bill has been recently passed requiring a five days' notice of intention to marry before what our colored friends call "a glory ticket" may be issued.

Also it will give the romantic, who have thought themselves madly in love and that they had found the only HE and SHE under some glamorous moon and with the saxophone sobbing in the distance, an opportunity to cool off and analyze their emotions and take a good long look at the party of the other part before they close the contract and sign on the dotted line.

Likewise, five days would give even the most optimistic a chance to think it over, and do a little figuring on how they were to eat, and how those who had never been able to support themselves were going to be able to provide for a family.

Also it would prevent those tragically idiotic marriages that take place on a dare, or for a joke, or because it seemed romantic to elope. For the very essence of an adventure consists in quick action, and a joke peters out pretty thin in five days, and papa and mamma would effectually stop the runaways if given notice of their fatal intentions.

It is because marriage is so cheap and so easy that it is a standing temptation to the reckless and foolhardy that makes them rush into it on the impulse of the moment without giving it as much serious thought as they would in buying a flivver.

It is because we put marriage licenses on the bargain counter and because it is the least expensive form of indoor sport, and one in which we allow babes and sucklings to participate, and because getting married is the one thing for which you have to have neither money nor brains nor previous training nor experience that is the real reason for nine-tenths of the rags and disastrous marriages.

For there is no truer saying than "Marry in haste and repent at leisure." The marriage that is contracted without thought and with no more reason for than a passing fancy is bound to end in disaster, and if there is any way of stopping these grab-bag weddings it will be a benefaction to humanity.

And that is why it will be a good thing to make it harder to get married. Perhaps if it cost more time and money to get a marriage license people would value them more highly and not scrap them so often.

EVERY CHILD Hates Castor Oil

Such a rotten taste—and how it sticks! The modern laxative is far better, and, of course, is easy to take. What could be simpler than to swallow one or two tiny sugar-coated pills just before you retire?

MISS TOLSTOY ANXIOUS TO REACH CANADA

(Canadian Press)

KAMSACK, Sask., May 23.—Miss Tolstoy, daughter of Count Leo Tolstoy, famous Russian novelist, if successful in gaining entry into Canada will take charge of the Christian Community of Universal Brotherhood libraries at Veregin, Sask., and Brilliant, B. C., according to W. W. Kazakoff, general manager of the Doukobor sect here recently.

Japanese despatches had stated that Miss Tolstoy, now domiciled in Tokyo pending negotiations with Canadian immigration authorities for entry into the Dominion, would edit the newspaper of the Doukobors.

Community Doukobors have no recognized organ, Mr. Kazakoff explained, and have never contemplated

"THESE HARD TIMES"

"The hard times and scarcity of money makes it more important than ever to economize. One way I save on clothes is by renewing the color of faded or out-of-style dresses, coats, stockings, and underwear. For dyeing, or tinting, I always use Diamond Dyes. They are the most economical ones by far because they never fail to produce results that make you proud. Why, things look better than new when redyed with Diamond Dyes. They never spot, streak, or run. They go on smoothly and evenly, when in the hands of even a ten year old child. Another thing, Diamond Dyes never take the life out of cloth or leave it limp as some dyes do. They deserve to be called 'the world's finest dye'!"

Paris Styles

PARIS, May 26. (U. P.)—Whalebone, rhinoceros tucks, lodo-sulphate and quinine—are just a few of the latest contributions to fashion. In other words, chemistry has come out of laboratory with a tray full of new designs and new colors that it has discovered under the microscope.

Mme. Albin Gulliot, a talented artist, and her collaborator, M. Ragot, of the Geological Laboratory of the Paris Faculty of Science, have been able to give decorators and couturiers an infinite variety of hitherto unthought of designs they have found in the prism of their microscopes. Crystallized caffeine, they say, produces a marvelous medley of colors all the way from jet black to pearl grays, and the most extraordinary shades of blue, green, red and yellow. Crystals of platinumocyanine of barium produce amazing Japanese pastels and in designs totally different from any seen in a printed fabric, as printed fabrics are this year.

This relatively simple discovery is going to all but completely revolutionize the fashion industry and already it has given it an impetus that is beginning to be felt now in Paris months before the next collection of clothes will be shown. You can be pretty sure that just as "Variety" has been one of the keystones of the spring and summer mode, "Novelty" will be the note whose echo will be heard the longest when the Winter wares are displayed on the Paris fashion counter.

Don't be surprised to find yourself in a gorgeous evening coat lined with Rhinoceros horn, or covering your favorite pillows and making window drapes out of lodo-sulphate of quinine that looks like a lovely flowered chintz. New fibers and weaves are also being discovered to be ready with an open mind to read what you will soon wear.

For The Cook

CHICKEN PIE 4 pounds chicken. 1 carrot. 1 stalk celery. 1-3 cup potatoes, cut in small pieces. 4 whole peppers. 4 tablespoons butter. 2 tablespoons flour. 4 cups stock. 1 cup cream. 1 teaspoon salt. Plain pastry.

Clean and disjoint the chicken and cook it slowly in water to cover with the carrot, celery and potato slices. When the chicken and vegetables are tender, put into a buttered baking dish or a deep pie plate. Melt the butter, rub in the flour until it is smooth, add the chicken stock, salt and whole peppers. Then add the cream and let this cook until it has begun to thicken. Pour the gravy over the chicken and cover with the pie dough. Prick the dough with a fork to allow the steam to escape and bake for fifteen to twenty minutes.

A Morning Smile

ONE ERROR

It happened in one of the big business offices. An executive rushed out into the corridor and, addressing a boy there, commanded "Go over and get me a turkey sandwich and a pot of coffee right away!" Ten minutes later he came out and found the boy still there, empty handed.

"Get out! You're through with this concern. We want no loafers of your type around here. Get your money and get out!"

"Who, me?" asked the boy. "Yes, you!" barked the executive. "I don't even work here," replied the boy. "I'm the boy from Glutzbaum & Glutzbaum."

KLONDIKERS WASH GOLD

(Canadian Press)

EDMONTON, Alta., May 23.—Spurred on by tales of old-times of how gold was recovered from the gravel bars in the river near Edmonton in days gone by, numbers of the city's unemployed have "gone Klondyke" and are washing for gold inside the city limits.

Few of the gold-seekers are experienced, but under the tutelage of former Klondikers they are trying their hands with a grizzle and gold pans. So far they have a small quantity of gold to show for their few days' work and they are hopeful of striking richer gravel.

TRAINED NURSES NEEDED IN AFRICA

(Canadian Press)

MONTREAL, May 26.—While the nurse suffers unemployment in her home country, there is plenty of work for her to do out in the mission field, Miss Jessie McGhie, trained nurse who has been working in Angola Portuguese West Africa, said when interviewed recently at the home of Mrs. D. Gurd of this city. Before going to work in the tropics, however, Miss McGhie advises the nurse to take a course in tropical diseases at the School of Tropical Medicine in England. Diseases in Africa were so different from those occurring in northern climates that the nurse without specific knowledge would have some difficulty, she stated.

Although no figures were available Miss McGhie thought that the infant mortality rate was as high as 50 per cent, but much was being done to reduce this by teaching mothers to care for their babies. Nearly all first babies died in Angola she said.

Miss McGhie brought some fascinating curios with her from Angola from Mrs. Gurd's daughter, Mrs. S. R. Collins, who had been living at the same station. Among the collection were thumb organs, each a heavy piece of board with metal keys, which are made to vibrate by pulling the thumb over the edge. The scale is a plaintive minor one and some very intricate and exciting music has been composed for it. There were other musical instruments, some flutes and a violin with three strings to be played with a bow shaped like one used in archery. The sounding box was long and rectangular and ornamented with conventional carving. A very striking cane had a carved head, showing marked Egyptian influence, for a handle. There were also some attractive baskets and a huge calabash, hollowed out and engraved with ceremonial figures. It would hold about two quarts and Miss McGhie said that it would be filled with beer and brought to the circle of men by a woman. The woman would taste it to show that it was not poisoned and then would be passed round the circle.
