SELECTING THE BREEDING MALE

(Experimental Farms Note)

It may seem a little early in the season to talk of selecting next spring's breeders, but this is of such importance that it must be borne in mind early in the season, if best results are to be secured.

Early in the growing season the poultryman should have marked "for the block" all those chickens that had shown the character for low feathering or any constitutional weakness.

During the latter part of the summer and early fall it will have been noticed that there were some cockerels that had developed sexually very early.

These cockerels almost invariably finish up as "ponies." In other words, although they look large early in the season, they do not come out in their growth, and they do not make birds of normal size at maturity.

Cockerels of that kind should not be retained as breeders, as their offspring will have a tendency to mature in the same manner.

They will lay early, before they reach proper body growth, and consequently lay small eggs throughout life.

To summarize, the breeding male should be the son of a high laying, large egg hen. He should be of good size for his breed, and above all should be vigorous.

While vigor may be denoted in every part of the bird, in the broad back, deep body, the well set legs and general action, and in the nervous force the paramount requirement in an egg breeding male, is indicated by the bright, prominent, piercing eye set in a clean cut face.

This is the kind of male that will give results.

SHELDIA, Nov. 9.—Another sanatorium for the treatment of tuberculosis is a necessity in this province, asserted Premier Baxter at a largely attended government smoke talk in Tipperary hall here last night.

The premier said that the situation with regard to thousands of young people, many of whom lived along the north shore, was serious. Means at the disposal of parents prevented the children from receiving proper treatment such as would stamp out the development and above all should be vigorous.

The government was considering this serious situation, and it was hoped another sanatorium would be constructed in the near future.

Despite the fact that President Hoover has been heralded as a savior of St. Lawrence waterway development, some suspicion is voiced this morning that a Hoover administration, rather than making joint relationships with the U. S. better, might complicate them.
