Undoubtedly the attractions this year at the races, which comprised variety—shows of a high class and free from the vulgarity and objections usually attached to this kind of entertainment, had a good deal to do with the interest of the race meetings. The mule Maud enjoyed probably the most loudly expressed measure of popularity, and local broncho busters who tried to climb her slippery sides and stay upon her ridge pole at five dollars a minute afforded all the fun that could be desired. There were some plucky attempts made to earn the reward but to all the aspirants at five per minute Maud proved too smooth a proposition. Maud is an express mule furnished with prompt delivery, and her heels survived without injury contact with the skull of a colored gentleman who essayed to win the five dollars.

The devious ways of the drink business were rather remarkably illustrated the other evening in the Police Station. In the reception room of this institution were the officers on duty seated around the fire cheerful, sober, sleek and industrious as usual. They had been engaged that day in a search for liquor and had visited two establishments where it was thought ardent beverages were being sold to enable visitors to the Exhibition to make exhibitions of themselves. In both cases they found nothing to reward their search. On the other hand there were also under the roof of the police station confined in that section which is known as "durance vile" a few enterprising gentlemen who had been engaged that same day in the search for the cup that inebriates. As these men went unarmed with a search warrant, and attired in plain clothes they evidently had succeeded where the policemen had failed. I cost the policemen nothing to make the search but yesterday in the Police Court the Magistrate made the others "cough up" for doing the same thing and getting drunk in the process. Ed. Duffy was fined $2 or the option of ten days in jail; Brad King $10 or thirty days, Dan McNeil $10 or thirty days, F. Dalton $2 or ten days, and H. McCarron $5 or twenty days.
