

Housework often causes over-strain

"PAIN WAS LIKE A KNIFE STAB"

Once helpless from lame back, now does all her own work

Made practically helpless by a strained back, an active young housewife tried everything she could think of, and at last found quick and complete relief from a simple, old-fashioned remedy.

"The pain in my back was like a knife stab," she writes, "and it left me helpless. Sloan's Liniment was given to me to ease the pain, and I am now able to do all my own work."

Sloan's gets results because it doesn't just deaden the pain. It stirs up the body's own forces to get rid of the cause.

Just pat it on lightly without rubbing, and at once you feel a warm, comforting glow, as the healing blood is sent coursing through the sick tissues—still, contracted muscles relax, the pain stops, and soon normal conditions are restored.

SICK ABED EIGHT MONTHS

After Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Could Do All Her Work and Gained in Weight

Melfort, Saskatchewan. "I had inward troubles, headaches and severe pains in my back and sides. I was so sick generally that I could not sit up and I was in bed most of the time for eight months. An aunt came to visit and help me as I was unable to attend to my baby and could not do my work. She told me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and after taking two bottles I could get up and dress myself. I also took Lydia E. Pinkham's Blood Medicine. When I first took the medicine I only weighed seventy-eight pounds. Now I weigh twice as much. If I get out of sorts or weary and can't sleep, I always take another bottle of the Vegetable Compound. I find it wonderfully good for female troubles, and have recommended it to my neighbors. I will be only too glad to answer any letters I receive asking about it."—Mrs. WILLIAM RITCHIE, Box 486, Melfort, Saskatchewan.

DAUGHTERS OF MIDAS

BY ANNE AUSTIN

CHAPTER XXVII Anger at Clay's curt refusal of her request that he return to the home of his father, and thus make necessary the strange contest by which T. Q. would choose a daughter and an heiress to his fortune, carried Billy Wells on a high tide of furious resolve, until it landed her in her own bedroom.

Viola, the maid who had been assigned by Mrs. Meadows to look after the girls' clothes and to help them with their dressing when needed, told her that Nyda and Winnie had not yet returned. Dinner was to be at seven. It was now a few minutes after six.

"Violet or rose bath salts, Miss Billy?" the colored maid's coaxing voice called from the bathroom. She liked the girls, particularly Winnie, and Billy, because they did not "rize" her as did Nyda.

"Both," Billy answered absently. The maid's giggle jerked her to her feet. She padded to the big four poster bed and frowningly inspected the dress which Viola had laid out for her.

"Bath ready, Miss Billy. I heard Miss Nyda bawlin' the doah to her room." Viola dragged past the bed on slow, reluctant feet. "Reckon I better go see kin I help aer dress. She powerful hard to please, Miss Billy."

"Tell her and Miss Shelton I want to see them both here in my room before they go down to dinner, Viola. Tell them it's extremely important."

She was relaxing in the seductive warmth of her rose-scented bath when Viola knocked softly upon the door.

"Miss Nyda won't lemme in," the colored girl called in a frightened voice. "She cryin', Miss Billy. Miss Winnie ain't come in yet."

"All right, Viola, I'll go to Miss Lomax's room as soon as I'm out of my bath. Thank you. Oh, say, you might brush the toes of my shoes with a little of that silver shoe polish, if you don't mind."

When she had bathed she thrust her bare feet into a new pair of blue satin mules, stepped into a gaudy envelope chemise of white chiffon, slivered a bit with sensuous delight at the feel of the exquisite material on her skin, then wrapped a robe about, and scurried to Nyda's room. She knocked. There was no answer, but she heard the muffled sound of weeping.

"It's me—Billy," she called softly through the keyhole. "Please let me in, Nyda. There's something terribly important I must tell you—immediately."

There was the sound of feet thudding from bed to floor, and in a moment a stormy-eyed, disheveled-haired Nyda opened the door singly, holding it defensively.

"I've got to come in, Nyda. I'm awfully sorry if you don't want me. Are you in trouble? Can't I help you, honey?"

"Oh, well," Nyda allowed the little figure to slip in under her arm. "I suppose I've got to dress for dinner. There's nothing the matter. I'm just blue."

Nyda ripped open the snaps of her one-piece Chanel-red velvet dress and drew it over her head, tossing it petulantly upon the chaise longue. But Billy did not notice where the dress landed. Her eyes were fixed in horror on a great purple bruise on Nyda's shoulder, a bruise that had evidently been freshly and violently placed there.

Nyda glanced at the spot that held Billy's eye in fascinated horror. She clapped a trembling hand upon it, while her eyes glared at Billy with animal-like fury.

"Spying on me! Can't you mind your own business! I—I hurt myself. Got thrown against the door of a car when it almost turned 5453-5-11-31."

over. Quit staring at me, you little fool!"

"What in the world are you two quarreling about?" Winnie's gay voice caroled from the door, which the two girls had not heard her open.

"I'm glad you're here, Winnie," Billy answered quietly, though her blue eyes were blazing with scorn of Nyda. "I've got something to tell you both. It may make you feel better, Nyda," she added, her voice softening, for she knew that the black-eyed beauty was merely taking out her rage at Eddie Banning upon the first innocent bystander.

But why had Eddie Banning struck Nyda?

"I've got loads to tell you, too," Winnie laughed exultantly. "Oh, girls, I've learned to skate! Dal says I'm a natural-born stunt skater! Honestly! He's a marvelous teacher, simply divine! I could have skated forever, with his arms about me."

Billy had an insane desire to choke that pretty, soft white neck. "I'm afraid we haven't time for a rhapsody on Dal Romaine," she cut in sharply. "I've been trying to make you and Nyda understand

THE SHERIFF SQUARES HIMSELF

A TERRIBLE THING

A terrible THING happened at last Saturday's masquerade—Left my CUTIE for a second to Howdo to a GUY, who gives me a knock-down to his own particular BUNDLE of CHARM. Then away he goes to telephone, and SHE says, "Let's dance."

I'm not denying it WAS a bad BREAK on my part. The frigid air at our table when I got back would have discouraged an ESKIMO.

I squared it Sunday afternoon though with a box of GANONG'S—it broke the ice. Yessir, she's still my BABY.
