Just two years to-day our loved one. Your trials and sufferings were o'er. When the Angels of Death came and took by stealth. The one whom we all adored.

Preaches on Dancing

says that where one man or woman dances himself or herself into health, there are a hundred who dance themselves into nervous breakdowns, tuberculosis and their graves. Especially is this true of the modern dance; and don't imagine that the modern dance is on the decline.

When one girl dances herself into beauty of form and step, there are hundreds of girls who would be infinitely more beautiful if they had a little less grace in their heels and a little more in their hearts. The modern tendency, in the dance, is to give more and more attention to the motion of the feet, and if evolution means anything, it means that the next generation of modern dancers will have mighty large feet and mighty small heads.

As a physical exercise, it is doubtful if dancing, as we know it, has any real value.

When you are told that the dance is a social necessity, the question arises:-What kind of a social necessity? The home is a social institution, but you can run it to great advantage without the dance. The Church is a social organization, but you don't need a dancing pavilion in connection with it. Thousands and tens of thousands of our best Canadians have met in social gatherings, have chosen their mates and raised their families, and they did not know one dance from another. If I were a girl, I would rather remain an old maid until the day of my death than marry into a certain brand of dancing society.

Better be a wall flower than marry the last rose of summer. Now look at the dance from a moral point of view. Dr. Fa'mag's investigations into the dance, of a Protestant minister in modern times. He personally went down into the worst slums of America. He conducted one of the most critical and one of the wisest examinations among the lost and ruined women of his country, and he found that seventy-five percent of the fallen women of the United States were led to their sad and tragic lives through the dance. Oh! you say:-They were weaklings; they were not of our class. Let us grant that. But remember, they were your fallen sisters.

It was my sad privilege to visit, not so long ago, the under world of San Francisco. I did not go for entertainment, I did not go to poke fun, but I went as a serious man to find out for myself how men and women slipped down into that Hell on earth. The first thing I found was the dance. It was jazz. It was the real article. These girls jazzed themselves in and jazzed themselves out of that inferno. They had to dance. The dance-the modern dance-was their passport in. They could not dance they were kicked out. Of course they were poor, weak mortals. But they were my sisters and yours.

And let me say, right here, that any man, who says he can go through a modern dance and come out clean in thought and feeling, is either a stiffened piece of human mightiest war machine ever sent against a feeble loving people, and help to conserve that freedom which you Canadians helped them to win!

I shall never forget the thrill that passed through Scotland when the news was flashed abroad that the Canadians had embarked for South Africa. It was on the eve of the blackest day for Scotland that she ever knew before. The Highland Brigade had been practically annihilated. General Wauchope an elder of the Scottish Church and every one of his subordinate officers had fallen. The command had devolved on Sergeant McMillan who gave that never-to-be-forgotten command "Men of the 42nd Prepare to meet your God; Forward, Charge!"

Padre Robertson the Chaplain of the Highland Brigade (resembling in so many ways your own chaplain, my distinguished predecessor in this pulpit) had sent home the news that he had recovered the body of General Wauchope, but his faithful horse and had given it decent burial. When that message came from Padre Robertson the martial spirit of Scotland was moved as it never was before.

From every valley and shore and land volunteers were offering their services, services which were not at that time required. Because of the patriotism of the Canadians from beyond the seas. Take notice then how many valuable lives in Scotland were saved by your patriotic services, because, although we are a peace-loving people when the blast of war blows in our ears we summon up the action of the tiger. It was the same spirit which sent you sons of P. E. I. to South Africa, and the people of the home land rejoiced and were exceedingly glad that for the first time in history the gallant sons of Empire beyond the seas had heard the call. I cannot stop to trace your march from Capetown to the battle ground. Everybody is familiar with the operations which resulted in your being joined as the 19th Brigade under General Smith-Dorrien and attached to the 5th Division. By this time General Buller as Commander in Chief of the British forces and his wonderful strategy is for ever written in the pages of British history. It was however at Paardeberg that the Canadians reached the climax of their glorious fighting. We are proud in Scotland of Hector Macdonald the only son of Scotland who ever rose from the rank of a private soldier to that of a Field Marshal of the British Army. He knew the task assigned to him at Paardeberg. We know how well he performed his task by avenging Majuba Hill, although himself by the insidious and passionate appeal of a dance, that wormed its way into heart and body and soul, left the life as empty as a drum.

What shall be my attitude as a Christian towards the dance that suggests a reckless, dizzy wriggling whirl of passion? Listen to the Book "If meat make my flesh to offend I will eat no flesh while the world standeth. Let us not stand by precept and example against the whirl, lust and sin of Sodom's latest but not the last.

Call up, if you will, the young backsliders of the Church and put the question of their fallen condition squarely before them. Why have they forsaken the place of prayer and power? Why have they lost the taste for things spiritual and eternal. Why have they forsaken the House of God for the place of jazz and the cackle of fools? Not a small percentage will tell you that they were lured from their high privileges and duties by the insidious and passionate appeal of a dance, that wormed its way into heart and body and soul, left the life as empty as a drum.

Today is the anniversary of Majuba. This morning Cronje and his army surrendered unconditionally after a night attack by the Canadians and the Gordon Highlanders. The Canadians carried themselves magnificently under a scorching fire and we are all proud of them. We are ready in need of officers and men in the Highland Brigade we have left fit for work, 24 officers and about 100 men out of 87 officers and over 3,000 men. Such is war. I am sending you a box of the Queen's chocolate which you can eat and think of me. You should keep the box as a memento.

With these words of our illustrious Scottish hero ringing in our ears, let us also remember what King Edward said about the Canadians. Speaking in London he said: "No part of my great army put in the field acquitted themselves in a better manner than the lads from the land of the Maple Leaf." And so veterans we congratulate you today and thank God that you are still preserved in health and strength to look back to the glories of those distant days. As the years roll on coming generations will better understand what we ministers in theological language called "vicarious suffering." That is to say how our generation must suffer in order that succeeding ones may be blessed. We have often learned that lesson in the course of our long and glorious history. We have often been called to unsheathe the sword for the cause of truth and righteousness, but veterans, let no one think that we are strangers to the peace of God which passes all understanding. We have never contended the sword of Christ with the peace of Christ.

And so men today in this old house of God sacred with so many memories, in presence of these flags of Empire each with a history of its own I commend you to the reconciling power of your Saviour and your God, assuring you that that which power in your hearts you march to the cannon's mouth. May God continue his blessing to you by lengthening your days and giving you much happiness and peace.

Amen After the service the Veterans paraded to the South African monument and deposited a wreath in honor of their fallen comrades. Notwithstanding the exceedingly cold day a goodly number gathered round the monument. Mr. Muir offered a short dedicatory prayer and addressed a few inspiring words to the veterans as in their hearts they recalled "Our dead but accepted heroes who still rule our spirits from their urns."

The service closed with the singing of the Last Post by Sgt. Charles Hine and the Benediction by Mr. Muir.

HOME MAKES OR BREAKS PILLAR OF SOCIETY

Island Jesuit Priest Declares Parents who Shirk Duty a Social Menace.

REGINA, Feb. 21.-Every true citizen is made in the home, the foundation of the state and church the pillars on which the fabric of society stands," was the statement of Rev. Father G. F. Bradley, rector of Campion college, addressing Regina Kiwanians assembled at weekly banquet today noon, as he pleaded for greater interest by parents in their home life.

"Every serious thinking man today realizes that something is wrong," he stated, saying "the crime increase during the past few years has been appalling, more seriously so when statistics prove that three-quarters of the crimes are today committed by youths between the ages of 16 and 24.

"In these days of movies, autos and sensational magazines, the tendency is to lower the ideal formerly embodied in the home." He deplored the situation, stating that if the home falls in its purpose in life, then the "pillars" are weakened and the nation ruined.

"What is regrettable," said the cleric, "is that we have to make way for the innovations to the modern world at the expense of the home." He instanced these innovations as tendencies to overcrowded living by building concentrated flats, organizing night shifts at offices and works, and many other factors contributing to lead away from home life as exemplified by the old ballad: "Home Sweet Home."

Up to The Parent

Answering the Socratic question, "What can we do about it?" Father Bradley declared that the solution lay in co-operation, the organization of forces to make the world realize that it is in the grip of a malady that must be cured. Parents were the generals who must marshal the forces against this disease in social life.

"The head of the family today shirks his duty too easily," declared Father Bradley. He stated that fathers today leave the task of the child's upbringing to the mother, while they themselves look on the home as "a wayside inn at which they may rest for a while and then pass on to seek dissipation and pleasure outside."

The Reverend Father said that if the nation is to have law-abiding citizens, then obedience in home is of the gravest necessity. "If the child will not obey the parents, whose blood runs in his veins, then will it be restrained by those for whom it cared not?" he asked. He declared that the modern parent turned his child out too soon to labor for itself, tending to create a spirit of disobedience.

He pleaded for a firm hand in the home. One tempered with kindness and consideration, but firm withal. "As Kiwanians we are doing great work with the underprivileged child, but our greatest concern is with the overprivileged child, the spoiled one who knows not the meaning of respect," he concluded.

Ants Now Use Telephone

"In order to test the auditory ability of ants I carefully selected a pair who appeared especially affectionate. I took the male to a house five miles distant from the laboratory. I connected the two locations with a sensitive telephone instrument, removed the receiver and held it near the female, while an assistant opened the other end of the line and placed it near the male. The female immediately went to the telephone.
