FEAST OBSERVED—The Feast of St. Theresa was duly observed in the various Catholic parishes throughout the Island yesterday. The "Little Flower Club" held a procession at St. Dunstan's Cathedral last evening and presented a very pretty appearance as they slowly paraded about the cathedral singing hymns and afterwards singing the Benediction.

THE WELSH IMPERIAL SINGERS are not merely vocalists in quest of gain and notoriety through their newly-resurrected art, but they are primarily lovers of music who sing because they enjoy that kind of work more than anything else and enhance over the unparalleled beauties of the compositions they sing. They communicate this spirit to their audiences who, in turn, catch it and carry it away with them as a precious memory. Under the direction of Mr. E. Peetyn Davies, these singers will leave an impression that will never be forgotten. Do not miss hearing this great aggregation of singers who will appear at Trinity United Church on Friday night.

RECOVERS JEMS—Some distance from the shore on the cool clear waters of Moosehead Lake, Maine, is anchored a swimming float. Here guests swimming at West Outlet Camps, Maine, and other private camps along the shore, gather and enjoy a plunge in the lake and often indulge in friendly swimming races. During one of those diving tournaments a young heiress from Trenton, N. J., Miss Mary Blackwell, forgetting to remove her pearl necklace dove in and returning to the float found her valuable pearls were left on the bottom of the lake. For several days willing and courageous young friends plunged to the bottom but failed to bring up the prize; the incident had been almost forgotten till last Sunday, some one on the float thought they saw some thing shining on the clear bottom twenty feet below, with the water at freezing point no one cared to go down; but along came a young man from Mr. MacKenzie's camps, Mr. Joseph Lonergan, a native of Charlottetown. Joe quickly changed from his regulation uniform of white to bathing suit, took a plunge into the deep and returned to the surface with the pearls. Mr. Lonergan is receiving congratulations, this being the second time he proved himself

Councillor Robinson furnished a box of cigars and very pleasant social hour was spent.

OPPOSE FEDERAL VIEW

Ontario and Quebec, through counsel, will take the leading part in opposition and will be supported by British Columbia. Manitoba and Saskatchewan will probably also be heard in argument in answer to the claims of the British North West. These provinces, broadly speaking, will contend that the water powers were vested in the provinces before confederation and were not transferred to Dominion domain by virtue of the British North America Act. A further argument will be put forward on behalf of the provinces that the Dominion has Can Pac Ry. 111 11111 40%

PROHIBITION MISNOMER

Sir—Permit me a few comments on the letter of A. N. Macdonald, Antigonish, N. S., which he wrote in the hope "that it will inspire the people of the Island to revolt against this misnamed prohibition, and vote for Government Control". Your correspondent irresponsibly states he has watched the fox industry grow from almost its birth, and has thought a lot of it. So the fox industry thrives, under Prohibition! How glad would be many sad and sorry dupes who subscribed some thousands of dollars in Antigonish fox ranching enterprise and never received a cent back either of interest or capital, if they had entrusted their money to the Island industrialists instead. Mr. Macdonald, with like irrelevance, refers to the Island roads. I grant that they are not attractive to the auto tourist. They were made for him, and his use or misuse of them contributes nothing to the peace or prosperity of their makers. Mr. Macdonald states he was here in July last. There were numbers of other visitors from the mainland here at the same time including a large party of Sunday excursionists who found some difficulty in getting something to eat, and very little difficulty in getting something to drink, many of them having brought it with them. There were tourists from New Brunswick and Quebec, and some from the States. I will account for the inspirational statement: "I saw more drunks, less there than anyone would see on the day of any celebration in a city, the same size as Charlottetown, in the Province of Quebec." There is no such city in the Province of Quebec, and if it were shown that there are bye-laws prohibiting the sale of intoxicating liquors during certain celebrations in that Province, we could more accurately estimate the gravity of the charge made against our Islanders.

I went out to the Park this morning to read my Guardian and just after perusing Mr. Macdonald's letter, I espied a bottle on the grass nearby bearing the label of a Montebello brewer, but what I had seen its contents was not "pale ale." I frequently visited N. B., both before and since Government control. The enormous increase in the number of persons in the hotels, in the Hotels, and on the trains under the influence of drink is lamentable and alarming—and the roads are no better, while the fox and farming industries are ruined.

WASTE LANDS RECLAIMED BY CALL FOR MUSKRAT FUR

WINNIPEG, Man., Oct. 1.—Muskrat, the northwest's connotation for marsh land or swampy ground, formerly shunned by farmer and homesteader alike, has suddenly come in demand, and the demand has seen a prospect of the ultimate disappearance of the picturesque life of the trapper as it is known today. It is the lowly muskrat, states a report from the National Resources Department of the Canadian National Railways, which is the cause of the new value attached to muskrats. At one time the muskrat was regarded as a pest. He was shunned by trappers.

Today, through the development of the fur market, he is the most important of Canada's fur bearers. The muskrat has his home in muskrags or sloughs.

With the advance of settlement and the drying up of vast stretches of land due to lumbering, clearing and other processes of deforestation, it has become necessary, if the muskrat is to continue to produce fur to protect, even to provide by artificial means what he formerly enjoyed in his natural surroundings.

This has led to the growth of fur farming which seeks to preserve the muskrat and to encourage the raising of a limited capita. All during the summer these animals provide for themselves and in winter they are fed low grade of clover and alfalfa. The preservation of the sloughs also offers a means of keeping the native waterfowl within the country.

In recent years muskrat farming has increased rapidly. In 1926 there were 107 such farms in Canada, most of them in the Western Provinces. In 1927 and 1928 have seen 197 muskrat farms in even greater demand.

Muskrat farming is often only the beginning of more extensive fur farming which includes fox, beaver, marten and many other fur bearers. Fur farming does away with the rigours and uncertainties of the trap line and its increasing popularity points to a general lessening of the "free lance" trapper, with the possibility, apparent, in the not distant future, that his methods of operation may become as unprofitable as would those of primitive grain farming if employed today on the prairies.

that any treaty respecting an international waterway must be subordinate to the British North America Act.

Ten points in all have been submitted for judicial decision. Originally there were eight questions but two additional ones were included on representations from Ontario and Quebec. The answers of the court on each point are intended to satisfactorily elucidate the whole question of division of legislative control over the proprietary interest in water powers as between the Dominion and provinces. Ontario and Quebec in respect to certain questions as prepared for the court's adjudication assert they are "vague" and based on "misconceptions."

Potato shipping is about to start in Halifax, two steamers are expected at the port next week to load potatoes for the Cuban market. Another steamer is loading at St. John with potatoes for Havana and is expected to sail today.

The cruiser Dauntless which was wrecked near Halifax, will be replaced by the new winter Cruiser Carado.

Plans for a new trans-atlantic liner have been completed in Germany.

The ship is to be 45,000 tons with a beam 80 feet and a draft of 39 feet. The ship will be the longest in the world, her length being 1,015 feet, and only four ports in the world will be able to receive her on account of her length, so a special dock will be built at Cuxhaven to handle her.

According to reports the great liner will have six captains, and a crew of 1,250 men. There will be a captain-in-chief, three watch-keeping captains, and two supernumerary captains, also no person will be allowed on the bridge under the rank of captain.

Hard Coal

The four masted schooner "Laura Barnes" is now discharging One Thousand Tons American Anthracite in Chestnut and stove sizes.

This Coal is of the highest quality and will be pleased to fill orders now while prices are lowest.
