Boston Doctor Now On Visit to Island Describes Passion Play

Nine hundred marks plus municipal tax for a day's board at an ordinary hotel in Germany sounds an extortionate figure until the fact is grasped that two American dollars would more than cover the amount. This was explained to a Guardian representative Saturday by Dr. Miles Martin, of Boston, formerly of Heathfield, who, accompanied by his wife, is on a visit to the city of Passau, where he returned from Oberammergau where he saw the Passion Play. Up to the time they left, about thirty-eight thousand had witnessed this stupendous religious production which is being repeated twice and three times a week to the great crowds which continue to arrive in undiminished numbers. The great faber made in which the play is acted will seat about 5,000 and in the surrounding villages many more thousands of spectators are housed, the crowds coming and going continually every week.

Dr. and Mrs. Martin met there many Americans and Canadians, particularly French Canadians from Montreal, who started on their trip from Montreal, proceeding to Vancouver and thence to Montreal by the Canadian Pacific Railway, then to Antwerp, through Belgium to Munich, Germany, and thence on through South Bavaria to Oberammergau.

In Munich, the principal stop made by Dr. and Mrs. Martin while in Germany, there is every evidence of agricultural activity and a noticeably optimistic business outlook. There is very little labor unrest and though heavily taxed the people are stoically putting their shoulder to the wheel. Many new taxation schemes have been evolved, such as taxing visitors according to the length of their stay in any municipality; taxing for hotel meals, etc.

Good food is plentiful in Germany, although the working classes no doubt find it sufficiently hard to procure. A first class meal, including wines, may be had at from 150 to 400 marks—or about one American dollar. Milk was about the only article of food in which there seemed a scarcity.

A tax of forty-five per cent is added to the hotel bill and a month's residence in Munich will cost a visitor—at any rate a Canadian or American visitor—1,800 marks, which is collected as a tax at the Police Court. French, British and American visitors are treated with out any apparent resentment by the people generally and it would seem as though to the great mass of Germany the war has become a forgotten memory.

Dr. and Mrs. Martin are remaining on the island for a few weeks.

WOMAN GIVES BIRTH TO 20TH

CHILD.
QUEBEC, July 9.—The contention that profligacy in the French Canadian families of the province of Quebec is not borne out in the case of the family of Mr. and Mrs. P. X. Gagnon of Ste. Patronne, Island of Orleans.

Mrs. Gagnon's 20th child on gave birth to her 20th child on July 7th. Of that number 11 children are living of whom four are girls and seven boys. The parents of Mr. Gagnon had thirteen children while the parents of Mrs. Gagnon had seven. Mr. Gagnon's age is 49 and his wife is 42 years old.

ERRING SIGNALMAN

FLASHES MISTAKE
ATLANTIC CITY, July 8.—"My God I have sent number 33 on the wrong track."

John Dewalt, signalman at Winslow Junction, hammered out the above frantic telegram to the dispatcher's office at Atlantic City a few moments after the "midnight flyer" flashed past his tower.

Atlantic City made desperate, but unavailing efforts to raise Dewalt after his message had been received. He had fainted.

Splendid Parade Of Orangemen Yesterday Morning

Local Orangemen are to be congratulated upon their splendid turnout yesterday morning when the brethren paraded from Boyne Lodge to St. Paul's Church, over a hundred strong, headed by the G. W. V. A. band. A large number of people witnessed the parade and commented favorably upon the general excellence of it.

The parade was marshalled by Grand Marshal, Brother John Proulx. In the parade were Grand Master L. B. Miller and Rev. Edward Morris, of Halifax, Grand Organizer for Nova Scotia and P. E. Island.

At St. Paul's Church an able sermon was preached by Rev. Mr. Morris upon Judges 7: 7. "And Lord said unto Gideon. By the three hundred men that lapped will I save you."

There were several out of town brethren in the parade, which was undoubtedly one of the largest for many years.

Rev. Mr. Morris who preached Sunday evening at Zion Church, will remain in Charlottetown on the 12th of July celebration, preparations for which have already been completed on an extended scale.

Rev. W. M. Ryan, B.A. Conducts First Services At Methodist Church

At the Methodist Church yesterday morning Rev. W. M. Ryan, B.A., the newly appointed minister succeeding Rev. G. W. F. Glendonning, preached his first sermon to a large congregation. Rev. Mr. Ryan took for his text Colossians 1: 27, 28: "To whom God would make known what is the riches of the glory of this mystery among the Gentiles; which is Christ in you, the hope of glory; whom we preach, warning every man, and teaching every man in all wisdom that we may present every man perfect in Christ Jesus."

The subject of Mr. Ryan's sermon was The Theme, the Method and the End of Preaching. The apostle preached no mere abstract theory but a personal religion which had a direct influence over the hearts and minds of their hearers. Their method was of warning every man and teaching every man. In all true preaching there must of necessity be a warning against evils, public and private, but the preacher does not stop there, because he is also a teacher as well as an apostle and he must warn his hearers only to lead them to the truth. He must, in his teaching exercise Christ-like tact as Paul did throughout his ministry, yielding readily and gracefully to others when principle was involved, but then standing firm as adamant.

The purpose and end of preaching is given explicitly in the text to present every man perfect in Christ Jesus, and this the speaker hoped to do throughout his ministry in Charlottetown.

In the evening service a gospel sermon was preached by Rev. Mr. Ryan from Revelation 22: 17: "And the Spirit and the bride say, Come. And let him that is athirst come. And whosoever will, let him take the water of life freely."

At both services yesterday splendid music was rendered by the choir.

TWELVE U. S. SEAPLANES FINISH 1,000 MILE FLIGHT

WASHINGTON, July 8.—Twelve P-5 L seaplanes of the navy have completed a flight of 1,000 miles from Philadelphia to the Naval Air Base at Pensacola, Florida without mishap. This flight of a dozen large scout planes without accidents, of any kind down the Atlantic seaboard is regarded by air officials as a high tribute to the efficiency and reliability of material and personnel. It also demonstrated conclusively the noble qualities of naval aviation units.

AUDACIOUS VANDALISM WAS

PERPETRATED
PARIS, July 9.—A valuable 17th century bronze statuette representing King Louis IV, and standing before a marble mantle piece in the Great Monarch's bed chamber has mysteriously disappeared from the Versailles Museum.

The statuette was firmly fixed on a wooden stand ornamented with heavy brass from which it was wrenched by the thief. Museum attendants suppose that the theft was committed during the luncheon hour by a foreign tourist or souvenir hunter who must have been possessed with considerable nerve and audacity, as the room is barely empty for more than a few moments at a time.

Life in Dublin Becoming Normal

In Districts the Insurgents Alarmed by the Advance of the National Soldiers, Burned Their Barracks and Fled.

DUBLIN, July 8.—Approximately seven hundred irregulars were taken prisoner by the National Army during the struggle in Dublin which was brought to a virtual close by the surrender of the remnant of the Republicans in the Sackville Street area Wednesday, as nearly as can be ascertained from reliable quarters.

The activities of the Free State forces in the provinces, as indicated by the latest official reports, are meeting with complete success. Large numbers of insurgents continued to be captured in various parts of the provinces the irregulars, alarmed by the advance of the National soldiers, have abandoned and burned their fortified positions and fled into the country.

Rounding Up Irregulars.

The encircling movement in the hills south of Dublin is rapidly approaching success, virtually whole roving bands of irregulars being driven into Blessington, where they are practically invested, with the National troops holding part of the town. The total number of irregulars in Blessington is placed at more than 500. There are persistent rumors that Eamon De Valera and Erskine Childers have been seen in this district, but these have not been verified.

In Dublin itself life is rapidly becoming normal. The railways are resuming service, though damage to the line prevents direct railroad communication with Cork.

The tragic end of Cathal Brugha (Charles Burgess) the first irregular leader to fall in the present fighting was the foremost topic of the day. It was recalled how, when fighting the British forces, he received no less than fourteen wounds, and was for a month hovering between life and death, eventually to become Minister of Defense in the first Irish Parliament, though later he espoused the Republican cause.

Harry Boland is known to be among those besieged at Blessington. His brother, J. Boland, was captured after a brisk fight at a farmhouse two miles north of Blessington, where the rebels fled. Boland, with eleven others, drove up to the farmhouse later, supposing it to be still in the hands of the British. He was captured with a quantity of arms. Brigadier-General MacDonnell, commanding the irregulars, also was captured.

The following army communique was issued late this afternoon: "At Trim, after an engagement lasting several hours, the party of irregulars occupying the house near the town was captured with all arms and ammunition."

"At Ballyshannon our troops control the entire area. Garrick-on-Shannon is reported to be perfectly quiet."

Letter From Glasgow Trip Through The Trossachs--Some Grand Old Castles--Scene of Scott's Lady of The Lake-- Splendid Scottish Scenery.

We left with regret, on Saturday morning, the most picturesque city in the Old World. Our first "step off" on the way North was at Stirling Castle. This was formerly the favorite residence of Scottish Sovereigns. It is a picturesque ruin situated upon a great high rock overlooking the town of Stirling and the extensive plain by which it is surrounded. This Old Castle played a prominent part in Scottish history. In 1304 it was taken by Edward the First, of England, after a siege of three months. But it was retaken by Robert Bruce ten years later, after Banockburn. James the Second of Scotland and James the Fifth were born there; and there, in 1452, James the Second stabbed to death the rebellious Earl of Douglas who held a prisoner. It is stated that no less than seven noble battles were fought within sight of its walls. Now the great plain about it, surrounded by the everlasting hills is the most peaceful and productive that can be imagined. To it, the description of the old clergyman "fatherly than that I never saw" may be truly and fitly applied. Thank Heaven the envy, jealousy and ambitions which formed part of the variance and strife exist no longer. All live now in harmony, peace and prosperity each man, woman and child in both Kingdoms enjoying the utmost freedom that is consistent with order. That is the sweet and pleasant condition which now prevails throughout England, Scotland and Wales. Let us all hope that that is the condition which will long prevail in respect to Ireland.

From Stirling we passed on to the quaint old town of Doune—not unknown to at least one of Charlottetown's prominent citizens. We spent the Sunday in Doune and attended one of the services in connection with the hundredth anniversary of the establishment of the Church of Scotland. Doune too, has its Castle—a fine, picturesque old ruin. We were admitted on Sunday afternoon and found it well preserved—its present owner Earl Murray, having recently expended a good many thousands of pounds in its repair. It, too, was, in the distant past, an abode of Scottish royalty; and it too experienced the dangers and the exigencies of attack and defence.

Nearby is the park and garden of Lady Muir. It is one of the most extensive and one of the most beautiful that we have seen in either hemisphere. Lady Muir throws it open to the public of Doune once a month on Sunday afternoon—and for reward has the thanks of the community as well as the satisfaction that pertains to a good deed. Perhaps it is in appreciation of her kindness that no boy or girl in Doune touches a flower in the garden or takes a boat out on the lakelet.

From Doune we went on "Monday morning" for a trip through the far-famed Trossachs. First we took the train as far as Callender, a favorite resort of tourists in the Highlands, picturesquely situated on the banks of the river Teith. There a number of charabancs awaited a party numbering fifty or sixty. As the motor drew up the hill and down we had the best opportunity imaginable to see the grand hills and lovely vales attractive to all lovers of the beautiful in nature. After a drive of five or six miles in the charabance we embarked on board a steamer which piles on Loch Katrine. This is the scene of Scott's beautiful poem "The Lady of the Lake." We passed close to Ellen Isle and enjoyed a view of all the natural scenery that Scott has so graphically described. The noble form of Ben Venue towers in the distance, wooded hills hold the ground between it and the lake. It was all very charming, and if the wind had not been quite so high and cold would have been in every respect delightful.

Arrived at the head of Lake Katrine, we took some rest and refreshment. Then we mounted on the top of a large coach and drove to Loch Lomond. On it we sailed for an hour or more before we stopped at Balloch and took the train for Glasgow.

The pleasure of this trip was beyond anticipation—high as our anticipation was. The great hours on the one hand, the deep valleys on the other, the surface of all covered with grass and heather, hidden by the forest or bare and barren at the highest points, the running streams and quiet lakelets the still unshorn horned sheep grazing on the hillsides, the shining lakes over which the steamer carried us—all made the trip from Doune to Glasgow a unique experience, not soon to be forgotten.

Investigation Re Distribution of Honors

LONDON, July 8.—On the eve of the proposed investigation in the House of Lords of the "sale of honors" scandal, Premier Lloyd George continues to stand pat on his original statement that he "wishes" comes any investigation, providing it be retrospective and embrace both the Asquith and Balfour Governments.

His critics in the House of Lords reply by declaring the Premier is the worst offender, inasmuch as during the last four years, they allege, he has showered 49 honors of different kinds upon British journalists. They intend to use that charge as their strongest attack on the ground that through the passing out of titles to newspapermen, Lloyd George sought to bring a large section of the British press under his control.

When the House of Lords begins its debate Monday, the Duke of Northumberland will ask the specific questions, "Whether the Government has within the last six months authorized any person to make a direct offer of an honor in exchange for a money payment?"

It is considered likely that the name of Sir J. B. Robinson, the South African diamond millionaire, will be mentioned in the controversy. He was about to receive a peerage when the "scale of honors" disclosures were first made. He declined it, issuing a statement in which he said he had not sought the honor, that it had been thrust upon him, and that he had not contributed a penny toward party campaign funds.

Whatever may be the outcome of the parliamentary discussion, it is certain that for a long time to come, no British Government will assume the risk of passing out titles to any one who has not some valid claim to distinction.

Political Chaos Threatens Germany

(Special To The Guardian.)
BERLIN, July 8.—The next week will witness Republican Germany's future history, for then it will be decided whether the government can pay the six billion paper marks due July 15th. Payment of this sum will mean final complete collapse of the mark. It is said in banking quarters industrial breakdown will follow then political chaos.

BERLIN, July 8.—The 50,000,000 gold marks required to meet the July installment of Germany's reparations payments were gathered in the Reichs Bank before the mark entered upon its present headlong plunge. Official quarters frankly admit that they prefer not to contemplate at this early date just what will happen in case Germany is obliged to go into the open market for the purpose of acquiring good equivalents for next payment, with the mark heading for the same road as that taken by the Austrian crown.

NEW YORK, N. Y., July 8.—In some quarters here it is believed that the rapid decline of the mark has been purposely permitted by the German Government on the assumption that the French, fearing an economic or political upheaval in the Fatherland would alter their reparations program.

BERLIN, July 9.—Republican Germany may be crashing to ruin on the heels of a shattered financial system. A restored monarch or extreme communist are the alternatives, if the Republic comes to an abrupt end as the result of the present financial chaos.
