FOOT TROUBLE OWNERS' FAULT

High heels may be making fashion headlines, but as far as health experts are concerned, they just mean so many more pairs of sore feet.

In a booklet "The Care of the Feet," the Health and Welfare Department recommends a heel 1 1/4 inches high.

"Soon these muscles become impaired, those of the calf tend to shorten, and it is not uncommon to meet people who cannot bring the foot to a position at right angles to the leg," says the booklet, which was written by Alexander Gibson of London, England.

Buying shoes that are too small is one method of cramping the feet, but wearing stocking and socks that are too short is another.

Woolen socks should never be rubbed or wrung out, but always should be dried on forms to preserve length and width.

For these hot weather days, the booklet has a few tips on foot comfort. It urges: daily cleansing and thorough drying; the use of footwear that permits free action of the muscles; exercises—containing leg muscles, toe muscles.

For persons who constantly mistreat their feet, the booklet lists a grim series of penalties.

Foot-strain is one of the most common disabilities. Callouses come as a result of pressure, and "usually are derived from badly fitting footwear." Hammer-toe generally affects the second toe and often is traceable to short shoes or stockings. Ingrowing toenails are seen on the great toe and result from wearing a shoe which is too narrow, and too pointed in the front part. Christianity And Communism regime, and many in the democratic countries may have a reluctance to oppose too strongly those who claim to be emancipating the workers of the world. But in the century since the publication of the Communist Manifesto by Marx and Engels the Christian world ought to have had time to understand the inherent nature of the Communist philosophy. In the year 1948 there ought not to be those who still fail to realize that Communism, however attractive some of its features, is determined by "its amoral foundations, its abhorrence of liberty and democracy, its drive to bloody revolution and dictatorship, and its dialectic materialism." Between such a system and Christianity there can be no synthesis.

The role of the Christian church in the world is not to urge some kind of Christian-Communist merger but to revive its own spirit. If Communism is spreading in Europe, it is because cold and hunger have reduced the people of Europe to a state in which they find the crudities of Communism attractive. It is nihilism, not enthusiasm, that gives Communism its opportunity. For Communism is a system of materialistic optimism, which offers the cold and the hungry a material paradise. It is the duty of the Christian church to

Range Rearing Of Healthy Pullets

(Experimental Farms News)

Profitable operation of a laying flock depends largely on good management. Factors like cost of feed and price of eggs are beyond the operator's control, but aside from these, the ultimate profit-making capacity of a flock of laying pullets depends on breed, variety and strain, and to a great extent on the manner in which the birds have been raised, says A. S. Johnson, Division of Poultry Husbandry, Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa.

The rearing of chickens is divided into two periods, commencing with the brooding period of about eight to ten weeks, followed by the range period up until about 20 weeks when the birds begin to lay and are taken into the laying pens. To eliminate the chance of infection from disease as far as possible a system of range management is necessary. This includes annual rotation of ranges in either a two, three, or four-year system so that each year the birds are on fresh ground. To avoid all danger of contamination the young birds should be kept away from the old birds during any part of the rearing period.

The use of pasture as a part of the diet of the growing pullets means considerable saving in feed costs. The quality of pullets as laying birds is not affected by restricting the grain and mash ration to the extent of 10 per cent and up to 20 per cent of the normal, and substituting pasture during the growing period. This is a big saving at present feed prices. The best method of doing this is to feed the birds early in the day, as much as they will clean up in a little more than an hour. They should then be allowed to go without mash for five or six hours, and be made to rely on pasture. Periodic cutting will prevent pasture from becoming rank. It is tender "second growth" the birds like.

Good pasture for poultry depends to a certain extent on the soil and the climate conditions. Various clovers such as Ladino or red clover are considered good. Alfalfa, blue-grass, orchard grass or various fescues also give good results. Depending on the quality of the pasture, they should be moved every two to three weeks depending on the extent to which the grass has been cropped. Feeders and waterers should be moved more often. This periodic moving provides fresh pasture and unpolluted ground.

A bulletin, "Pasture for Poultry" is available from the Dominion Department of Agriculture, Ottawa.

raise the standards of life in Europe.

But as Dr. Lockhart points out, there are dangers even in this work which the Christian church must be careful to avoid. It must not become a competitor with materialistic paradise. Its aim, rather, must be to establish such conditions of life that the fascination of the material may lose some of the excessive fascination which it has for the neglected.

But Christianity must not seek to meet the earthly utopia promised by Communism with the promise of a still more attractive earthly utopia. Christianity has no such utopia to offer. "It proclaims," says Dr. Lockhart, "the reality of God and the surety of His purposes for the human spirit which it exalts with dignity and worth, thus laying a true foundation for justice and equality and community. No Christianity offers no shallow human optimism which must inevitably result in disillusionment."

An address such as that delivered by Dr. Lockhart, places the whole problem of Christian and Communist relations in perspective. It is a needed reminder that the aims of Christianity and Communism are utterly different. A synthesis, or combination, of the two ways would not be a triumph. It would be a betrayal. And such a betrayal can take place only if there is a failure to understand the real nature both of Communism and of Christianity.
