TELEPHONING THE INVADER

Composed in 1917, a Year Before the War Ended.

Hello! there Invader! (meaning the Kaiser)
Which wild beast are you?
Going forth in such fury,
To dare and to do!
Have you leaped o'er your bars?
Or crawled under the fence?
Your growl about wrongs,
Has a shameless pretence.

You are disturbing the forests
Of Europe all through,
Would you kill all the beasts
You thought weaker than you?
Would you trample their life rights?
And seize all their dens?
Enlarge your range
By their mountains and glens?

There was none of them prowling,
Too near to your lair,
Encroaching, or poaching
Or dealing unfair;
But your murderous intent
For conquest and gain,
Has led you to this
And may yet give you pain.

All the beasts you have torn,
Will rise up to defend
Their lives and their liberty,
Where then will you end?
Your insidious cruelties,
Your venomous hate,
That fed on the suffering
Of victims you ate.

The bear is aroused! (England)
There's a lion some forth
To check your manoeuvres
Up there at the North!
A famous old lion
Who has raised some fine whelps,
As soon as he needs them
Each, readily helps.

They esteem their kind parents,
With filial regard:

A Morning Smile

At a U. S. western military post there was a young recruit who during the first few weeks of his army life was made the victim of so many army jokes that he doubted all men and their motives. One night while he was pulling his first tour of the guard duty, the tall figure of one of the regimental officers loomed up in the darkness before him.

"Who goes there?" he challenged.

"Maj. Moses," replied the officer.

The rookie scented another practical joker. "Advance, Moses," he said, "and give the Ten Commandments."

MURRAY HARBOUR

The recent rains have enabled our farmers to proceed with their fall plowing. The ground has been very heavily manured and will no doubt produce an excellent crop of potatoes again next year.

A number of people attended the school fair at Murray Harbour on Thursday the 18th inst., though this district seems to be cut off from all the other centres. A good idea would be to make the local school the centre of one of the districts and add not more than four of the neighboring schools for better development of the exhibits.

It is expected the fortnight of holidays will commence here a little earlier than usual as the season seems to be at least two weeks ahead. Potato picking has been begun in some sections around here and many farmers are finished.

Our local fishermen started away on Thursday, the 18th inst., to engage in oyster fishing on the North Shore. Among others were David Irvin, Newton Hicken, Verne Johnson, John Condon, who expect the season will be very short this year and we hope they are fortunate enough to secure a catch that will reward their labors. They may be back in four or five weeks.

Mrs. W. W. McClure spent a few days in Charlottetown last week. She is not in the best of health and it may be a treatment or operation may affect a cure that will be permanent.

Miss Edith Porter was on the sick list for a few days last week but is now quite restored to her usual health.

The annual rally of the Presbyterian Sabbath schools in this part will be held in Cambridge Hall on Sabbath, the 28th inst., at 2:30 p. m. It is hoped every child will be present for the occasion as there will be special music and an address by Rev. Mr. P. Watson Currie on the topic set for the occasion. Servants of God. All the parents are welcome as well as the infant members of the homes and it will be a service lasting not more than one hour at the most.

Mr. and Mrs. Ronston Kennedy made a trip to Charlottetown in their auto on Tuesday, the 16th inst., and report the roads as none too good.

Mr. Herb Llewellyn was a visitor in Souris one day last week.

We are glad to report Mr. William MacKay as improving in health.

The deceiver will find He has been his own fool.
With those he deceived Slipped under his stool,
No longer the dupe Of his infamous school.
(Written by Lydia Hume, Brooklyn, P. E. I., who is ninety years of age.)

Who is Responsible for a Happy Home? Dorothy Dix

Every Unusually Successful Home Has at its Head a Domestically Minded Man, for no Woman Can Make a Happy Home Against the Adverse Influence of a Man

How women got a monopoly of the job of keeping the home fires burning wished off on them, nobody knows. Perhaps it is the result of men's superior intelligence and foxiness. Perhaps it just happened that way. Anyhow, that's how it is. The sole responsibility for making a happy home and keeping its temperature at pleasant summer warmth and the sun always shining is laid upon the wife, and when anything goes wrong and the domestic machinery slips a cog and ceases to function without a hitch, she is the one who is blamed for it.

Reams of advice are given to women on the subject. In season and out of season they are urged to be diligent in making their families comfortable; to keep themselves looking pretty and vamps; to be tactful in dealing with their husbands; to be gay and bright and chatty and entertaining, and generally to diffuse an atmosphere of sweetness and light in order to make their homes attractive to their husbands and children.

So sold is the entire feminine sex onto the proposition that the welfare of the family is in the wife's and mother's hands that millions of women work themselves to skin and bones trying to put into practice all the provisions of the schedule for making a happy home. Millions of women literally make burnt offerings of themselves on the kitchen stove cooking the special dishes their husbands and children like and millions of women get facial paralysis wearing the smile that won't come off, trying to be human rays of sunshine in their homes.

Yet, cynically enough, in spite of all of the strenuous efforts that women put forth to make happy homes and in spite of all the crushing responsibility that they feel in the matter, the supreme homemakers, like the supreme dressmakers and milliners, are men. This may seem a bold statement and one that hurts the vanity of women. But for its confirmation, look about among your acquaintances and you will find that every unusually successful home has at the head of it a domestically minded man.

All of us know a few homes that are a little bit of heaven on earth. Homes in which there is never any wrangling nor quarrelling, but peace and good will. Homes in which there is love and companionship between the husband and wife and comradeship and sympathy between the parents and children. Homes in which there is always laughter and good cheer.

Sometimes these homes are lordly mansions. Just as often they are humble cottages. Sometimes the man at the head of the house is waited on by a retinue of servants. Just as often he cuts his own grass and waters his own lawn. It doesn't matter, for money doesn't buy happiness, and it isn't what a man brings home with him that makes his happiness. It is what he puts into his home.

And these happy homes invariably have a husband and father in them who is affectionate and genial and kindly and understanding and who feels that it is just as much up to him to help make his wife and children happy as it is to feed them.

He is not one of those who consider that their whole responsibility toward their homes consists in paying the bills. He knows that no woman, even though she were a whole League of Nations rolled into one, could keep the peace in a family in which the husband snapped and snarled like a surly dog and was so ill-tempered that no one dared even speak to him.

He knows that no woman, no matter if she could pull off as many stunts as a vaudeville team, can make a house pleasant and cheerful if there is a grouchy sitting around with his thumbs turned down who never does anything but knock her performance.

He knows that if a man wants his wife to keep on her tiptoes and to think it worth while to work and worry making him a comfortable home and having his money, he has got to do something to make her glad she married him and that if he wants to keep the children at home and off the streets, he has got to offer some counter-attraction to the night club and the road-house.

Therefore, he pals up with his wife and children. He enters into their hopes and plans. He talks things over with them and makes as much effort to entertain and amuse them as he would strangers whom he wished to please.

Whenever you find a woman who doesn't have to think twice before she tells her husband anything for fear of starting something; whenever you find children who think Dad is the supreme authority on every topic in the universe, and who consider it a treat to go out with him anywhere, there you will find a happy home.

And only there will you find a happy home, for no woman is miracle-worker enough to make one when she has to work against the adverse influence of a man who considers that his home is a place where he can exercise all the little tyrannies and vent all the temper and irritability that he has to suppress in the outside world.

So it is well for men to realize that if they want happy homes they must quit passing the buck to their wives and lend a hand themselves. It is a job that no woman can pull off alone and unaided.

DO YOU SUFFER WITH HEADACHE?

So easy to get quick relief and prevent an attack in the future. Avoid bromides and dope. They relieve quickly but affect the heart and are very dangerous. They are depressing and only give temporary relief, the cause of the headache still remains within. The sane and harmless way. First correct the cause, sweeten the sour and acid stomach, relieve the intestines of the decayed and poisonous food matter, gently stimulate the liver, start the bile flowing and the bowels pass off the waste matter which causes your headache. Try Carter's Little Liver Pills. Druggists 25c red pkgs.

Lace always seems to maintain a place in the evening mode, and this year it is particularly suitable. Cream tulle is combined with lace in the gown shown in the Vogue sketch at the LEFT ABOVE. The double circular sleeve caps are a modern interpretation of a Victorian mode. Grege chiffon is combined with lace in the same shade for the dinner dress also sketched. Lace lengthens the skirt and gives a camisole effect to the bodice. On the RIGHT is a photograph of a formal black lace evening dress. Its low back and separate cape with ties are high fashion details.—Sketch by Vogue.

... and this little girl went to market

'Fraid I can't stop and talk very long just now. Mother told me to hurry back. You won't think badly of my manners, if I do? Oh yes, we always get both kinds of Bon Ami. Mother tells me, Remember, Bonnie, get both the Powder and Cake. But she doesn't have to, 'cause I get so much fun in cleaning with both of them. Mother and I go round the house together, cleaning the white woodwork, windows and mirrors with the Cake; and the bathtub and all the have-to-be-shiny bathroom tiles with the nice, soft Powder. I never get tired with Bon Ami—it's so easy to use.
