Cured Mr. George Graves, Pitts Ferry, Ont., of a very bad case of kidney trouble.

He tells about the cure in the following words: "I cannot recommend Doan's Kidney Pills too highly. I never took anything that did me so much good. I had a severe pain in the small of my back and could scarcely get up or down without help. I could hardly urinate, but when I did the pain was terrible. I was in the Hotel Dieu, Kingston, last winter and when I came out I was some better but not cured. It was then I saw Doan's Kidney Pills advertised. Since taking them I have been completely cured and have not had any trouble with my kidneys since."

AUTUMN IN THE GARDEN.

When the frosty kiss of Autumn in the dawn
Makes its mark
On the flowers, and the misty morning
grieves
Over fallen leaves,
When my eiden garden, where the golden
soil
Through the fall
Of a hundred years is mellow, rich, and deep,
Whispers in its sleep,
"O! the crumpled beds of marigold and
pinks,
Where the box
Senders with its glossy green the ancient walls,
There's a voice that talks
Of the human hopes that bloomed and
withered here,
Year by year,— Dreams of joy, that brightened all the
laboring hours,
Fading as the flowers,
Yet the whispered story does not deepen
grief;
But relief
For the loneliness of sorrow seems to flow
From the Long-Ago.
When I think of other lives that learned, like mine,
To resign—
And remember that the sadness of the fall
Comes alike to all.
What regrets, what longings for the lost
were there!
And what prayers
For the silent strength that nerves us to endure
Things we cannot cure!
Facing up and down the garden where they paced
I have traced
All their well-worn paths of patience, till
I find
Comfort in my mind,
Faint and far away their ancient grief appears.
Yet how near
In the tender voice, the care-worn, Elnidy
face
Of the human race!
Let us walk together in the garden,
dearest heart,
Not apart!
They who know the sorrows other lives
have known
Never walk alone.
—Henry Van Dyke.

Artist's Model.

In my early days I once tried to engage as a model a big negro who made a living out of chewing glass in sundry barrooms for the entertainment of those gathered there, writes Tom Browne, a well-known English comic artist, in Booklovers' Magazine.

"I want to paint you," I said, when he had taken round the hat after his performance.

"What cullah, boss?" he asked, suspiciously.

"Why, natural color, of course," I replied. "I want to paint your face, you know."

"Yah, I see not taking any, boss," he said, firmly. "The cullah I see got 'a good enough for this chile."

I once nearly got hammered for making a colored sketch from life of a very respectable golf-caddy in an attitude of ease, subsequently adding a street corner as a background and sending it to an exhibition under the title of "A Loafer." The man came round to see me in a violent rage, said he was a bloomin', respectable, 'igh-class golf-caddy, and no loafer, and if I didn't alter the title of that dashed picture, he'd either put his solicitor on to me or jolly well bash me.

Oh, yes, there's a lot of humor about, if you only look for it in places where you don't expect to find it.

Miss Horace Smith.

Of Miss Horace Smith, who died recently at Brighton, England, The London Athenaeum says: "Her grandfather had hunted with Louis XV; her uncle had met Dr. Johnson, and she herself was probably the last person living who remembered Keats, having seen, as a child, the poet in her father's garden at Fulham. Among her early memories was that of being taken into the Princess Charlotte's carriage. Although she steadfastly declined to be interviewed or to put her recollections into print, she was famous among her friends for her store of anecdotes and animated flow of conversation. To her father, of 'Rejected Addresses' fame, she owed her youthful acquaintance with many of the celebrities of the time, and she inherited his warm friendship with Thackeray, with whose daughter, Mrs. Ritchie, she was intimate to the last. To him she is said to have suggested the plot of 'Pendennis.'"

Scotland's Great Canal.

As was recently stated in a cable dispatch, the plans for the construction of a ship canal between the Firth of Forth, on the east of Scotland, across to the River Clyde, on the west, have been definitely arranged. The canal will cost $90,000,000, but powerful support is expected from the British Government. One of the great engineering features of the scheme will be the carrying of the canal through the high ground near the Loch Lomond end. Frequent passing places will be made. An indication of the saving in distance that would be effected by the canal will be gained from the following figures: From the Clyde to ports on the east coast of Scotland, north-east of England, and northwest of Europe the distance saved would be from 529 miles to 288 miles. From the Firth of Forth to ports on the west coast of Scotland, northwest of England, Ireland, America, and the Mediterranean the distance saved would be from 487 to 141 miles. From Tyne ports to the St. Lawrence River the distance saved would be 150 miles. From the west of Britain and northeast of Ireland to middle western ports of the Continent the distance saved would be from 277 to 98 miles.

A Severe Task.

"You should strive to appeal to the imagination and the human interest of your pupils," said the principal.

"I do," answered the teacher, "but it is very hard to convince the boys that Hector and Achilles were as great men as Corbett and Jeffries."—Washington Star.
