THE EASTERN GUARDIAN

AGENTS: MONTAGUE: Harold F. Landry, Albert Aitken, Mrs. Byron Stewart, Miss H. Bristol, Clark. AGENT GEORGETOWN: Waldon Lavera. AGENTS SOURIS: Miss Enid Richards and Gordon Farrell

The Guardian may be bought at any of the following places in Montague: Miss S. A. Lewellyn; Mrs. Clar. In Georgetown: The Post Office; in Souris: Condon's and Florence Roper. In St. Peter's: The Post Office.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Beck, Montague, motored to Halifax last week on a vacation trip.

Mr. Harry James, was a visitor to Montague on Monday, calling on his regular customers.

Mrs. Ed. Bagnall, Charlottetown was a visitor to Montague on Monday guest of Mr. and Mrs. J. Emer Dunning.

Mr. and Mrs. R. K. Clements, Montague, accompanied by their daughters Ruth and Nellie, and Mr. H. William Stewart left on Sunday for a motor trip to Halifax.

Miss Lexie MacLeod, Forest Hills, was a recent visitor to Montague renewing old acquaintances. Miss MacLeod was a former student of Grade XI where she made many friends.

During the past few months Montague has become aware of various changes in the local Yeo's Theatre. Mr. Yeo has installed a new-dividing network speaker which separates the high and low frequencies thereby giving clearer sounds in the articulated words, and a more pronounced distinction in musical overtones.

Aiding this new speaker, is a amplifying system which has been installed with D. C. exciter lamp supply which eliminates all hum from the sounds coming from the speaker. Outside Mr. Yeo has set up a new neon sign which may be clearly seen from the main street, and which lends an attractive appearance to the theatre.

Mr. Yeo, however, has already been to the fore in giving the citizens of this community a local movie facilities, and has already procured plans for a new five-hundred seat theatre to be erected next year. The location of the theatre is still undecided as to whether it will be on the north or south side of the bridge. The new building will be modern in every respect with a large lobby ticket office, rest room, and air cooling system. Mr. Yeo is planning to take a post-graduate course this winter in New York, and at that time he will select the latest projection equipment for the new theatre. Mr. Yeo, is contemplating forming a local company to finance the project, but in the event this is unsuccessful, an opportunity has been afforded to announce that one of the larger circuit theatre corporations on the mainland. Many over the Island are acquainted with Mr. Yeo since he has operated theatres from Elmira to Tignish, in all small towns bringing the enjoyment of movies to all who love them. During all these years he has done his own projection, and when unable owing to pressure of time allotment, he has sold the equipment to another who could still bring the shows to the people. He has always taken a keen interest in projection, and at any time may be found at work in his own projection room at Montague. During the past year Mr. Yeo has concentrated mostly in Montague, and has recently sold the traveling circuit to Mr. Donald Campbell. With the erection of the new theatre, Mr. Yeo expects to be able to give local moviegoers the best in modern facilities, and will endeavor to bring the best pictures for the pleasure of these attending. Present facilities are a far cry from the old silent film days, when many an hour was spent turning the projector machine by hand. Today everything is done by electricity, and lighting is provided by large arc lamps which make the picture so much brighter. Residents will be looking forward to the new theatre and Mr. Yeo will endeavor to fulfill all the expectations.

Mr. John Addy, St. John, N. B. spent a few days in Montague and vicinity calling on his customers.

Mrs. Duncan Robinson, accompanied by her sister Rena Dunning spent a few days in Summerside guests of their grandmother, Mrs. R. T. Morrison.

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Kennedy, Charlottetown, and their young daughter Margaret Ann were visitors for a week at Montague guests of Mrs. Kennedy's mother Mrs. Minnie MacDonald.

Mrs. Annie MacLaren who has been spending the summer months at her home on the New Road, Montague, was called back to Boston, Mass., on Saturday owing to the sudden illness of her sister, Miss P. MacDonald who was visiting with Mrs. MacLaren and had returned to Boston on Tuesday.

The work of putting the new roof on the community rink has been completed under the workmanship of Mr. William Webster and crew, last year the south side of the roof was finished, and this year the north side was completed. The rink is now in first-class condition, ready for the winter season. Last year the new promenade was completed, and new oil-stoves were installed, thereby reducing the fire hazard. The Community Welfare League has been responsible for many new improvements in the general welfare of the community during the past few years. New swings and teeter boards have been placed on the school grounds, lumber and other materials have been given for the erection of the new tennis court, and land for the new base ball diamond was set aside. All these coupled with their many other community projects has made the Community Welfare League a valued organization in the community, and every support on behalf of the citizens should be given this excellent organization.

REPEAT PERFORMANCE TELLS POWERFUL DRAMATIC STORY

'Repeat Performance,' starring Louis Hayward and Joan Leslie and introducing Richard Basehart, is Eagle-Lion's romantic drama of a woman who wins the chance to re-live the most exciting year of her life. The unusual and emotional story of a woman who defies her destiny begins a two day engagement today at the Prince Edward Theatre.

Surprise Leslie Role

Surprise casting assignment of the year goes to Joan Leslie, heretofore identified with 'sunshine and sweetness' in musical roles. Leslie is cast as Sheila Page, glamorous Broadway stage star, married to a drunkard—and driven to murder. Her performance in Eagle-Lion's new film leaves no doubt as to the young actress' new-found physical and emotional maturity.

The Queen's Holiday

BY Elizabeth Corbett

A certain young man whom she had spent the last three years trying to put out of her mind came into her thoughts sometimes when the absent baron was mentioned. One morning in the garden she actually dared to put the question to the countess: "Do you suppose the baron intends to see Prince Paul? I haven't heard from him in months."

The countess looked uneasy, but she was burning to tell what she knew she was supposed to keep to herself. "There are rumors—oh, more than rumors! He has been seen in this country."

"Really?" Elsa's eyebrows shot up. "Anywhere near here?"

"In New York. He arrived there soon after the baron left."

"Then perhaps he will come out to see us one of these days. If he does come—Elsa hesitated. She hadn't the slightest desire to see Prince Paul again, now or ever. But could she actually refuse to see him if he appeared at the manor?"

"That is hardly likely," said the countess curtly. "Prince Paul is not of our faction."

Good for him! Elsa turned her head to smile at Carl.

Thus encouraged, Carl said slowly, "It is reported in some quarters that Prince Paul had a hand in the revolution which resulted in Your Grace's abdication. But I hardly like to believe such a report, though it came from a trustworthy source, I am afraid."

"That rumor doesn't make much sense," objected Elsa. "When I ceased to be queen, automatically Paul stopped being prince consort. And Paul loved to be prince consort—when he could do it from a considerable distance."

"The time may come when Prince Paul will mend his ways," said the countess. "Indeed he may become an integral part of Baron and sweetest's plans. But that must be left for the baron to deal with."

The baron was welcome to that job, Elsa said to herself.

When she was indoors again and alone, she reflected uneasily that if she were fated to see Paul in America, her course with him would be very much simplified if she had some money to give him.

What was he doing in America money from her? Conspiring on his own account? Oh, no, not Paul.

But she had no money to give him. She had none for herself, even. Day after day she signed checks to the baron, sums which astounded her by their size. Actually she must be a very rich woman. Yet if she wanted so much as a newspaper, she was obliged to mention her desire to the countess, who doled out the exact change to the chauffeur and sent him on the errand.

One afternoon somewhat more than a week after she had heard the report of Prince Paul's whereabouts, she was seated in the library going over with Lieutenant Fritz Kopferberg a bundle of securities which he had made up for the New York City morning to get out of a deposit box. Partly to kill time, but partly because she was growing more and more interested in this important question of money, she made Fritz explain to her the nature of each paper that he handled.

Presently he laid aside five or six folded documents with printed figures all over the backs. "Those are the same as money," he explained. "You will not have to sign anything to cash them."

"What are they?" Elsa reached for the papers and began to unfold them.

"They are United States Government bonds, Your Grace."

"And the same as money, you say?" Elsa asked. "Five hundred dollars and three for the larger sum. She hid them in a dictionary—a number of books had been left in the house by the owner. Then, feeling rather like a thief, she resumed her seat and waited for Fritz to reappear.

Some minutes passed before the next knock at the door and then it was Carl who entered. "I'm sorry, Your Grace, but Fritz has had to leave for a time. He asked me to put away the papers you were working over."

This turn of affairs was displeasing to Elsa. If the absence of the bonds were discovered now, wouldn't Carl be accused of taking them? She was almost on the point of sending Carl out of the room for a minute while she fetched her hand from his hiding place.

CHAPTER VI

Before Elsa had time to speak Carl came close to her and began in a loud rapid whisper, "The countess thought it better that you should not be told. But to me it seems that Your Grace should be put on your guard. He can mean no harm to your person, but I

'His record speaks for Gro-Pup'

'Hyde Park Duke, above, won a field trial at 11 months, and is the only 15-inch Beagle in Canada to win a Derby and All-Age class in two days,' writes J. E. Readey, Hyde Park Beagles Reg. d., R.R. #2, London, Ont. 'Dogs must be in top shape to win. Duke was raised on Gro-Pup, and his record speaks volumes for it.'

WHY BREEDERS FEED GRO-PUP. Breeders know it is not safe to try to raise dogs on "table scraps." Dogs need a properly balanced diet that gives them everything they need for strong bones, sound teeth, and a beautiful coat. That's why breeders feed Gro-Pup.

GRO-PUP IS A PROPERLY BALANCED DIET to keep dogs of all ages, sizes and breeds at their natural best. Not only do dogs like it but it contains every vitamin and mineral they are known to need. GRO-PUP SAVES YOU MONEY. It costs only 5¢ a day to feed a good-sized dog. It is all dry solid food. That is why Gro-Pup is so economical. A 2-lb. package actually contains as much solid food (dry weight) as your dog could get in five 1-lb. cans of ordinary dog food. Feed your dog as famous kennels do. Buy him Gro-Pup. Your grocer has it in both cans and meal form—for variety.

denly given way beneath her feet. "The baron will be here tomorrow?" "Yes. But in the meantime—Carl reached into one of the few pockets which his uniform provided, and drew out a worn wallet. "I have my pay every month, and nothing for which to spend it." He counted out twenty dollars, which was about half of what he had there. "I can't take your money," Elsa quitted. "Please, Your Grace!" (To Be Continued)
