THE KIRK PULPIT

Preaching yesterday morning on the text "Peace be still" (Mark 4:35) the Rev. T. H. Russell Somers, said: "The real storm was in the disciples: 'Why are ye so afraid? How is it that ye have no faith?' He told them that the faithi overwhelmed in fear could yet stand alone with God. There was treasure in them which would be kept, and there was a God who would keep them. The real storm was in themselves—the fear, the remorse, the anxiety, the sorrow. He spoke to them as well as to the wind and waves. 'But some people die and are not rescued,' says the doubter. Not some people, but all. All people die at last, drowning in that last storm. Harvest one of the disciples in that boat died in his bed; most of them were martyred for the sake of Christ. But they died content, unafraid and fronting eternity; they called on God in the name of Christ and knew that He was stronger than death, even so once He had been the Stronger Master of the storm. To live for Christ, to meet the storm, to die in mingled fear and faith—and then to find over and again that there is deliverance; that is truly to live. To come to the last bound of life (possessions gone, loved ones taken, breath failing)—to be alone with Christ, that is the true life. To live for Christ; that perchance is to live forever. There and then we find the God who is greater than any hazard of the world He has made, and greater than any storm in the heart of His children.

Helen's Diary

James' forboding of a change in the weather came true to day. I was almost certain of it myself, although early morning gave all most no indication that a storm for his. However there were some times right in my own kitchen, when I can read signs and portents, of course, and varying degrees of accuracy. I knew rain was near when I lifted the stove and added "Of course it's going to rain, but I don't know when." I was further intensified when a pot of vegetables, cooking for dinner bubbled away. "James, James, what that he said: 'Why didn't you have enough water on them?' I asked indignantly. 'Yes, Sambo, to storm hasn't the rain?' I said to the east?" But I knew I had taken pains to put extra water on the pot of vegetables—I always do on a dark day.

And when I went to the porch door to place the tea-kettle directly over the heat and so start the breakfast. There was an Aunt Kitty Mahoney used to say: "Pit the rain-pump in the river, James were further intensified when a pot of vegetables, cooking for dinner bubbled away. Choward's COFFEE

CELEBRATED
FOR PURPOSE GRIND

Choiceest of the Century!

Something of the charm of Holland came to Halifax when William Henry Schwartz, son of a Dutch settler, introduced the art of coffee-roasting in 1841. And down through the years the art has been perfected by his son and grandsons. Today they offer you their supreme blend—"Choiceest of the Century". Try this delicious coffee in its flavour-tight canister which permits re-sealing after use. . . . But say Schwartz and be sure!

Only One Girl Could Portray 'Sweet Rosie'

Filling the title role in "Sweet Rosie O'Grady" was one of the easiest jobs the executive of 20th Century-Fox ever had. The part called for a beautiful girl who could dance and sing, and who dealt with her rise to fame as the toast of the London theatres.

Betty Grable was a natural for the part in this film in which she stars with Robert Young and Adolphe Menjou. She had all the sparkle and dash required for the young lady who charmed the nobility of England and still remains the adorable and adored of the New York contingent who gave her her start on the road to success and when she stepped into the title number, "Sweet Rosie O'Grady," she has them swooning in the aisles.

This Technicolor musical smash hit will open today at the Prince Edward Theatre. Most of the credit for the film by those two superlative tunesmiths, Mack Gordon and Harry Warren.

Wounded in Italy

G.N.R. J. E. O'HANLEY

of St. Peter's who was wounded in action in Italy on April 6. Gnr. O'Hanley is the son of Mrs. A. O'Hanley and the late Mrs. O'Hanley of St. Peter's. He enlisted in June, 1942, and went overseas late the same year.

Almost three-quarters of a century ago, "Continuous Communication" is the news the Tiritiz is "badly damaged" and "partly grounded." It is a mere bascule compared with the opportunities which such an undertaking would provide for post-war employment and industry. For this and other reasons I am very much in favour of the motion.

Senate Discussion On The Petitediac Water Power Scheme

Continuation of the debate in the Senate on the proposed water power scheme.

Hon. Mr. QUINN (Halifax, N.S.): How would an honourable friend consider the St. Lawrence water-power development? Has not that the blessing of the Federal Government?

Hon. Mr. EULER: It has not yet been undertaken, and is linked up with a national navigation scheme.

Hon. Mr. QUINN: But has not the blessing of the Federal Government?

Hon. Mr. EULER: At the request of the Ontario Government, I am glad my honourable friend would be assisting in the development of the Petitediac river in the interprovincial undertaking, and it is essentially an inherently unfair to say that the taxpayer or the user of electrical power in the province of Ontario is paying for the energy he himself uses, should also help to pay the rates for the people in some other province. I assure honourable senators that I am trying not to be narrow-minded. But it is not for the honourable senator a question? Is he not overlooking the post-war period, in which, having regard to the general situation, the Federal Government must take the lead?

Hon. Mr. EULER: My honourable friend is rather anticipating something that I was going to say. If this capital expenditure would be national in its scope, and if it is to help the employment situation, there is something to be said for it. I am not going to contradict that. My honourable friend says that if the Federal Government came into the picture money could be raised and securities issued at a lower rate of interest. That is very good so long as the provinces concerned still have the responsibility of carrying the capital cost. The honourable senator from British Columbia (Hon. Mr. McRae) said this project would be self-supporting - and it should be even if it is publicly owned. But I was going to suggest, though perhaps it is premature to do so, that if the Federal Government can be of assistance in lightening the burden instead of assuming the capital cost the issue of credit or a loan might meet the situation. I want to assure my honourable friends from the Maritime Provinces that what I am saying is intended not as a criticism, but rather as an enunciation of a principle for which there is something to be said.

Hills are Not High for Victory Garden Sowing

Besides being sown in drills, or shallow trenches, the instructions on seed packets sometimes say to sow certain seeds in hills. Beginners would naturally suppose that this means a mound, elevated above the surrounding surface; but in most sections of our country, it merely means a point, as distinguished from a line, and is more likely to be depressed a little, than elevated.

Hills are lined up in a straight row, and spaced at equal distances apart in the row. The usual practice is to dig a shallow hole with a trowel, mix plant food with the soil in the bottom, fill soil on top of the hole, and then place the seeds in a few more than plants are to be grown. This is to make sure that enough plants come up; if more grow than are wanted, the surplus ones are thinned out.

In sections of extremely heavy rainfall, or where land is poorly drained, hills are often elevated, so that the seeds are held above the average surface level, and drainage is thus improved. But in well drained gardens, it may be advisable to leave a slight depression above the seeds, since most of the varieties sown in hills are tender, and are sown late when warm weather dries the soil and rains have become less frequent than

COVERED WAGON MAKES COMEBACK

ROSEVILLE, Calif., April 18 - (C.P.) - Traffic stopped in tribute, here, to the F.J. Benckas - father, mother and 13-year-old Barbara in their burro-drawn covered wagon which carried them 300 miles in three months from Las Vegas, Nev. to Gridley, Calif.

Driven to the covered wagon by gasoline rationing, the Benckas counted their "California-Or Bust" wagon on the wheels and frame of a Model T Ford but the horsepower comes from three burros, Nonsense, Sugar and Jack. The whole outfit cost them $110.

"Fuel?" asks Benckas. "Look at all the grass along the roadside!"

Except for one week when were hot up by a storm in the Mojave desert, the trek of the 1944 pioneers was uneventful. Two dogs and a cat rode inside with the family but a baby burro, Pete, tagged along by a tether attached to the rear of wagon.
