"Don't you agree that it is as well I should be?" "Major Mosson's eyes rested meditatively on the speaker."

"We have been anxious," she amplified. "My uncle has never gone off any trip before so we both feel sure something is wrong."

"I should have thought the unexpected absence of the head of so large a concern would be serious."

"The business," Broome broke in, "is exceedingly prosperous. That is why nothing in the case you had any—customary suspicions."

Standing on a short pair of garden steps the major was able to see where one of the blooms had been snapped off, as well as a number of bruised leaves.

"Looks like blood!" he said, pointing it out. "I'm sure it is blood. Broome replied, 'Like many other orchids this one is carnivorous.'"

Grain

WINNIPEG, March 12—(CP)—In routine trading bolstered by moderate Canadian and United States mill support wheat futures on Winnipeg grain exchange today closed unchanged.

Dear Mrs. McDonnell:— This is to thank you for the paper which arrived today through the auspices of your Women's Catholic League.

As for myself, I am from Nova Scotia and like to read very much in the evenings. So much that I am going to take a chance of being a bit forward and ask you if you could pick up an old Cosmopolitan, Red Book or Colliers or McLeans and send it to me at any time.

Miss McDonnell has the following to say about the war mail work: "Everyone is anxious to have the needs of our volunteer defenders supplied if at all possible."

Before opening the envelope he passed it over to Mosson, who noted grimly that it appeared to be the same texture as that shown him by the assistant commissioner.

"Dear Broome," he read. "I enclose a cheque for $25,000. Please cash this into one pound Treasury notes and await my further instructions—T. W."

"The disturbed orchid had been replaced. It hung down low enough for the basket to be grasped, so it was quite conceivable that it should have been dislodged during a struggle, especially by an arm thrust snarply upwards."

"What?" "It was alarmed. It hasn't attacked Sir Timothy and gobbled him up whole. Those things don't happen in real life and the largest meat-eating flowers known can only deal with mice and small birds."

"Ugh!" Mosson shuddered. "So that is Berenice Fariene! Not at all an engaging young lady."
