Slippers for Daddy

Slippers for Daddy, Johnnie? Why, you don't even know what he looks like . . . he went to war before you were born!

Happily, you don't know the dangers and hardships he faces, or for how long he may have to face them. And even we grown-ups can easily forget it.

Of late your Daddy has helped to bring victory so much nearer. We even begin to think of peace again with loved ones home and all the sorrows, miseries and restrictions ended. We are tempted to sit back and relax—to feel that there is no longer so much need for self-denial.

But therein, Johnnie, lies danger. For victory is being won by hard fighting that uses up our strength and resources every hour of every day. We must keep on building them up faster and still faster. For every little chance we give our enemies means a longer wait before Daddy comes home.

So now is the time for our greatest effort—the test that can make possible everything for which we are longing.

Soon we are going to be asked to buy more Victory Bonds, Johnnie. Only if we strain our utmost to buy to the limit—every one of us—can we give our victory offensive its full power. Surely, then, we must accept our duty without question . . . just as your Daddy is accepting his.

And the more willingly we accept it, the sooner it will really be—"Slippers for Daddy"

All That Glitters

By Frances Parkinson Keyes. (Continued from page 2.) "And suppose I do tell her that, Zoe, what then?"

CHAPTER X. Giles intended to call Isabel as soon as he got back to his own apartment and could speak to her without running the risk of being overheard.

"Oh, Giles, I've been trying to get you ever since early morning! What have you been doing and where have you been?"

also arrived here unexpectedly to join us. I'm sure we can collect an extra man. I'll call for you in about an hour, if that'll be all right."

"But, Giles, I want to see you alone." "If that's the case, I'm afraid you'll have to wait until tomorrow. I'll call you in the morning, Isabel, and you can tell me then when you've decided you'd rather do."

with us and go on to the Pete de Nault afterward. "It's very good of you, Monsieur de Blonville. An old friend of mine, Mrs. Windsor, has just arrived in Paris, about a week earlier than I expected her. I've told her we'd stop for her at the Meurice."

"The evening was not outstanding successful. Isabel had a brief moment of triumph when the American Ambassador stopped to speak to her. What was she doing at the Meurice, he wanted to know. She must move to the Embassy at once. He and his aunt, who was staying with him, would expect her the next day. He would send for her about twelve. He nodded agreeably to the rest of the group and went off as if the matter were settled. Isabel, inwardly raging, knew that it was. Unless she could contrive to detach Giles from the others before the evening was over, it might be a week at least before she had a chance to see him alone again. (To Be Continued)
