LOST TOOLS RECOVERED AT GOV'S ISLAND

Approximately Three Tons Fished out of 1375 Foot Hole—Drilling Operations Will be Resumed Right Away.

Citizens will remember that on the 21st day of last February drilling operations at Governor's Island were forced to a standstill due to the collapsing of a casing at a depth of 1375 feet. To make matters worse, during work on this casing a number of tools were lost in the hole, together with five tons of tools in the casing. It was necessary to send a party to New York for the proper fishing tools in an attempt to recover same. After being delayed for some time awaiting their arrival work was again resumed and resulted in more hard luck when further tools were lost. With that "never-say-die" spirit typical of the men employed in these operations, fishing continued and after seven weeks of arduous and painstaking efforts the good news was received that the tools were together with five tons of casing had been recovered at 4.30 yesterday afternoon.

POINCARÉ RE-VIEWS POST-WAR HISTORY

Says France's Claims Have Been Whittled Down Bit by Bit.

BITTER ATTACK

On the Attitude of France's Former Allies Toward Question of Debt Settlement.

(Canadian Press) SIVRY SUR MEUSE, France, May 17.—In a bitter attack on the attitude of France's former allies toward the question of debt settlement, Raymond Poincaré, former President of France, denounced Sunday the spirit of "low national selfishness" prevailing since the war. Speaking at the inauguration of the soldiers' memorial in this village, the former president recalled how he had reviewed United States troops there shortly after the Armistice. "Those officers and soldiers who marched past me would have been greatly surprised if they had been told that a few months later the treaty negotiated and signed at Versailles would not have been ratified by the United States, and that seven years later it would be not a vanquished Germany but a France who would have to bear the greatest cost of the war," he said. "Painting the action of the Allies in unflattering colors M. Poincaré reviewed post-war history down to and after the occupation of the Ruhr saying that bit by bit all of France's claims have been whittled down.

Bumper Crop Predicted For Western Canada

(Special to the Guardian.) TORONTO, May 17.—That the western crop will be a bumper, is the prophecy of Thomas Bradshaw Vice-President and General Manager of the Massey Harris Company, who is home after a tour of the prairies. Since 1915 the wheat crops have not been so well advanced, nor the farms in such a flourishing condition, he declared. The general tone of the west is much more optimistic, and this optimism is being reflected in a general increase in business.

THE ORIGINALS BETTER THAN EVER IN 'THUMBS UP'

Played Last Night to a Packed House, and Gave a Performance Par Excellence - Jimmy Goode, Gene Pearson, and Bob Anderson - Enough Said.

For many weeks the theatre-goers of Charlottetown have been eagerly awaiting the announced appearance of The Originals at the Prince Edward Theatre and to those who were fortunate enough to secure seats at the opening show of this talented soldier boy company last night, the rich and splendidly varied musical treatment that was offered did not fall short of even their rosiest anticipations. For fully two hours and a half an audience that jammed the theatre to the doors enjoyed an entertainment par excellence, one that did not leave room for a single dull moment, and one which was carried through from start to finish with absolutely no loss of time. In fact the numbers were so bright and scintillating that the dazzled spectator was almost glad of a short intermission in which to regather his wits the better to enjoy the harmony of music and color that predominated from the opening to the grand finale.

Immediately after the grand opening number, a vocal chorus which he manipulated with ease and skill, that "Music Hath Charms," and also, in the hands of the right musician, a side that is immensely humorous. On his initial appearance, Jimmy, as an old acquaintance, was given the glad hand with a right good will, and he proved that this was no more than he deserved not only with his first number, but also in "Nothin' But," another black face skit that had his audience roaring with laughter from his entrance to his final and universally regretted exit, and in a previous number along with Stuart Callaghan, entitled "Passing By."

The rest of the light hearted part of the program was held high by Bob Anderson, the famous Lancashire comedian, who with his lugubrious face and wistful expression, was at once so laughable and pathetic. In the sketch, "The War Might Have Been Worse," he found free play for his comedian capabilities, and he was heard with fine effect in the songs "Could I Dream of You," "I'm Tied to the Broomstick," and "The Princess Must Marry," an uproarious sketch in which his drollery was set in a grave and dignified background in the English Court, he was at once ludicrous and sublime and his characterization of the King was one that will be long remembered. To this sketch, as in

"Cheapest Attempt at Revolution in World's History"

(Special to the Guardian.) LONDON, May 17.—"The cheapest attempt at revolution in the world's history." This was the epithet applied in the House of Commons today to the recent crisis. It followed Winston Churchill's announcement that he saw no necessity for additional taxation and was received with cheers. The direct government expenditure due to the strike would probably not exceed three quarters of a million pounds sterling and would possibly be less. He did not anticipate any appreciable disturbance of national finance as a result of this increased call on the Treasury.

South African Premier Declares They Have Never Yet Received Full International Independence

A COMMON KING

They had always been subordinated to the British government until the signing of the Versailles treaty when their international independence had been recognized, but even after that the Dominions had hesitated to put their new status to a practical test owing to their fear that disruption of the empire would follow.
