SMUGGLERS DEAL In Human Cargo (By The Canadian Press) PORT OF SPAIN, Trinidad, Aug. 15 — A daring band of smugglers who deal in human cargo, enticing unemployed West Indians to take a chance of entering Venezuela illegally, is operating on the Caribbean Sea, according to the Trinidad Guardian.

A group of boatmen operating out of several West Indian islands "do a lucrative business" according to the Guardian, and every week persons unaware of the hazards legally is taken across the Caribbean Sea.

Dangers of the trip are many and include the risk of being shot at by Venezuelan coastguards who direct fire on sight at any vessel that falls to leave to at their orders.

Many of those attempting immigration illegally into Venezuela are caught and imprisoned at Macuro or sent back to the colony from which they came. A few are successful.

The way the smugglers go about their operations is described like this: "Several persons are said to have been lured into making the trip by boatmen who went around Port of Spain and informed them that it was very simple to do the crossing. A party was then arranged, as the more persons go, the better the trip was to be. The party subsequently assembled at an agreed rendezvous some time in the afternoon.

Edmonton Girl Vocal Success

EDMONTON, Aug. 15.—(CP) — "God given" is the pronunciation made by the Chicago conservatory of music in regard to the voice of Dorothy Blackhall, Edmonton girl studying in Chicago for grand opera.

This young Canadian girl who promises to be a musical genius was enabled to go to Chicago, a month ago, due to assistance from Edmonton citizens, along with a scholarship and a prize she won for her singing in a radio competition. Before she left Edmonton her supporters gave her a gala send-off and called the affair the "On-to-Chicago" party.

She is at present studying for Civic Opera productions in Chicago and her time is taken up with musical exercises, rehearsals and dramatic training.

Plain English Speaker's Plea

VANCOUVER, Aug. 15.—(CP)— Deploping the use of big words and advocating plain, simple English in speech and writing, Prof. J. F. Macdonald, of University of Toronto, spoke to the Vancouver Women's Canadian Club recently.

The new principles of the English language are to write and speak so others can completely understand the meaning, the speaker said. He cited to George Bernard Shaw as one of the few writers of English who had mastered the art of saying exactly what he means.

Prof. Macdonald made a plea, as a teacher of English, to drop elegant and lengthy words from ordinary conversation and adopt a clear, simple speech. Prof. Macdonald is giving a course in English at the University of British Columbia.

Believes Prince Will Soon Marry

CAPE TOWN, Aug. 15 (CP) — The Cape Argus has a full-page story on the marriage intentions or non-intentions of the Prince of Wales. The article is written by Patricia Gordon, author of "The Life of Princess Marj" and "Behind the Scenes at Buckingham Palace." She believes that before very long, hinting at after Christmas, the Prince will marry.

In conversation with him at a dance the "smiling, but the question by," but nevertheless, she writes, she is herself convinced in spite of what he told her later.

At a supper party given by the Duchess of Sutherland the writer of the article was dancing with the Prince, a few days after the marriage of the Duke of Kent.

"As we danced around the crowded floor naturally the conversation turned to the recent royal wedding, at which the Prince had been the best man," she writes. "I could not have been had nor a girl therefore, if I had not remarked laughingly to my royal partner, 'It'll be your turn next, sir.' For a few moments the Prince danced on in silence, as if he had not heard by little pleasant. Then, smiling into my eyes, he replied: 'God forbid—I admit your sex too much to commit the sin of marrying.'"

"This intrigued me further still, and I—pleading the innate curiosity of my sex—demanded to know exactly what my royal partner meant. 'I mean that I would never of my own free will condemn a girl to a slavery which being my wife would be. It's all right for me, I am used to it, but a girl married to me would enjoy even less privacy than I have to endure. Frankly, I do not think that I should make a good husband. After all, it wouldn't be much fun being married to a public institution, which is what I practically am.'"

Married Teachers No Longer Barred

LONDON, Aug. 14.— Hundreds of women, who have been torn between their career and marriage, have had their problem settled. As a result of a London county council ruling, they will be able to enjoy both.

After a heated debate—mainly between two spinsters—the council decided, by 75 votes—to 37,—to rescind on August 1 the marriage ban enforced on the 12,000 women teachers are doctors they employ.

Since 1923, these women have had to sacrifice their careers on their wedding day.

Widely different points of view were argued in the debate. Miss Agnes Dawson, chairman of the general purposes committee, who moved the resolution said: "To a good teacher marriage is a fresh experience, which gives her a better human understanding.

The marriageable age occurred when a teacher was often at her best. To deny women teachers the right to serve after marriage was to do a disservice to education.

Dr. Barrie Lambert, who is also unmarried, strongly opposed this line of reasoning. She outlined the complication which might arise from a woman trying to be a mother to her children and a teacher to other people's children at the same time. Domestic crises might occur, she said, or the woman might be kept awake at night by her baby.

"What are going to be a woman's feelings when she goes to work in the mornings in such circumstances?" asked Dr. Lambert. The leader of the opposition Alderman W. H. Webbe, was even more emphatic. "No woman," he stressed, "can do effectively two whole-time jobs. It's our duty as citizens to see that mothers do not shirk their

Canadians Push Missionary Work In North China

HAIKING, Honan Province, China, Aug. 14.—(C.P.)—Despite sharp shrinkage in revenues from abroad, Canadian missionary activities in China are being pushed with greater vigor than ever before in their history.

The expansion of mission enterprises has been made possible by the exercise of strict economy and by increased financial support from Chinese.

The Honan Mission of the United Church of Canada, which five years ago was receiving a grant of $135,000 annually from its mother church is today getting along on $90,000.

In the face of this curtailment, the Honan Mission has made advances all along the line. Evangelism has been intensified. Gains have been recorded in the field of education. Medical services have been broadened and new branch hospitals have been established. The church is doing an important work in social welfare and is even taking a hand in China's vast problem of rural reconstruction.

The work of the Canadian mission has been greatly facilitated, missionaries say, by the gradual subsidence of the wave of anti-foreignism which swept the country from 1927 to 1930. Government officials, under orders from General Chiang Kai-shek, are putting themselves out to be accommodating to missionaries.

Year by year the Canadian missionaries are pushing their work deeper into the backward rural districts of this north China province, which has a population of more than 30,000,000. Because of the evangelical work of such missionaries as Dr. G. M. Ross of Halifax, N.S., Dr. W. H. Grant of Toronto, and Miss Bertha Hodge of London, Ont., the mission was able to report that it had had more baptisms during the past year than in any similar period for 10 years.

Two new schools have been opened by the Church of Canada. Mission during the past year with the help of a $1,000 grant from the provincial government. The Canadian church is also co-operating with the government in its nationwide drive to reduce illiteracy in China. Over wide areas in Honan, the Canadian missionaries are starting classes. This work is being carried into the interior, where conditions are much the same as they were 500 or 1,000 years ago. Thousands have been taught to read and write the basic Chinese characters.

The pioneer in this new educational work was the late Rev. J. H. Bruce of Alisa Craig, Ont., who died in 1933 of typhus, but opening a new project. The undertaking he started is being carried on and is expanding, however, under Miss Minnie Shipley of London, Ont., Rev. G. K. King of Fredericton, N.B., Rev. E. B. Copland of Montreal, Miss J. H. Somerville of Saint John, N.B., and Miss Helen McDougall of Sarnia, Ont.

The three hospitals of the Honan mission are today handling more patients than they ever did in the past. Equipment of the institutions is being constantly improved. Dr. G. G. Struthers of Galt and Hamilton, Ont., and Dr. R. B. McClure of Toronto, are among those who have had most to do with the development of hospital facilities of the Canadian mission.

In the field of rural rehabilitation, Rev. D. K. Faris of Aurora, Ont., is showing Chinese farmers how they can bolster their income by planting crops which have heretofore not been grown in this territory. Rev. J. C. Matheson of Winnipeg is taking the lead in the establishment of rural co-operative societies in this province.

English Women In Many Jobs

WINNIPEG, Aug. 15.—(CP) — England has buried the rumour about married or single women working, said Miss G. Stuart Macrae, editor of women's magazines, when she visited Winnipeg en route to the Pacific coast on a holiday.

A great many married women of all classes work in England now, said Miss Macrae. It adjusted and did not upset the economic balance, she said.

"And you never can tell when a peeres will be doing your hair or giving you a facial these days," Miss Macrae added.

The visitor missed one British innovation in Canada. It was the motion picture theatre at the railway stations. In Britain travellers can step into the theatre and spend the time enjoyably while waiting for another train. Miss Macrae explained.

Miss Macrae found many things to delight her in Canada and said she was enjoying her trip greatly.

HUMAN BONES DISCOVERED While workmen were digging a deep trench near the Employment Exchange, Berwick-on-Tweed, they unearthed a skeleton which was evidently of great age. The skull was broken in the process of digging, but a portion of the frontal bone showed that it had been of great thickness. The skeleton was found at a depth of over ten feet.
