

Mrs. Mary Gray

CANADIAN MOTHERS, YOU SHOULD BE HEALTHY AND HAPPY!

Vanocour, B. C.—"Motherhood left me a physical and nervous wreck. I was so weak I could scarcely get around and was too nervous to sleep. I had headaches and backaches all the time and distressing pains in my side—my health was entirely gone. I doctored but got no relief. I spent until I began taking Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, and before I had taken all of one bottle I was much improved, and in time I was completely restored to health. I have had two fine, healthy children since. Had it not been for Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription I don't know what I would have done.—Mrs. Mary Gray, 733 Homer Street.

What Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription has done for other mothers, it will do for you. Get it this very day from your neighborhood drugist, in either liquid or tablet form, and write Dr. Pierce's Invalids Hotel in Buffalo, N. Y., for free, confidential medical advice. Send 10 cents to Dr. Pierce's Laboratory, Bridgeburg, Ont., if you wish a trial package of tablets.

CAPTAIN BLOOD

A Romance of the Spanish Main

by RAFAEL SABATINI

Copyrighted, 1922 by Rafael Sabatini. "CAPTAIN BLOOD," a Vitaphone picture with J. Warren Kerrigan in the title role, is an adaptation of this thrilling novel.

CHAPTER XXIV. CARTAGENA.

Having crossed the Carr bean in the teeth of contrary winds it was not until the early days of April that the French fleet hove in sight of Cartagena, and M. Rivarol summoned a council aboard his flagship to determine the method of assault.

"It is of importance, messieurs," he told them, "that we take the city by surprise, not only before it can put itself into a state of defense; but before it can remove its treasures inland. I propose to land a force sufficient to achieve this to the north of the city tonight after dark."

He was heard respectfully and approvingly by his officers, scornfully by Captain Blood, Blood was the only one amongst them who knew exactly what lay ahead. Two years ago he had himself considered a raid upon the place, and he had actually made a survey of it. The Baron's proposal was one to be expected from a commander whose knowledge of Cartagena was only such as might be derived from maps.

Geographically and strategically considered, it is a curious place. It stands almost four-square, screened east and north by hills, and it may be said to face south upon the inner of two harbors by which it is normally approached. The entrance to the outer harbor, which is in reality a lagoon some three miles across, lies through a neck known as the Boca Chica—or Little Mouth—and defended by a fort. A long strip of densely wooded land to westward acts here as a natural breakwater, and as the inner harbor is approached, another strip of land thrusts across at right angles from the first, towards the mainland on the east. Just short of this it ceases, leaving a deep but very narrow channel, a veritable gateway into the sea and a half-mile of beach, and besides this and the stout walls which fortify it, would appear to have no other defenses.

It remained for Captain Blood to explain the difficulties when M. de Rivarol informed him that the honor of opening the assault in the manner which he prescribed was to be accorded to the buccaneers. Captain Blood smiled sardonically at the appreciation of the honor reserved for his men. It was precisely what he would have expected. For the buccaneers the dangers; for M. de Rivarol the honor, glory and profit of the enterprise.

"It is an honor which I must decline," said he quite coldly. Wolvestone grunted approval and Haghorpe and Yberville nodded. "I will not lead my men into fruitless danger."

"Look you, M. le Capitaine, since you are afraid to undertake this thing, I will myself undertake it," M. de Rivarol declared. "If I do so, I shall have proved you wrong and I shall have a word to say to you tomorrow which you may not like. I am being very generous to you, sir. You have leave to go."

It was sheer obstinacy and empty pride that drove him, and he received the lesson he deserved. Close upon fifty lives were lost in the adventure, together with half a dozen boats stored with ammunition and light guns. The Baron went back to his flagship in an infuriated, but by no means a wiser man.

He was awakened at dawn by the rolling thunder of guns. Emerging upon the poop at nightcap and slippers, he beheld a sight that increased his unreasonable and unreasoning fury. The four buccaneer ships under canvas were half a mile off the Boca Chica and little more than half a mile from the remainder of the fleet, and from their flanks came a smoke which bleaching each time they swung broadside to the great round fort that guarded that narrow entrance. The fort, although returning the fire vigorously. Yet for all their maneuvering the buccaneers were not escaping punishment. The starboard gun-whale of the Atropos had been hammered into splinters, and a shot had caught her stern in the coach. The Elizabeth was badly battered about the forecastle, and the Arabella's maintop had been shot away whilst towards the end of that engagement the Lachesis came reeling out of the fight with a shattered rudder, steering herself by sweeps. There was a terrific explosion; half the fort went up in fragments. A lucky shot from the buccaneers had found the powder magazine.

It may have been a couple of hours later when Captain Blood, as spruce and cool as if he had just come from a levee, stepped upon the quarter-deck of the Victorieuse, to confront M. de Rivarol, still in bedgown and nightcap.

"I have to report, M. le Baron, that we are in possession of the fort on Boca Chica. The standard of France is flying from what remains of its tower, and the way into the outer harbor is open to your fleet."

"You behold there the scene of our coming action. It is spread before you like a map." Blood pointed out the fort at the mouth of the inner harbor and offered a plan of certain victory, with Cartagena's gold insured the invaders.

At noon on the morrow, short of defenses and Cartagena sent off by hardiment, Cartagena sent off by surrender to M. de Rivarol. The plunder was enormous. In the course of four days over a hundred mules laden with gold went out of the city and down to the boats waiting at the beach to convey treasure aboard the ships.

CHAPTER XXV.

THE HONOR OF M. DE RIVAROL.

During the capitulation and for some time after, Captain Blood and the greater portion of his buccaneers had been at their posts on the heights of Nuestra Señora de la Poupá, utterly in ignorance of what was taking place. Resentment smoldered amongst his men for a while, to flame out violently at the end of that week in Cartagena. It only by undertaking to voice their grievance to the Baron that their captain was able for the moment to pacify them. That done, he went at once in quest of M. de Rivarol.

"M. le Baron, I must speak frankly, and you must admit it. My men are on the point of mutiny. They demand to know when their sharing of the spoil is to take place, and when they are to receive the fifth for which their articles provide. The men know that it exceeds the enormous total of forty millions. They insist that the treasury itself be produced and weighed in their presence. I warn you that unless you yield to a demand that I consider just and therefore uphold, you may look for trouble, and it would not surprise me if you never leave Cartagena at all, nor convey a single gold piece home to France."

"Am I to understand that you are threatening me?" "You do not know the ways of buccaneers. If you persist, Cartagena will be drenched in blood, and whatever the outcome the King of France will not have been well served."

The end of it all was that M. de Rivarol gave a promise at once to make the necessary preparations, and if Captain Blood and his officers would wait upon him on board the Victorieuse tomorrow morning, the treasure should be produced, weighed in their presence and their fifth share surrendered there and then into their own keeping.

Among the buccaneers that night that was hilarity over the sudden abatement of M. de Rivarol's monstrous pride. But when the next dawn broke over Cartagena, they had the explanation of it. The only ships to be seen in the harbor were the Arabella and the Elizabeth riding at anchor, and the Elizabeth and the Lachesis careened on the beach for repair of the damage sustained in the bombardment. The French ships were gone.

Blood was reduced to despair. If he followed now, Heaven knew what would happen to the town. Unable to reach a decision, his own mood and Haghorpe's took the matter off his hands, eager to give chase to Rivarol.

Building Activities For 1924

While 1924 has not been by any means a banner building year in Charlottetown, nevertheless some important structures have gone up. The bulk of building work in the year just ended, however, has taken the character of remodeling. Among the most important works of the year are the memorial front to St. Peter's Cathedral completed and dedicated early in the year, and the addition of a stone verandah and balcony to the Bishop's Palace. Both these structures have added to the architectural beauty of the city.

The new City Hospital is rapidly nearing completion; the workmen now being engaged on the interior. It is expected to have the institution finished some time in April. This structure was designed by the architects and Phillips and Clark the contractors.

Among the business establishments erected during the year the most important is perhaps that of the Central Creameries on Fitzroy Street. This structure, which is forty by eighty feet, with concrete foundation and basement. It is modern in every respect and is equipped with a fire proof boiler-room and a two deck concrete floor for standing machinery. Harris and Horton are the architects and Webster & Cudmore, the contractors.

Early in the year the Wedlock building was completely renovated for Pennell & Chandler, Hardware merchants. The old E. E. Parson five and ten cent store on Prince Street was also renovated for R. T. Holman's Ltd.

A one story frame building, used as a dance hall was added to Mr. C. H. Foster's grocery store on Brighton road, the architects being Harris and Horton and the contractor, Webster & Cudmore. A bake shop and residence was built for Mr. Louis Hynes by Mr. Doyle, contractor. McDougall & McAuley renovated the Toggery on Queen Street for Mr. George Prowse and remodelled and made several repairs to the residence of Mr. L. C. Stern's Laundry building, Webster & Cudmore renovated the building on Water Street now occupied by Mr. J. M. Roop, pork packers, on Water Street.

Included in the new residences erected during the year were two frame houses on Ambrose Street for Mr. W. Boulter, (H. and S. Lowe) an eleven room residence on Sprink Park Road for Mr. H. R. Stewart, (McDougall & McAuley) a two and a half story residence on Upper Prince Street for Mr. L. N. LePage, (Webster & Cudmore), a residence on Grafton Street for the Misses Irving, (McDougall & McAuley).

Besides this, McDougall & McAuley moved, remodelled and built an addition to the residence on Kent Street of Dr. Beer; made repairs to the residence valued at $20,000 from the West Side home of Thomas J. Regan, former secretary to Harry Payne Whitney, Christmas eve. An English butler died only a week ago, is reported missing.

BUTLER AND GEMS GONE

NEW YORK, Dec. 30.—Detectives and police today are seeking thieves who stole jewelry, silverware and rare china valued at $20,000 from the West Side home of Thomas J. Regan, former secretary to Harry Payne Whitney, Christmas eve. An English butler died only a week ago, is reported missing.

When Kidneys Hurt Drink More Water

The American men and women must guard constantly against kidney trouble because we often eat too much rich food. Our blood is filled with acids which the kidneys strive to filter out; they weaken from overwork, become sluggish, the eliminative tissues clog and the result is kidney trouble, bladder weakness and a general decline in health.

When your kidneys feel like lumps of lead; your back hurts or the urine is cloudy, full of sediment, or you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night; if you suffer with sick headache, or dizzy, nervous spells, acid stomach, or if you have rheumatism when the weather is bad, begin drinking lots of good soft water and get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts. Take a teaspoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine.

This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help flush and stimulate clogged kidneys, to neutralize the acids in the system so they no longer are a source of irritation, thus often relieving bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; can not injure, makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink and belongs in every home, because nobody can make a mistake by having a good kidney flushing any time. By all means have your physician examine your kidneys at least twice a year.

LONDON SEEKS AERIAL PROTECTION

LONDON, Dec. 30.—The new Minister for Air, Sir Samuel Hoare, wants to see the official air routes of Europe concentrated in London. Speaking here recently he said: "I regard myself as under a very definite and responsible obligation to the nation as a whole. One thing I desire to achieve during my term of office is that I shall leave the air defence of London stronger than I found it."

A Word To Women

A hundred and twenty-one thousand women would comprise a vast army. Yet a canvas was recently made among more than that number of women who had used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for feminine ailments. The result proved that ninety-eight out of every hundred people reported benefit from its use. This is most remarkable evidence of the power of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound over the ills of womankind, and should influence every sick and ailing woman to try it.
