American Defense Precautions Like $1000 Insurance Policy On Concern Worth Millions

War Extended To Threshold Of The U. S.

BY THOMAS M. JOHNSON
NEA Service Military Writer

The war is on U. S. A's threshold. It puts its foot in the door at Greenland, form the Dutch Indies, East and West, it may walk in on us. Air power, which made those things even possible, may make them real. That is the picture we are facing today.

Map shows how spread of war to Dutch and Danish territories adds new menaces to the peace of America.

overcome, the oceans that have been our sure protection, are that no longer. And even the best planes and warships alone cannot surely protect this hemisphere of our part of it. The army is less than half ready. Now, we are not going to be attacked today. We shall have more warning than Norway, or Holland, or Belgium. But to prepare against tomorrow which no one can predict and which the highest authorities in Washington believe is very ominous, we have now our last chance.

NEED MORE MONEY NOW
To protect us at sea, Congress should pass immediately the 11 per cent budget increase already approved by the Senate Committee.

For such an effort capital and labor may yet be called upon. Manufacturers who have objected to taking defense "educational orders" must cease these objections in the national interest, and their own.

That combined force, with reserves, could be expanded quickly to a million men. AND THAT WOULD BE A SMALL ARMY. NOT A LARGE ONE. It would take all of a million men—probably more—to defend this country and its outposts, against a modern attack.

For every one of those labor troubles such as delayed France's war preparations, especially in aircraft. Short working hours may turn out to have lost the war for France. We can lose our peace if our armament is too much delayed by failure to adjust the Wages-Hours act to crisis conditions, especially when we have a shortage of skilled workmen.

Zane Grey's "Knights Of The Range" At Capitol
As that two-fisted high-powered outdoor action romance, Zane Grey's "Knights of the Range," exploded last night on the screen of the Capitol Theatre, it was clearly evident that Harry Sherman, producer of the popular "Hopalong Cassidy" westerns, has scored another triumph in bringing this type of entertainment to the screen.

Spencer Tracy In
"Northwest Passage"
 At Prince Edward

It is inconceivable that Hollywood could ever hope to surpass in the realm of periodical action "Northwest Passage," which opened yesterday at the Prince Edward Theatre. But inasmuch as "last week" it was inconceivable that Hollywood could ever create such a thrilling, amazing story of an adventure as this film, predictions appear dangerous, so suffice it to say here and now that "Northwest Passage" is the best in the field to date.

Perfectly Cast

In a lot of ways "Northwest Passage" is amazing. First, never has a picture been more perfectly cast. Major Rogers is by far Spencer Tracy's most vital role and should add another Academy award to the ones he has achieved in the past two years. The same production can be made for Walter Brennan, two time winner of Academy honors, for his Hank McGrath role. And Robert Young should be a star as a result of playing Langdon Towne. From these top three, right down the line to the tiniest bit, not a role could have been better done.

Striking Locales

The Technicolor is outstanding and the backgrounds, obtained on location in Idaho, have seldom ever been matched in color and swing splendor. Rust Stromberg, producer, and Director King Vidor have done a stupendous job in directing the events which in themselves are beyond belief in their realism.

For every one of picture fan, for every member of the family, "Northwest Passage" is supreme entertainment.
