The Press and Roter A PARALLEL

At the weekly luncheon of the Rotary Club in the Kozey Korner yesterday. Mr. J.R. Burnett presided. Two guests were Rotarian Lou Buckley, Halifax and Mr. W. Banks, City Editor of the Toronto Club. Mr. Buckley spoke of the benefit he found from Rotary in his travels. Mr. Banks said that this was his first visit to the Province and his welcome had been so cordial that he had determined to stay with his family for a month instead of a fortnight as originally intended. He thought his visit would be the forerunner of many from Torontoians this season.

Mr. Reuben McDonald then delivered a highly interesting address on "The Press and Rotary—A Parallel."

Mr. McDonald took the following prominent plank in the Rotary platform and proceeded to show wherein it resembled the policy of the Press. "To quicken the interest of each member in the public welfare; to co-operate with others, in civic, social, moral and industrial development.

He said that the Press and Rotary both aim at the public welfare and that this end should be recognized throughout this war ridden world which both organizations are seeking to enlighten, enliven, encourage, enthuse and improve.

He then took up each division of the subject, dwelling at some length on the part which the Press plays in civic development. He showed that the Press which is a moulder and a reflector of public opinion takes some credit for quickening the interests in civic welfare to such an extent that the demands for the "seats of the mighty" at the last civic election were in excess of the supply. The place of the Press in provincial and federal politics, was also discussed. In dealing with the relation of the press to commercial development Mr. Macdonald naturally touched on advertising, pointing out that in considering this question the principles of co-operation and interdependence which are two guiding stars of Rotary play a prominent part. Newspaper advertising, spoken of as salesmanship on paper, "has made tremendous progress in Canada where there are 133 dailies with a combined circulation of over 2,000,000 copies a day or more than one copy to each family.
