Too Many Beaus

By ALMA SIOUX SCARBERRY

They were back on old familiar grounds. Sugar liked that much better than to see Johnny miserably. She hoped she could keep him that way. But suddenly the boy got up and threw himself into a chair. He ran his hand through his hair and broke out heatedly:

"What chance has a fellow in a tank town like Lorient? Only three thousand people! Two small factories, with hundreds of people on the waiting list for jobs. I've got to get out of here, Sugar! I don't want to be poor all my life."

"But you mustn't be impatient, Johnny," Sugar told him maternally. "That won't get you anywhere. Almost everybody has just started out with your money and go on with your painting. Some day you'll be a famous artist."

"Yeah—I'll be an Alger hero, I suppose," Johnny grumbled. "You've been reading the junk in that crazy library. That sort of stuff is a lot of bunk. You'll find out!"

"You'd think you were the only boy that ever had to go out and look for a job," Sugar broke in impatiently. "Thousands of kids have left here with nothing, and managed to get somewhere. We've got to give you a chance as well. Better than a lot of them. Mother has taken a special interest in us. We've been like her own children."

"I know," Johnny began to repeat his harsh words. "She has given us a lot of love. But just as good as she is, she is what will happen to you if I have to go places."

Sugar hadn't thought of that. It struck terror to her heart. But she didn't want Johnny to know she was afraid.

"Things will turn out all right, honey," she smiled cheerfully. "I was bowled over for a few minutes after Mother told me I had to go, but I soon got over it."

"But you have a job!" Johnny sounded discouraged again.

"Isn't it wonderful how I'll feel like a prince living in that gorgeous house. Do you know something?"

"I've never had anything but a blue uniform in my life. Can you imagine that? The seven and a half I've never had a green dress or a yellow dress or a lavender dress."

"I'll bet you'll look like an angel," Johnny got up and went over to kiss by her chair again. "I'll paint a picture of you in your first party gown."

"And when we're old and rich," Sugar laughed, "we'll look at it and wonder how one silly little dress could ever have meant so much to us."

"Don't our grandchildren have a thrill when they see the last of us?" she asked. "I suppose I'll have to spend hour after hour telling them of the days when we were poor little orphans, thrown on a cruel world with just the dust on our backs."

Sugar giggled and felt suddenly shy—Johnny was talking about their grandchildren!

"You're very silly," she pushed him over on his heels again and started to get up.

But suddenly Johnny's arms were around her, pinning her close, and his mouth was warm and tight against her face.

"Sugar," he choked boyishly, "you promise me something?"

"Of course," she replied, a little afraid of what he was going to say and not knowing quite why.

"I know it's asking a lot," he hesitated, "when I haven't a thing in the world to offer you. But after I get a job and earn a little money—will you marry me?"

Sugar's heart began to beat so rapidly she could scarcely breathe. Johnny was asking her to marry him. For a moment she couldn't speak, and Johnny mistook her silence for disapproval.

"I know," he drew away. "Of course you don't love me. You couldn't—a wonderful girl like you. 'Oh—but I'm sure I do love you—Johnny.' Sugar almost whispered. 'There—couldn't be anyone but you—if I ever did marry.'"

A great loud dropped off Johnny's heart. He put her warm little hand to his lips and kissed her palm.

"You're such a little bittin' girl," he said tenderly. "You don't understand those things yet. But a fellow does. I know what the world is like even if I haven't seen much of it. I want to marry you and take care of you. You need a man to look after you."

Right then Sugar felt years older than Johnny. But she couldn't be cruel enough to tell him so, Johnny, who was so afraid of life and what it held for them. Somehow, Sugar couldn't feel that way about it. It was a glorious venture, a chance to do all the things she had dreamed about.

TODAY'S PIONEERS

By Grace Noll Cromwell
The old falter and old men fall, And youth must take the burdens up, and tread
A rough and tangled way to clear the trail
That lies within the wilderness ahead.

No less a venture than our fathers knew,
Who, staunch of heart, with strong and willing hands,
Set out to blaze a pathway, straight and true,
Across dark seas and strange uncharted lands.

So youth, face forward, has as hard a fight
And for a pioneer has known; Entangled, grappled by the foes of Right,
And forced to clear unbroken paths alone.

Yet not alone, for still our father's God
Will walk with those who choose the better way,
O Youth, strike deep your footprints in the sod!
You are the pioneers of earth to-day.

"WE SUMMON THE CHURCHES"

At the now famous Stockholm Conference on Life and Work, attended by religious leaders, drawn from all over the world, there was adopted a Message to the Churches which said: "We summon the churches to share with us our sense of the horror of war, and of its futility as a means of settling international disputes, and to pray for peace."

And so, in this world of crisis, the Federal Council summons the churches during the Armistice period, to honor the nation's war dead by dedicating themselves afresh to the task of establishing upon the earth the Kingdom of God in which "mercy and truth shall meet together, and peace shall kiss each other."

And so, in this world of crisis, the Federal Council summons the churches during the Armistice period, to honor the nation's war dead by dedicating themselves afresh to the task of establishing upon the earth the Kingdom of God in which "mercy and truth shall meet together, and peace shall kiss each other."

Seventeen years ago the World came to an end. The signing of the Armistice was hailed by people in all walks of life as marking the beginning of a new era.

There was to be no more war; no more murder on far-flung continents; no more piling up of costly and war-provoking armaments. The intervening years brought disillusionment. The stage now appears set, more clearly than in 1914, for a cataclysm that will threaten the very foundations of civilization.

In Italy, the entire Fascist organization, involving 10,000,000 adults and children, has been ordered to hold itself in readiness for instant mobilization; 1,000,000 Italian soldiers are actually under arms. The British Navy is concentrated in the Mediterranean. The United States has been displaying her naval prowess in the Pacific.

The military party of Japan is in the saddle. Russia boasts an army of 1,000,000 men; Germany is going ahead with her vast rearmament program. Civilian populations in certain countries are being instructed in the use of gas masks. Military and naval budgets are rising to perilous heights and fear of war grips the hearts of people of the world over.

Canadian Bootlegging
AN IMPORTANT VENTURE AND ADVENTURE

Press headlines last September announced the capture, by United States coast guardsmen, of a swift Nova Scotia oil schooner of 185 tons gross, which was carrying a $200,000 worth of cargo. Three high-speed co-operating American launches were also captured.

This capture is but a straw showing how generally and efficiently bootlegging has become under so-called "Control in Canada and the repeal of national prohibition in the American Republic."

It has not been stated how or where this rum is manufactured. But that bootlegging is reigning supreme on the North American Continent is proven by the fact that last August in the City of Chattanooga, Tenn., U.S.A., an open-and-above-board and highly successful convention of bootleggers was held, the financial object being the ending of a liquor price war among them.

Using the familiar: "That is going some" in the cause of illegal trading.

All over Canada bootlegging conditions prevail as never before in spite of newspaper reports of prosecution and fines. The only valuable means of resistance of this national pest-creator of criminals is the prohibition of the manufacture and retailing of liquor, thus making detection of the bootlegger a simple problem.

The expense of the unsuccessful attempt to control the Canadian liquor systems is a financial burden demanding an attention many tax-payers are not giving it.

THE CONFESSIONS OF A VERY SORRY MAN

(S. B. Morgan.)
At first he smoked his first cigarette because he wanted to be like father. He was sick for a week.

At six he tried again. This time he smoked a cigarette which his elder brother had left on his dressing table. It gave him a sore mouth. You see his brother had had one.

At nine he was disgraced in front of his entire family for stealing money. He confessed having taken it to buy cigarettes.

At twelve he set fire to one of his father's buildings. He did it while hiding there to smoke a cigarette he had stolen from his brother's case.

At fourteen he aspired for the sports championship at the school he was attending. He lost it because smoking had broken his wind.

At sixteen he got his first job. He lost it because the boss caught him smoking in the store-rooms against orders.

Now, at twenty-seven, he has been told by the doctor that he has a "smoker's heart. If he doesn't give up smoking he will not live another three years.

I am that boy. And I have decided never to smoke again. I haven't done so for two weeks, and already I have gained five pounds in weight. I can work better, too. Believe me, smoking doesn't pay. Besides it's a silly thing, isn't it?—New Zealand Exchange.

HELPING OUR FELLOW-MEN
Perhaps the highest way in which religion can influence business is by means of making it a means of serving and helping our fellow-men. Every business life has its opportunities of doing kindnesses to our less fortunate fellow beings, and it is a terrible thing for a man to have passed through life without having done a single act of mercy or compassion to those he meets in business. And yet it is to be feared there are not a few who at the last will fall under that condemnation.

Kind in the home, perhaps, and generous in the Church, they appear to think that when they pass through their office-door all that must be laid aside. Dr. Jekyll has had his innings; it is now the turn for Mr. Hyde. All wrong! Tragically wrong! Does Christ teach that mercy and compassion are to have no place in business? Read His great business parable of the "Laborers in the Vineyard."

James Chadwick
Awarded Nobel Prize In Physics

(A. F. By Guardian's Special Wire)
STOCKHOLM, Nov. 14—Professor James Chadwick of Cambridge University, England, today was awarded the Nobel prize in physics. He is 44 years old.

James Chadwick, made a fellow of the Royal Society in 1927, is university lecturer and assistant director of radium and research of the Cavendish Laboratory, Cambridge University.

He was born in Liverpool and educated at the Manchester Secondary School and the universities of Manchester, Berlin and Cambridge.

IN MEMORIAM

MRS. G. A. MALLETT
(The following is reprinted from the Forestburg (Alberta) News. Mrs. Mallett leaves many relatives in this Province.)

A gloom was cast over the whole district on Wednesday, Aug. 28 when it became known that Mrs. George Mallett had suddenly passed away.

Mrs. Mallett had been in apparent good health, and the news came as a terrible shock to the members of her own family and friends throughout a wide area.

Mary Sophia Burdett was born at Bridgetown, P.E.I., on the 17th of March, 1885, and in 1903 was married to George A. Mallett, of York, P.E.I. The same year the young couple moved West and spent the first four years of their married life in Winnipeg. Later they moved to Edmonton and homesteaded north of Vermillion. In 1915 Mr. and Mrs. Mallett with their young family came to the Hastings Coulee district and bought a farm 7 miles south-west of Forestburg. Here they settled and have lived since.

Mrs. Mallett always gave of her best to the upbuilding of the community. Highly talented, her services were ever in demand, and no social or other function ever took place without Mrs. Mallett taking a leading part. One who was dearly beloved by all who knew her, and who radiated sunshine in the midst of the most depressing conditions, her memory will long be cherished by all.

Funeral services took place in the little church at Hastings Coulee where she had, on so many occasions in the past, laboured diligently and assisted on occasions such as these. Rev. G. H. Barrett, United Church Minister, officiated. The remains were laid to rest in the cemetery adjoining the church and amidst the scenes where she had spent so many hours in the service of those she loved.

She leaves to mourn their loss, besides her husband, three sons and two daughters: Ivan of Bowif, Carl and Stanley at home, Mrs. Hughie Bownes (Mary) and Mrs. E. R. Price (Volla).

How Canadians Fared In Election

(C. F. By Guardian's Special Wire)
LONDON, Nov. 14—(G. F. Cable)—Of six Anglo-Canadians running in today's elections, two were defeated, two elected, and two had to wait until ballots are counted in their constituencies tomorrow to learn their fate.

Beverly Baxter, formerly Lord Beaverbrook's righthand newspaperman, won Middlesex Greenwood easily with a majority of 21,823. He is a Conservative.

This Shows WHY

You Get Such Fast Relief from "ASPIRIN"

Quick Relief for Headaches, Neuritis, Rheumatic Pains

The old adage says, "what you see you believe." So the nurse, pictured above, shows you two actual photographs to prove the quick action of "ASPIRIN."

Look at them, and you will see one reason why Scientists rate "ASPIRIN" among the fastest agents, now known or ever known, for the relief of headaches, neuritis, neuralgia and rheumatic pains.

You see that an "Aspirin" tablet, dropped into a glass of water, starts to disintegrate, or dissolve, before it hits the bottom of the glass. Hence, is ready to go to work almost instantly you take one. For what happens in that glass happens in your stomach when you take an "ASPIRIN" tablet. Relief comes in a few minutes.

Countless thousands know that about "ASPIRIN." Know by experience that it brings the quick relief you want when in distress.

Keep this in mind the next time your work or play is handicapped by a bad headache, neuritis or rheumatic pain. Learn for yourself how fast you can get relief.

"Aspirin" Tablets are made in Canada. "Aspirin" is the registered trade-mark of the Bayer Company, Limited. Look for the name Bayer in the form of a cross on every tablet.

Demand and Get "ASPIRIN"

for the government. S. P. Viant, Labor, had a 2,350 majority there. Captain Peter Macdonald, the Nova Scotia Conservative who sits for the Isle of Wight, and Viscount Duncannon, son of the former Governor-General, running as a Conservative in Islington West, will hear how they fared tomorrow.

Let's go hunting

It's the wise hunter who keeps his camera loaded and ready to snap the real story-telling pictures such as this one.

Don't these cool, crisp fall mornings sort of give you the hunting fever? In spite of all the pleasures you had during the good old summer time you probably look upon the fall hunting season as one of the highlights of the year, and as you sit enjoying a good evening smoke, isn't it a lot of pleasure to talk over the happenings of the day?

There should be more to a hunting trip, however, than tracking your game; or anticipating that tense moment when the antlers of a fine young buck make their appearance through the trees; or he carelessly makes a wild dash into the clearing and you put up a valiant fight against a severe attack of "buck fever."

The appearance of your game and the exciting moment when you quickly raise your gun to your shoulder and pull the trigger, is one of the thrilling adventures of a hunting trip.

There are, however, many moments of relaxation and leisure, too. It is then that you should do a different kind of shooting. "Shooting" with a camera should not be overlooked for it is with snapshots that you can make a picture record of your trip and enjoy your expedition over and over for years to come.

Your snapshots can picture your trip from the time you and your hunting pals load your duffel bags, guns, blankets and other equipment until your return with—we hope—your trophies.

Space will not permit enumerating all the picture possibilities on such trips. Picture taking opportunities, however, seem to have the habit of appearing at the most unexpected moments so it's the wise hunter who keeps his camera loaded and ready for action.

If you have never before taken snapshots under overcast fall skies it is important to remember that it will be necessary to give a longer exposure than ordinarily made under summer's bright sunshine.

Your snapshots should not be confined to outdoor pictures for it is at night in the cabin or lodge you can take pictures of your party seated around the open fireplace swapping yarns and reviewing experiences in this and former hunting expeditions.

You will find that Photoflash bulbs will serve your purpose admirably. A Photoflash bulb is similar in appearance to a common electric light bulb and can be screwed into a special, but inexpensive holder, resembling an ordinary hand flash-light tube. This can be purchased at almost any store selling photographic supplies. The flash is set off by pressing the flash button and it gives an intense light without any noise or smoke.

After placing your camera on a tripod or some solid support look into the finder and be sure you can see all who are to be included in the picture. Set the diaphragm at f/8 or U. S. 4, open the shutter after having been set for "time" and then flash the bulb. Be sure to close the shutter immediately after the flash.

It is not necessary to have the room in total darkness when the flash is made but be sure that a bright light is not shining directly into the lens of the camera.

Make your camera an important part of your hunting equipment and on your return have a picture story to show to your friends.

Sentenced To 12 Years For Kidnapping

(C. F. By Guardian's Special Wire)
LONDON, Ont., Nov. 14—Michael McCordell left here today under guard for the penitentiary at Kingston on a charge of kidnapping.

McCordell was sentenced to 15 years in the penitentiary for participating in the kidnapping of John S. Labatt, wealthy brewery president of London, Ont., last year.

McCordell confessed his guilt and was prosecution witness in the trial of Jack Barrett, another participant in the kidnapping and sentenced to 15 years. David Melsner is at Kingston serving 15 years for the same crime.

Before he left his cell here McCordell is reported to have written a letter to Labatt expressing his regret for having frightened Mrs. Labatt.

Sees End Of Trade War With Japan

(C. F. By Guardian's Special Wire)
OTTAWA, Nov. 14—On the eve of leaving for Washington to sign a reciprocity treaty, Premier King told a press conference here today he believed the Canadian-Japanese trade war would be settled soon.

"There has been an exchange of views in the most friendly manner," the Prime Minister said, "and I expect an adjustment will be made shortly. I go away with a feeling that it is only a matter of a short time before the difficulties will be completely adjusted."

The trade war with Japan has been in progress several months, starting with Japan imposing a surtax on retailing or exchange dumping duties levied by Canada. This led to Canada imposing a surtax of 33-1-3 percent against Japan.

Before the Bennett Government went out of power several notes passed between Ottawa and Tokyo but the difficulties were not surmounted.

WHAT'S IN A NAME?
A man, being charged at the police station, was asked his name.

"Van der Merwe," he replied.

"I want your real name."

"Well, put me down as Ramsey MacDonald."

"That's better," the officer told him. "You can't bluff me with that old Van der Merwe stuff."
