FROM OVERSEAS.—Private Angus Chipman, Charlottetown, a member of the 26th Battalion, arrived home on Saturday night after serving overseas.

THE HOLIDAY.—Victoria Day was marked this year by glorious weather. Although on Friday it was wet and looked anything but promising for the holiday with the dawn of the 24th, the clouds had rolled away and the day turned out to be the most summer-like so far this season. Hundreds left the city, with all the paraphernalia to snare the elusive trout, and fish yarns will no doubt be in order today.

LAI D TO REST.—The following in reference to the death of Mrs. J. Wilfrid Davison whose death in Belleville, Ont., was previously noted is from a Belleville Exchange: The funeral of the late Mrs. J. Wirlwind Finish End Of Guardian Contest

The greatest subscription contest ever conducted on Prince Edward Island came to a most successful close on Saturday night last at the office of The Charlottetown Guardian. The Guardian's big Automobile and Piano Prize Contest which has been on in full force for the past ten weeks is now a thing of the past as far as the newspaper is concerned but will be long remembered by the winners, who all appreciate the valuable prizes they have won. There was not a loser in this contest for those who did not come in for one of the big prizes will be compensated in cash for the amount of effort they put forth.

An avalanche of subscriptions descended upon the Contest Department during the closing hours and while the Judges were ready and waiting at the closing hour, it was nearly eleven-thirty before the great volume of subscriptions could be handled and the votes turned over to the Judges for the final count. Considering the tremendous task before them, the Judges made quick work of the counting and in the early hours of Sunday morning the names of the winners were announced by His Worship Mayor Wright to a large gathering of candidates and their friends.

All of the candidates, have made a very fine showing; the winners of the big prizes are to be congratulated for achievement and those who did not win one of the big prizes are equally deserving of felicitations.

The Charlottetown Guardian wishes to publicly thank the Judges for their kindly assistance and careful counting of the ballots.

The winners of the big prizes will receive them immediately and the cash compensation will be sent to the other candidates at once. Final Vote Standing of Candidates

From the Contest Manager

I desire to say that the contest conducted by me for the Charlottetown Guardian which closed on Saturday night, has been one of the most successful I have ever managed, which fact speaks volumes for the energy put forth by the candidates and their friends and is a strong tribute to the popularity of the Guardian among the people of Prince Edward Island.

To the candidates and the general public, I wish to express my thanks, for without their co-operation it would have been impossible for the contest to be such a tremendous success. I also desire to express my thanks for the manifold courtesies received from the management and employees of the Guardian.

C. S. McDONALD.

SLEEVES AND FROCKS OF THE SEASON

Sometimes it is skirts, sometimes it is waist lines, and just lately it has been neck treatments upon which the spotlight of the mode rests. And now it is sleeves, always an interesting period, for so many unusual things can be done to frocks when variety of sleeve treatment is sponsored by fashion.

For instance, a very plain little blue serge is just ten times more interesting because of a circular flaring cuff, added just above the wrist of the tight fitting sleeve. It is a compromise and seems as if it were trying to let the ultra tailored frock in for some of that popularity which the flowing sleeve is beginning to enjoy.

And if you should have any doubts about this flowing tendency of sleeve ways, just glance at a few of the models photographed—at that "signal" sleeve, for instance. Isn't it just like the wig-wag flags that the boys use so dexterously? All black is this frock, with part of the bodice foundation of silver tulle just to lighten it up a bit.

Then there is a clinging, very much beaded frock with sleeves that start in to be tight, change their mind and then flare just about as much as a sleeve could flare from the elbow down. One frock is a fawn-colored crepe de chene lined with orange chiffon and the beads which tone in with the silk are all put on with a fine wire.

More flare is expressed in another beaded frock of simple cut, but with a medieval turn to the sleeve with the long pointed addition. Just this one point gives an unusual turn to a not unusual frock.

And sleeves do not confine themselves to flares either. There is a spotted silk affair that interrupts a plain sleeve length with a huge puff of plain silk weighted with a double row of silken buttons. Two other points of interest accompany the sleeves, and they are the plaited silk girdle and the deep chenille fringe.

Lastly, there is a delightful little dance frock that emphasizes its demureness by cuffing tulle with two bands of pleated silk so that the back of the arm at least is covered sleeve fashion.
