His wife, who was at work in the house at the time, escaped. The fire appeared to have started from the flue as the roof was ablaze before the interior caught. —INTERESTING COLLECTION — Visitors to Gourles Drug Store are very much interested in a collection of paintings which Mr. J. E. Dalton has on display. The collection illustrates the Monarchs of Great Britain from the line of King George VI. The whole period is covered from 871 when King Alfred ruled, to the present. Many of the early King's pictures are taken from coins of the period which are on display in the British Museum, the portrait of Edward the Confessor is taken from the Great Seal, the first Great Seal of England in 1042. King Harold and Wm. the Conqueror were taken from the famous tapestry of Bayeux. The portraits of some of the monarchs are copied from tombs and brilliantly coloured. Others are from paintings in the National Gallery. All are faultless in detail and show the fashion of the period, and are well worthy of a visit. The collection was presented to the drug store by Enos Fruit Salt Company to commemorate the visit of King George and Queen Elizabeth to Canada. The collection is of particular interest just now when Britain is fighting for that "Empire" which as far back as 800, Alfred the Great held dear. The fact that England dates back so far should be an inspiration to all Englishmen and the British Commonwealth of nations.—S.

"Hitler - Beast of Berlin" Now Playing At Capitol

A startling picture of life in the German "underground" where the German patriots are fighting dictatorship on the "home front" with every weapon their ingenuity and meagre resources can command, is "Hitler - Beast of Berlin", which opens at the Capitol theatre this evening.

"Hitler - Beast of Berlin" is remarkable in that this frank, honest and sincere screen document does not advocate war or hate, or does it contain any propaganda whatever.

Roland Drew, Steffi Duna, Greta Grandstedt and Allan Ladd share top honors in this entertaining picture, heading a cast with more than thirty speaking roles.

With amazing frankness and generous detail, plus a large and enthusiastic cast of first rate players, this remarkable picture recounts the story of a young, married German intellectual, one of the leaders of the "underground" opposition to the Nazi regime, who risks his life almost daily in order to spread the word of common fellowship among the German people faltering between humanity and Hitlerism.

"Hitler - Beast of Berlin" will go down in screen history, not only because it is a prophetic human document, but because it shows, for the first time on the screen, how the anti-Nazi forces operate their illegal radio stations, print their illicit, yet accurate and truthful news from the world outside Germany to the eager citizens who would otherwise be kept in ignorance of everything except what Hitler wants them to know.

"Hitler - Beast of Berlin" was adapted from Shepard Traub's recent story, "Goose Step" and was directed by Sherman Scott. This startling picture, in no way, violates good taste and is not prejudicial; nor is it propaganda.—S.

Major Sutherland Schooner Is Guest Speaker
Fishermen End Annual Meeting
With Enjoyable Dinner At Queen Hotel, S'side.

Major D. H. Sutherland, Ottawa, Assistant Deputy of Fisheries, was the guest speaker at a very enjoyable banquet sponsored by the Prince Edward Island Fishermen's Union last night. It was held at the Queen Hotel, Summerside, following the annual meeting of the Union held earlier in the day. The toastmaster was Mayor J. E. Campbell of Summerside.

Originally it was intended that Hon. J. E. Michaud, Minister of Fisheries would address the members of the Union at the banquet but at the last moment he wired stating that he was unable to attend owing to business obligations and that the Deputy Minister would speak in his place. Major Sutherland arrived by afternoon plane.

A toast to the Department of Fisheries was responded to by Major Sutherland who expressed the regrets of Hon. J. E. Michaud and Dr. Finn who were unable to attend.

The Department has followed with interest the development of the Fishermen's Union, he said. Primary producers operating in groups will be better able to develop the industry at the present time, Dr. Sutherland said.

Speaking of fisheries generally he said the industry depends on export trade. This has been somewhat disorganized. The lobster industry is the most important part of fisheries on the Island, he said.

Mackerel was exported to United States years ago but since then markets have changed. Dr. Sutherland said. The same is true regarding the marketing of lobsters. Methods of packing and handling lobsters have been developed in the past few years.

The quality of lobsters shipped from this province is good because of the fishermen's effort, he declared. A high standard of pack of boneless cod from this province, is desirable.

An enormous change in a short period of years has occurred in this province, the speaker claimed. Oyster fishermen can now work with confidence now, he said.

Canned Lobster Market
Speaking of the canned lobster market he declared that this part of the business was difficult as these were placed on the luxury list at the outbreak of war. Eighty five per cent of the canned lobsters were exported to the United States. Thus the big export markets have been cut out.

To safeguard the industry a size limit was placed on the lobsters which had a beneficial effect. April, 1915, this ruling found favor with the fishermen. A new market was to be found and the Department formulated a scheme to take over the lobster catch. Some dissatisfaction among the fishermen was caused by the operation of the plan, Dr. Sutherland said.

Sound Market Needed
A sound market on this side of the ocean with the lobster in need he claimed. He referred to the great quality of lobsters fished in the Maritime Provinces.

The packed fish market and the dried market have also been affected by the war. Countries which were formerly ready markets are not in a position to buy at present, the speaker pointed out.

In spoke of the possibility of developing a herring market in the United States for Island fish. Referring to the smelt industry he said that Island fishermen were taking good care of this variety of fish.

Smelt Grading
Smelt grading was adopted by the Department of Fisheries some years ago and since then the quality has been excellent, the speaker declared.

As time goes on the higher production and the proper grading of fish will be a solution to the difficulties of the industry at present.

He referred to the adult education work done here by Mgr. J. A. Murphy at St. Dunstan's University and commended the efforts of the first toast proposed was to His Majesty the King by Mayor Campbell. A toast Our Island Progress was responded to by Premier Campbell who referred to the hospitality of the Fishermen's Union in sponsoring the banquet.

Fresh products have not found the ready market which the great industrial activity at present would seem to warrant, he said. This failure of the response to industrial fishermen. They are compelled to pay higher prices for commodities the fishermen declared he was confident that this disposition and the present apparent depression of markets is a temporary one.

Home Market
The demand for the primary products will find a home market before long, he said. Another factor in stimulating proper markets is agricultural and fishery products is a range scheme for the supply of foodstuffs to the British army, which is at present being discussed by the British Government.

Next year will see a very desirable increase in the demand for fish and farm products, he concluded.

A toast to the Fishermen's Loan Board was responded to by Hon. H. C. Cox, who referred to the low prices for fish and the difficulty the fishermen encounters in a day's work.

He paid tribute to the fishermen living by hard work who earn their money honestly. Mr. Cox claimed that the Loan Board has not the money to help the fishermen. He contrasted conditions in this country with those existing in Europe.

Not Making Effort
He charged that the fishermen of Nova Scotia were not making the effort they should. They are getting no aid in the form of boats, equipment on the shores without repaying the loans.

Some as high as ten loans, he accused, are accumulated the members of the union on the work they are doing.

A toast to the Fishermen's Union was responded to by Mr. J. B. Macdonald, of West St. Peter's, who spoke of the various unions which have been established on the Island and Maritime Provinces.

Gear Broken
He claimed that the fishermen faced many hardships. Their gear is often broken, due to storms.

Improved Conditions
The Union has improved conditions for the fishermen in many ways, he declared. It has done much for the fishermen. He claimed the fishermen was well looked after by the regulations made by the government. The fishermen did not get timely warning of the size limit, he said.

Mr. T. M. Linklater, M.L.A., in a few brief remarks, condemned the action of the government in regard to the grading regulations enforced on the lobster pack they took over. It was a detriment to the packer as he was left with the pack on his hands after paying a fisherman five and one-half cents a pound for lobsters as the $18 a case paid by a quality, which was almost impossible to obtain.

He also was not in favor of the size limit of six and one-half inches placed on this year's catch.

HALIFAX, Oct. 22.—(CP)—Five by-elections to have been held Oct. 21 to fill vacancies in the Nova Scotia Legislature will not be necessary. All five seats were filled by acclamations on nomination day yesterday.

The Halifax South seat was made vacant when Premier Angus L. Macdonald resigned to become Minister of the Crown.

The schooner struck shortly after 2 o'clock yesterday morning in a binding snowstorm. Planes Must Fly Low To Spray Deadly Fumes campaign urging people to never without their mask.

The Nazi high command has accused the British of using gas against the German civilian population—a statement which military authorities here emphatically deny. They point out that the Nazis usually precede an attack with accusations of this kind.

With the evidence mounting that gas may be used, some well-informed neutral observers, who believe events certainly will get worse before they improve, are wondering if London can take gas attacks as well as high explosives and still come up smiling.

The Home Office does not believe that anyone should be unduly perturbed about gas, because the only efficient way to use gas is to spray it from planes that fly low and can be easily brought down by anti-aircraft fire.

Events of the past three weeks disprove this comforting thought. Meanwhile, the British Home Office is proceeding with defense plans on the theory that they have done everything possible to protect London civilians against gas attack.

London Prepares For Gas, Feeling Germans Will Use It If Bombs Fail

Eng Nazi Pilot
Britons
Wear Masks

BY PAUL MANNING
A London Correspondent

Oct. 18 — A young pilot died recently in a hospital. Six weeks of medical treatment failed to overcome the effects of a three-second machine gun burst.

More significant than the death of the young soldier was his last utterance in payment for the life he never expected to receive. "I can't see a step without a gas mask."

As the planes will appear at some hour and spraying crowded London with gas is purely conjecture, it needs more than the imagination to see a possibly irate German pilot.

Signs are beginning to creep that gas may be used in the current aerial campaign of using bigger explosives than the deadly nature of the substance level of this city's population.
