THE CHARLOTTETOWN GUARDIAN

THURSDAY MORNING, JUNE 20 1907.

THE CZAR AND THE DOUMA.

The Czar has dissolved the second Douma or Parliament and sent it into oblivion after the first. And he has done this in true despotic fashion. He has done it in direct violation of the fundamental law solemnly proclaimed on the eve of the calling together of the first Douma, which declared that the electoral law should never be changed without the consent of Parliament itself. Now he has not only dissolved Parliament but has changed the electoral law in a most radical manner without the consent of Parliament. One or more new despotic and tyrannical acts added to the long list of past offences, however count for little.

There are some things which the Czar cannot and dare not change. Having given a Parliament to his people, very much against his will, he dares not abolish that institution wholly. He may dissolve it—King Edward, or Lord Grey could do the same in Britain or Canada—but he like them must call a new Parliament together in its stead. The act of tyranny lies not in the dissolution, but in wholly changing the electoral law under which a Parliament is provided for. The reason assigned for the despotic action is to provide "against the submergence of the educated classes by the uneducated masses." These latter, the uneducated, comprise more than three fourths of the population of Russian Empire.

In brief the Czar and his counsellors are determined not to permit Parliament to effect any reforms or enact any legislation until he gets a Parliament wholly subservient to the imperial will. It may be long before he gets it even under his new electoral law, but the changes made are very radical. The representation of Poland, Finland and other non-Muscovite sections and of the industrial population is cut down, so that the new Douma will have but 442 members as against 524 in the late House. The elections will begin September 14 and the new Douma is called to meet November 14.

Russia's first Parliament was elected late in 1905, opened in May 1906 and was dissolved in July following. The second Parliament was elected some months later and was called together on March 5, 1907. It was dissolved on June 4. The dissolution was taken quietly by the people so far as outward demonstration goes, but it will not be surprising if it shall be made the pretext for uprisings and terrorist plots and conspiracies. At the best there are troublous times ahead for Russia, although the rapidly succeeding election campaigns may in part operate as an escape value for the strong passions which so often explode in revolution.

BETTER POTATO BASKETS.

Baskets for use in the planting and harvesting of potatoes, as is well known are usually made from ash splints, woven and set up by the Indians at their camps. These are very light, handy and useful articles but will not stand very much wear before they go to to pieces Moreover the supply of new material has become very limited, and involves a long tramp and much labor on the part of the more or less industrious red man to procure enough suitable wood for the business.

Just at this juncture there comes to hand from Messrs Ernest and Frederick Robins of Millburn, Kings County a bundle of samples of their metal basket splints, or flat wire, coupled with the announcement that they are about to enter upon the manufacture of metal baskets, by a method of their own for which they are taking out patents. The metal strips, thin and pliable, are capable of being easily and quickly woven into baskets, which is is easy to believe would last as many years as the wooden baskets would ast in months. The enterprise ought to be a profitable one in such a potato country as this.

The Island wants new industries, and here is a promising one coming to the front at the moment. The new industry will not deprive the Indians of their accustomed trade as we learn it is the intention of the Messrs Robins to supply them with the metal strips and so employ their skill in basket making at their camps as at present. The enterprise is in every way to be commended and we feel assured will meet with the support it deserves. Our farmers will be pleased to get more durable potato baskets, and it is the intention also to manufacture all sorts and sizes of baskets that have a commercial value.

FROM COLD TO HOT.

The quick transition from cold to heat over a very large portion of North America is the most important feature of the past few days. People in the east, west centre and northwest that were shivering with cold and lamenting the failure of spring and the delay of summer now find themselves suddenly prostrated by heat. Thunder showers and fine growing weather succeeds the cold blast of the weeks agone and the crops are everywhere springing up with promising vigor. What has brought about this sudden change?

The astronomers have discovered a vast aggregate of spots on the sun covering an area of 82,000 by 80,000 miles, or one tenth of the bright luminary's surface. These spots, it is said can be easily seen seen by the naked eye, through smoked or colored glass—or could be seen a few days ago. But sun spots have been before turned to account in explanation of cold weather, Now they appear simultaneously with a change from cold to hot. From which it would appear that the effect of sun spots on the weather is like that of Wiggins' dark moon, "one of the things no fellow can understand." We must take the weather as it comes, whether we will or not. There are many explanations which do not explain.

Lord and Lady Grey with their suite leave Ottawa on Saturday next to visit Nova Scotia and the coast of Labrador.

A correspondent in The Examiner revives the subject of numbering the houses and business places in the city. This is a matter in which Charlottetown is behind many smaller cities. To be up-to-date and also convenient this want should be supplied. Our progressive City Council should take the matter in hand. Once the places are numbered business will be facilitated, and no one would think of being without a number on his premises. Time would be saved and also the annoyance to householders of being constantly called to the door to answer enquiries.

Among the facts elicited at the meeting between the Deputy Ministers of Railways and Marine and the delegates from the Board of Trade are the following:

That the promised motor car service on the Island will not be put on until this fall or next spring;

That the third winter boat will not be ready this fall;

That traffic on the Island Railway shows a large increase this year;

That two life saving stations are to be established and equipped on the Island this season;

That Mr. Butler had not expressed the opinion, as was publicly stated that a bridge across the straits would be preferable to and less costly than a tunnel;

That Mr. Butler has not promised to arrange for selling through tickets from Mainland points to all Island points in winter;

That a new and larger round house is to be built in Charlottetown on the site of the old one and a new freight house on the site of the old passenger stall on;

That there will be no change in the oyster regulations and no extension of the lobster season this year.

WHEN THAT COLD COMES.

How is it to be cured? This method is simplicity itself. Rub the chest and throat well with Nerviline, use it as a gargle and take some in hot water before retiring along with one of Dr. Hamilton's Pills. Next morning finds you refreshed, free from cold and bright as a dollar. These household remedies are wonderfully successful, and certainly won't fail in your case. For sale at all dealers.
