County Club

"What about his friend Rolliter?" Dollymore watched his old acquaintance closely as he asked the question.

Blauberg held his visitor's glance for a moment or so in silence before he asked: "What do you know about him?"

"I know nothing. But I want to be exceedingly anxious to..."

"He's a solicitor, I've heard," said Blauberg. "And apparently a very able one, too. I like a man who knows his job, don't you?"

"Very much—if the job is one I like. Go on, Monty. I can see you anything you do to help me—"

"I know the bird. You know that help us—will be treated with absolute confidence."

"He's been here from time to time, but always as a friend of some member or other. He acts for some of the crookedest people in London. I don't like him. Much as he would like to be does not and has never acted for me."

"He's not actually a crook?" Blauberg met the other's eyes and quietly smiled.

"I thought so, too," said Dollymore.

"But watch out, Dolly. He's a clever man! Most people who know him are frightened of him. Watch out! When my dear father retired he gave me a list of people who were dangerous. And one of the first names on the list was the gentleman you mentioned. But I cannot give you any more definite information."

"Fernandez? Is he a boy-friend of yours?" Dollymore went on.

Again Blauberg smiled: "He's been in here from time to time, and he's a close friend of Rolliter's—at least, they work together."

"Where does he get the money from to run the club?"

"Mr. Rolliter could tell you. You know what Fernandez is?"

"No."

"A blackmailer. The club was started for that purpose. An indirect week-end there has cost certain individuals far more than the prices stated in that artistic little booklet they send out."

"And Eddie Pachmann?"

"No. Not in that name, anyway. It's the name on her passport."

"What is she like?" Dollymore told him. "She has," he went on. "An interest in that club. She isn't merely a dance-hostess there. She's one of them."

Contract Bridge

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON TO GOOD A PROPHET!

In today's deal the declarer took a finesse that he knew (and even mournfully announced) would lose. His pessimism was satisfied as it happened, but better planning would have made him optimistic, and absolutely sure of success.

South dealer. North-South vulnerable.

The bidding: South West North East 1 Pass 2NT 3 Pass 4 Pass 6 Pass

North was highly aggressive throughout the bidding, but the fact is that the slam contract was excellent for the combined holdings. Only a spade lead by West could have made things hot for South—assuming that he played the hand correctly.

On West's normal lead of his partner's heart suit, South won with the blank ace, took out trumps in one lead, then, after sulkily remarking that he knew the spade king was offside, led a spade to the queen, obviously hoping to be proved a bad prophet. He wasn't however, and the spade queen met the ace. Later, South had no chance to salvage his other spade loser, and the contract was lost.

In view of the known position of hearts, success scarcely could have been achieved more easily. South should have drawn the outstanding trumps, cashed the top clubs and ruffed dummy's last club, then gone back to dummy with a trump to ruff the heart six. Now it would be as simple as A B C to return to dummy once more, and pass the heart back to East, discarding a spade from the closed hand.

East, of course, would either have to lead another heart, upon which South would discard his last losing spade while ruffing in dummy, or would have to return a spade right up to the major tenace in dummy. In other words, by "needlessly" giving East one heart trick, South would insure his slam contract, and would not have to give the slightest thought to the position of the spade king.
