Tourists and the travelling public will hail with delight the direct all-the-way-by-water passenger service afforded by the Metropolitan Line between New York and Boston as a means of luxurious, easy, while on a business or pleasure trip. The run between the two cities is made in fifteen hours, leaving each City at five in the afternoon and reaching port the following morning at eight o'clock, the luxurious and fast Turbine Steel steamships Yale and Harvard being in commission. This service affords the traveller the most exquisite scenery via Long Island Sound, Vineyard Sound, Nantucket Sound and Atlantic Ocean, during the early evening and morning hours, while with the exceptionally fine sleeping apartments provided, accommodating over eight hundred persons, the intervening hours may be passed in sweet repose, so that on arrival all are quite refreshed after a delightful journey. The great popularity of this route is hourly growing. With the many advantages offered, such as Wireless Telegraphy, Submarine Signal service and staterooms equipped with private baths and many other devices conducive to the ease, comfort and safety of the travelling public, no more safe or pleasant route could be chosen for a holiday trip. The ad which appears in this issue gives much information.
