IN MEMORIAM

In loving memory of Master Gratton Murray, died June 18th, 1925.

We laid him away, covered over with flowers, One beautiful morning in June, Our dear little Gratton, who left us so lonely, At the call of the Reaper, too soon.

Too soon, 'twas alas! for the hearts that so loved him, Who tenderly waited to cull that sweet flower, And place in God's Garden of Love.

From the white flower of thy soul's immortality, Wafted are perfumes so rare, Drift from on high, thro' the blue of the sky, The perfume of thy angel prayer.

Softly it falls, like a balm, oh, so healing, And hope soars aloft in my heart, In that vision I see our souls reunited, In Heaven, dear Home, where thou art.

The dark clouds of woe are dispelled in a moment, The blue of the Heavens shines fair, Of clouds not remain, but the bright silver lining, While angel hands, beckon me there.

"Written By His Mother." 7188.

SERIOUS LOSS—The store and warehouse of Mr. Davis Baker at Freetown Station, together with all its contents were completely destroyed by fire on Wednesday night. The fire started about 11 p. m. from an unknown cause. The loss is estimated at about $2,500, with some insurance. The building belonged to Mr. Sterling Burns.

VENERABLE PASTOR—Perhaps the oldest priest, both in years and in the service of the church attending the services in the Catholic Clergy in Charlottetown this week, is the Very Rev. Mgr. Gillis, the venerable pastor of Indian River and Kensington. The Reverend Monsignor is still hale and hearty and able to celebrate 2 Masses every Sunday and it was a source of wonderment to the large congregation at the Mass at Indian River last Sunday to hear Monsignor Gillis give all the announcements without even a piece of paper to assist him. He is a remarkable man for his years and seems to be just as active today as he has been year during his service of over half a century in the priesthood.

and Massachusetts, and came to begin again in the forests of Canada. Could anything have looked more forbidding to them than the shores of the Bay of Fundy? The lovely farms of this garden province were then a virgin forest, and for that which they would produce there was only a local market.

Enterprise meant for those people early rising and hard labour. Education meant for them so much of the culture of literature as they could acquire; it meant also the practical knowledge of the axe and the plough and the fall.

The women of those days would be aptly described in the familiar words of Solomon. (Prov. 31) The arts of spinning and weaving were household achievements. There was no task which the mothers of that generation refused. They were partners in enterprise with their husbands.

What is enterprise? Is it not the wisdom which sees the duties and the opportunities of life, and the courage which dares to meet them? Canada is no longer a wilderness country, though she still has her virgin forest and her undiscovered resources. She has become a nation of industry and manufactures, along with scientific agricultural progress. Her merchants are a good company with an honorable place in all the markets of the world.

Her institutions of learning have deserved recognition everywhere, and from her laboratories of research have come some of the triumphs of modern scientific achievement. And Canada is but on the threshold of what she can do. Enterprise must still be the watchword if she is to fill her destined place. The danger we need to heed is that men will leave their task half done; that when we have made a niche for ourselves we shall settle down at our ease and let the world go on. There is no place for drones in the hive of busy Canada. If Canada is to achieve as she can in the next sixty years, then she sounds her challenge to every man and woman and more especially to every boy and girl of today. It is the task of the whole people.

I would say to every boy and girl of today to lay hold of the privileges of education which lie at your very door, and work to master them. Do not be satisfied with any half-way achievement. Press on into the higher institutions of learning. Give your days to labour and your nights to toil, that you may emulate those great men and women whose names we honor today.

In the task that is yours you will be wisely guided, for education is not only that which comes from books and school rooms. It is found in the athletic field, in the realms of outdoor sport, and in all the healthy experiences with which our daily life surrounds us. But we have no time to spend in sitting in the sun, nor yet burning up the hours in the pursuit of hectic pleasure without profit.

Our heritage is a nation in the making. Let us equip ourselves to do our part in its fashioning. What are the scientific achievements which await our hand and brain? What have we to give our country which will make her still more honored by her national neighbours? There is natural resource—that is the gift. There is enterprise—that is the response to the Great Giver. But behind and before all is the Giver Himself, that Heavenly Father of whom we have been singing this morning.

O God our help in ages past, We speak proudly of the zeal and adventure with which our forebears met their task, of the toil, and its results, What was it which taught them to go and sustained them as they went?

What was it that kept high their standards and made lofty their ideals?

Was it not that better than heritage of lands and riches there had been given them to know the Fatherhood of God? Was it not the daily prayer which they had been taught to say, and the rich provision of the soul which is found in just one Book which belongs to every household in the land?

It is the Book which the King himself delights to honour and to read, and which gives comfort and guidance to the humblest man or woman as they peruse its sacred page.

There are men to whom I am speaking this morning—not a few of them—who fought in the Great War. Do you remember men the little khaki book which fitted into your tunic pocket?—and which you read from in the dug-out and on the lonely watch?

That is the Book and for them as for you it was read because it told you of God's because it helped you to lift your soul to Him and to trust Him. That God and His religion have provided the Golden Fibre of which our nation is built. He will be in the warp and woof of Canada's future if Canada is to be what Canada can be.

There was more than a happening in the reading on that memorable morning by one of the New Brunswick's representatives of the 72nd Psalm. There was inspiration—for inspiration there still is—in that flash of intuition which came from sea to sea. "His Dominion shall be from sea to sea." It waits for us to make it a prophetic vision of glorious fulfillment. Today this is the text of the sermon from every pulpit in this vast Canadian land. May the Holy Spirit of God guide and inspire the message and may that promise of rich fulfillment be abundantly true of every word spoken this day—"My Word shall not return unto me void but it shall accomplish that which I shall please, and it shall prosper in the thing whereto I shall send it."

I am instructed to sell for Messrs. Horne Bros at their farm at Winslow on Saturday, July 9th at two o'clock p. m. one car load of choice Western horses, well broken, young, and sound, weighing from twelve to fifteen hundred. Terms made known at sale.
