An advisory board of six of Montreal's leading medical men, the bursaries ranging from $600 to $4,000, have gone to researchers at the Royal Victoria, Notre Dame, Montreal General and Jewish General hospitals, the Neurological Institute, University of Montreal and McGill University.

Supported by a $2 membership fee, the society receives countless donations every week from members as well as interested persons and organizations.
 "Because cancer does not respect age, creed, sex or social standing," said Mrs. Caplan "our appeal for public aid has been so successful."
 "We sincerely hope the bursaries awarded Canadian doctors may help light the spark of discovery of a cure or preventive."

WOMEN'S GROUP AIDS IN CANCER RESEARCH
 MONTRÉAL, Dec. 29 — (CP) — Brainchild of a dozen Montreal housewives, the Cancer Research Society within two years of its founding has contributed more than $20,000 in fellowships and bursaries to further research into the dread disease.

Members of the same bridge club, the women all had done social welfare work. But when several of the group lost friends and relatives through cancer, the idea of aid to cancer research was born.
 Incorporated by the Quebec government late in 1945, the society granted four bursaries to young doctors and researchers in 1946 and seven during 1947. Money is granted without distinction of creed since the society's aim is to aid as many scientists as possible. Mrs. Philip Caplan, president of the society since its inception, said in an interview.
 With a current membership of more than 1,700 the society has

Regarding the skating rink, it is reported by Mr. Lorne Wigginton, manager, that there is a considerable depth of ice already, and with a day or so of cold weather, skating and hockey will get under way.

Mr. William Webster has completed the new ticket office which will be of more efficient than the former ticket seller and customers alike. Mr. Webster is also building players' boxes for the greater convenience of the players, who have already been given a new hockey room on the first floor. The visiting team will use the hockey room above the stairway. At the hockey meeting on Monday night, it was decided to accept Souris application to enter the King's County League. The meeting, attended by representatives from Georgetown, got under way with a feeling of compromise on many disputable points, and both clubs are to be commended on their good fellowship. It is hoped that on Monday, the next meeting, will see the schedule for the League drawn up, and that the hockey season will get under way to a good start. As yet no decision has been made on the state of hockey in the intermediate playdowns, but it is expected that there will be one, if not two teams in the League hoping to bring the championship to King's. This year looking at the state of hockey players on the respective teams it looks as if there is going to be some real hockey in store for the fans. Souris is strong, Montague is strong, and Georgetown is as strong as Souris.

How Can I!!!
 By Anne Ashley
 Q. How can I make a solution for chapped lips?
 A. An excellent formula for cracked lips is one-half teaspoonful of borax to one tablespoonful of honey. Mix the borax and honey thoroughly before applying.
 Q. How can I produce a high gloss on linen?
 A. Mix the starch with lukewarm water instead of cold. Then mix with boiling water until the desired thickness is acquired, add 1/4 teaspoonful of salt, and stir with a white wax candle.
 Q. How can I mend worn or torn clothes?
 A. Use black or tan adhesive tape as a mending tissue. It is easy to apply and will hold securely if the work is carefully done.

 Always Remembered by Her Niece and Nephew Elsie and Heath.
In Memoriam
 In loving memory of my dear husband, Vernon Parsons, who passed away December 29th, 1947.
 It is loneliness here without you
 And sad the weary way
 For life is not the same to me
 Since you were called away.
 Peaceful be your sleep dear husband
 'Tis sweet to breathe your name
 As I loved you in life
 In death I'll do the same.
 The flowers that are placed upon your grave
 May wither and decay
 But my love for you, who sleeps beneath
 Shall never fade away.
 Ever Remembered by His Wife.

Smart Girl
 By George F. Worts
 Eric's brown eyes were soft and kindly. "I'm sorry, but there's been a very unpleasant development and we need you. This morning Coral Mayberry phoned Dad and mentioned having seen him at a Harlem night club with Lolita Monterey on his last trip to town. Coral said that he might as well come clear with her, and he told her she was crazy. When he said he was telling the truth, she said, 'All right, old dear, if that's the way you want to act. You see, it's the groundwork for a frame-up. Van Arden is too smart to try anything usual or obvious. I've got to get him away from that hotel with his frame-up shaping up. I couldn't tell him that. It would be his idea of a cowardly retreat. Instead, I sold him on the idea of pursuing his investigation of Coral Mayberry, by following her to Long Island. And he wants you to help him as you promised you would last night. You must see her and do some clever sleuthing. And Pop Kresco called on the senator yesterday afternoon and implied that he knew the identity of Van Arden's girl.'"
 "He does know it," Sally said. "He didn't tell Dad who she is. Do you know why?"
 "Yes, he's blackmailing me, too. He's forcing me to devote a whole column to raving about a horrible restaurant he owns. He gave me until Thursday. He knows I delivered that interne suit."
 "Don't worry about it," Eric said. "I'll attend to it Monday morning."
 She said derisively. "Doesn't that make you rather noble?"
 "Sally, stop being an ostrich. I hate to mention it, but I know something about Barney Teel's father."
 She said huskily. "What are you talking about?"
 "You know what I'm talking about. Now, call Barney."
 Her eyes were dark with anguish. She dialed Barney's number. She heard the repeated buzzing as his number was rung. She said, "He isn't home." But just then Barney answered.
 He said hello in a voice thick with sleep.
 "Barney, listen. I've got to break our date for this afternoon. This time I'm not going to lie to you. Eric has blackmail me again. I can't explain. I can't ever explain. He insists that I go out to their Long Island place over the weekend."
 "Very well," Barney said. He didn't sound angry. He sounded indifferent. "If you don't mind," he said. "I'll go back to sleep."
 When Eric was gone, Sally telephoned Van Arden. She said rapidly: "The Larsens were just here. They forced me to break a date with Barney. They're taking me to Long Island for the weekend. They're suspicious of Coral Mayberry. They think you're going to frame the senator somehow with Lolita Monterey."
 "I'll undoubtedly see you out there. I've something of the greatest importance to tell you." It seemed to Sally there was an ominous inflection in his voice. "And if the senator should take the alligator briefcase to Long Island, find some way to let me know. That, my dear, is an order."

CHAPTER XXII
 Eric returned to his apartment. He felt depressed about Sally. Until now he had been very busy trying to save Sally for himself and saving her from certain disaster by more or less harmless devices. Now, he realized he had used a device that had been really cruel. He was very sorry for her, but he had no intention of wavering or relenting. He knew that Barney Teel was a rotter, and he'd rather have her find it out right now than after she'd married him.

 When he went into his apartment Douglas reported that there had been two phone calls, one from Mr. Polgreen, wanting to know if Mr. Larsen had missed his play, and the other from Miss Mayberry. "She wants you to call her the moment you come in, Mr. Larsen."
 "Any word from Featherly?"
 "No, sir."
 "I'm expecting a very important call from Fort Bend, Indiana. It will be from a Mr. Green. I'll spend the rest of the morning and the early afternoon at the public library. The senator and I are going to Long Island for the weekend. You'd better stay here. I'll prefer it if you didn't leave the apartment until Featherly and Mr. Green have called. If either of them calls before two o'clock, and if it's important, send a messenger to the library. I'll be in the newspaper room."
 He called Coral. She cried: "Oh darling, I'm simply in a state. Have you heard anything from Fort Bend?"
 "No," Eric said. "What has Guy Van Arden got on Barney Teel's father?"
 He heard her gasp, but her voice was controlled. "I don't know what you're talking about. He's just doing some clever sleuthing. And Pop Kresco called on the senator yesterday afternoon and implied that he knew the identity of Van Arden's girl."
 "He does know it," Sally said. "He didn't tell Dad who she is. Do you know why?"
