THE ACCIDENT
 "How did it happen? Well, they met head on, Rounding a curve. Going too fast. I guess!
 A quarter of an hour, more or less. Was hardly worth a broken neck. He's gone.

"The grade too narrow? No, the grade was wide.
 The other driver gave him half the road
 And something extra—for the wheel marks showed
 He swung his car well over to the side.

"Drunk? Oh, I wouldn't say that he was drunk—
 He had been drinking—Yes, it's very sad.
 A fine young man—the only son they had.
 The other? Crimpled. Both the cars are junk.

"You've seen the paper? Something left unsaid!
 And something, too, the preacher could not say.
 De mortuis nil nisi monum' eh?
 Why hurt his people's feelings, when he's dead?

"And who's to blame? God knows—
 The Government?
 The Trade? The boy? His parents? You and I?
 We're in the business!—People are content
 To let it flourish—Yeah, we voted dry."

HOW YOUTH PLANS A TOWN
 Some time ago some earnest town planners of Norfolk County, Massachusetts, wishing to find out if the youth of their towns had any coherent ideas on the subject of community planning, sponsored a competition among school children, offering prizes for the best plans with written explanations, of what the ideal town of the year 2032 should be like. The results of the competition were little short of amazing.

In the town of Dedham some 500 plans were exhibited in the high school gymnasium. Those 500 plans are really 500 concise and intelligent answers to the query, "Whither the youth of today?" For they reflect spontaneously ambition and aspirations.

The plans unconsciously point the direction of thought among the boys and girls of today. Few of the towns are planned with any show of ostentation and wealth; practically all of them rule out the slum entirely. The youthful imagination has in most cases been directed logically toward problems that beset our modern world. Traffic has been well handled in all plans. Most of them allow for high speed transportation by rocket ships and cars. Some of them marked the railroad as obsolete, and have all freight transported by huge swiftly propelled airships. None of the plans fail to include an airport.

There is one point, however, upon which the whole 500 are unanimous. They may differ on some subjects, such as the segregation of business and shopping districts. They may diverge on the subject of architectural details, transportation, and the scope of civic duties. But on not one of the plans is provision made for a saloon, or any other place for the selling of liquor.

But, says some one, these are just youthful plans for the ideal town. These boys and girls did not consciously condemn the saloon. They just forgot to include it. Which makes the omission just that much more significant. Remember that each one of these boys and girls was building his or her ideal community. And remarkable vision and logic is stamped upon the plans as a whole. Business, recreation, transportation, all legitimate needs and facilities are touched upon in the composite town of these young planners, but not one found a place for the saloon in his scheme of things. Scout News and Notices again unnecessary orders are never given, they should be as few as possible. A scoutmaster once told his patrol leaders that they were P.L.'s and not P.C.'s; that meant they were patrol leaders and not police constables. That is very true. We want to lead and not to drive to obedience.

It has been said that you cannot command unless you know how to obey. The reason is that unless you have been making a practice of obeying the orders of those who are over you, you will be no good at giving fair and straightforward orders to those who are put under you. It is the same question to each fellow playing his part for the honour and success of the team.

All that has been said is probably known to every Patrol Leader in the Movement, although different people may express it in different ways. What many P. L.'s do not know is that the best way to make it certain that the Seventh Scout Law will be kept is to get a fine spirit of smartness and alertness into all the members of their troops. All orders should be carried out in the "double." If a fellow is going to win the quarter-mile race at the sports, when the starter tells him to "go," he doesn't look round and wonder what to do. He is waiting to run, and the very instant he gets orders to run he goes like the wind! A good Scout is not only smart on his legs, but he is smart in every other way.

PEAKES' WOMEN'S INSTITUTE
 The February meeting of Peakes' Women's Institute was held in the schoolroom on February 14th, with an attendance of six members and one visitor. The President opened the meeting in usual way. Next meeting to be held in the school on March 14th, roll call to be answered by riddles.

Owing to the inclement weather, the December meeting was held in the schoolroom, with the President in the chair. The meeting opened with the reading and adoption of the minutes of the last meeting. Five dollars was voted for a Christmas tree. The school was ordered to be cleaned and a new broom supplied. Two dollars and twenty cents were given for other expenses. The meeting adjourned. Next meeting to be held in the school on Feb. 14, 1933. Roll call will be answered by quilt patterns.
