WITH ALMA ARCHER

No need to cry yourself to sleep any more because you're weak-minded, for God is love, there is no pain. Someone has thought it all out for you and made a Budget Book. With this system, you can't go wrong. The Budget Book prevents the need of rubber checks and in general lightens the little woman's hardships in adding and subtracting.

The bank is comprised of six removable compartments, or little banks for bills and cash. Titles may be inserted in each individual compartment as they are needed, so that each obligation may be properly apportioned and provided for. For example, the oil heater, automobile, electric refrigerator and radio regular monthly payments would have to be budgeted and paid before determining the amounts for such trifles as permanent waves, shoes and sodas. Any of these gadgets that have the strain on will power, I certainly go for, as it immediately makes a game out of something that is just a bore figured on paper.

PARIS, July 29.—(U.P.)—It just takes a few slight-of-hand tricks to make a little Orphant Annie dress look like sister Cinderella. It's all in knowing how — which comes natural to some people and is like pulling teeth to others. It is to the latter class that I prefer to direct my few words of assistance, the former does not need them.

Suppose you have a plain old black, or blue, or any color for that matter, satin, or crepe de Chine, or almost any material for another matter—dress, and every time you put it on it looks a little more awful than the time before. (I know whereof I speak.) All right, send it to the cleaners and then forget it till it comes back and when it does pretend that you never saw it and that it is just a gift from heaven and that enclosed with the package is a slip of paper on which is written: "Follow Directions Carefully and You Will Be Astonished At The Results."

Here they are: "The owner of this dress will wear it to the nearest shop dealing in collars and cuffs, and add one set in pale green georgette and fagoting that fits the V-neck and wrists perfectly. Select the same shade of green belt in either suede, antelope, or patent leather. Then to the milliner for a cellophane straw hat that has a slight brim and a black feather at one side. Tilt it over the left eye and let it shy sideways like a frightened pony. Next choose a flat purse of black antelope and gloves of the same—shoes ditto.

PRINCE GREAT SALESMAN

LONDON, July 28.—The Prince of Wales is busy in an after-sales campaign with Latin America, and Britain is cheering him and aiding him in his determined efforts.

This latest move is to boost and help demonstrated British aeroplanes to Colonel Don Arthur Meritt, assistant air minister of Chile. Speaking Spanish and handling the controls, Britain's crack salesman impresses prospective buyers with his personality, which in turn inspires confidence in his product.

During the weeks since his return from his Latin-American tour the Prince has held numerous conferences with South American diplomats and prominent business men. Almost weekly he entertains some officials stationed in London.

Q. Is it proper to hold a woman's arm while walking?
A. It was never done until recent years, but crowds in big cities make it imperative at times if one wishes to converse.

Q. What sort of costume should a woman wear to a Sunday morning breakfast party?
A. Any morning ensemble is proper.

Q. Which edge of the knife should be placed towards the plate?
A. The cutting edge.

Margery—Yes; pa's got Jackie and ma's got me.

For The Cook

ORANGE CUSTARD

2 eggs.
1/4 cup of sugar.
1/2 teaspoon of salt.
2 cups of milk.
2 teaspoons of flour.
1/2 teaspoon of vanilla.
5 tablespoons of sugar.
4 oranges.

Beat the egg yolks and add the sugar, flour and salt. Mix well, then add the milk and cook in a double boiler until the mixture is thick enough to coat a spoon. Cool and add the vanilla flavoring. Peel the oranges and slice them, laying them in a serving dish. Pour over the cooked mixture. Beat the egg whites with five tablespoons of sugar and heap on top of the custard. Serve.

Addresses S' Side Board Of Trade

Mr. R. W. E. Burnaby, Maritime Trade Commissioner, addressed members of the board of trade at Summerside on Tuesday evening at the Clifton Hotel. After a delightful dinner in the Clifton dining room, Mr. R. B. Richardson, president of the board, introduced the speaker.

Gentlemen, our honoured guest of this evening, Mr. W. E. Burnaby, Maritime Trade Commissioner, is so well and favorably known to members of the Summerside Board of Trade that the usual introduction is not necessary. As you all know he takes a deep interest in each community that he visits and it is his wish to promote our welfare so that our trade may be increased with our sister provinces and elsewhere. He is a very convincing orator and I am sure that you will profit by his address.

Mr. Burnaby gave a short and interesting address on the promotion of trade in the Maritimes. The object of the commission is to have a better understanding between the manufacturer and the selling agent. He also gave some pointers as to how the Island canners and Maritime producers can put their articles on the markets of the world. It is the object of the trade commission to promote a better feeling between the east, west and central Canada. We should try to create a better understanding between the provinces which would go a long way to make Canada one of the finest nations in the world. Mr. Burnaby left the message with them that the commission is functioning to promote business and not to sell the products of the Maritimes.

Mr. George Muttart moved a vote of thanks to the speaker. Mr. L. A. Moore also added a few words of thanks. Mr. Burnaby gave an address on the activities of the commission over CHGS by the kindness of Mr. H. T. Holman, that same evening. Mr. Burnaby arrived in Summerside at 4 o'clock. He will remain until this afternoon and interview anyone interested in Maritime industry. S.

Why Are There so Many Attractive Old Maids? Should an Invalid Mother Keep Her Daughter From Marrying? — Choosing a Career

Dear Miss Dix—Why are old maids so often the most attractive women you meet? Why were these women who are intelligent, domestic, interesting and who must have been very good-looking as girls, passed over?
A BACHELOR.

Answer:

Perhaps the first answer to the riddle of why an attractive girl doesn't marry is to be found in environment. No matter how alluring your bait, you catch no fish in a stream in which not even a minnow swims and, by the same token, many a woman fails to marry because when she was young she lived in a community in which there were no eligible young men. There are plenty of country neighborhoods and small towns from which virtually every able-bodied man has gone to seek his fortune, leaving it an Adamless Eden in which the girls' chances of marrying are zero.

Very often, also, a girl does not marry because she is rich and her money comes between her and possible suitors who feel that they cannot ask her to live upon their small salaries and are too proud to live upon her income. And very often a girl does not marry because she is more intelligent and better educated than the men with whom she comes in contact. It is significant that there are more old maids among millionaires than among any other class of women, and that college graduates run a poor second in the matrimonial race to flappers.

The home may also be included in this matter of environment, and undoubtedly one reason why many girls fail to marry is because they had no proper place in which to do their courting. The modern house or apartment that is all vistas and open spaces may be picturesque and artistic, but it is no first aid to Cupid. No man can get sentimental with the whole family sitting around in earshot listening to what he says, and when he pops the question it has to be with the assurance that a good, stout door is tightly shut and no ears at the keyhole.

Another reason that many girls do not marry is because they are chaperoned to death. Mother and father can't realize that Sally has grown up. They think she is still a baby, and so they refuse to let her have dates and go about with boys as the other girls do, and when she goes to a party papa takes her and mamma sits up waiting for her to come home and a worse fate befalls her than Cinderella's if she doesn't get in by 11.30.

This queers her with the youngsters of her own age, and they soon drop her, so she fails to establish the contacts that lead eventually to matrimony. Of course, mother and father intend for her to have dates and get married when they think she is old enough, around 25 or 30, but when the time comes that they want her to marry it is too late. She has got boy-conscious and is awkward in her relations with men. She doesn't understand them or know how to handle them, and they fight shy of her, for the love game is like dancing, you have to learn the steps while you are young.

Other girls do not marry because their families drive every young man away who comes to the house. Sometimes it is a gruff father who makes a young man feel about as welcome as a pot of poison in the house. Sometimes it is a too-eloquent mother who is under the misapprehension that her daughters' boy friends have called to see her and who gives them a pleasant evening discouraging upon her scold and relating anecdotes of the time her little Johnny had the measles and Mary caught the whooping cough.

Sometimes it is a horde of little brothers and sisters who are permitted to carry on their infantile sports in the room in which the girl is entertaining her beau and to tune in on the conversation. But, anyway, when there is too much family around it is good-night for what was a budding romance when the young man goes home.

And many, many other girls never marry because their families have a misguided sense of humor that makes them tease Sally about her boy friend until she gives him up rather than be the butt of their jokes. Or because they ridicule every young man who comes to see her and pull him to pieces until they disillusion her about him so that she can only see his big feet or his crooked nose or the way he has his hair cut or how his collar fits.

It is little things like these that keep many a woman from marrying. Queer to think that a life's happiness can be marred by the lack of a quiet room and a shaded lamp or welcome on the doormat or letting a 17-year-old girl go to a party or a kid brother hiding under the sofa. But it just happens that way often and often.
DOROTHY DIX.

Dear Miss Dix—I am very much in love with a young man who wants me to marry him right away because the firm he works for is going to promote him and send him to a distant city. My mother wants me to marry him because she says that every girl wants a husband and a home, but she is an invalid and has nobody but me to take care of her, as she is a widow and I am an only child. Father left very little money when he died. I can't bear to think of her being alone and pining for me. Shall I marry or not?
EDITH.

Answer:
Why not marry your young man and let your mother go along to the city to which your husband is being sent? She could be just as comfortable one place as another, and she certainly would not be happier for knowing she had wrecked your life.
DOROTHY DIX.

Dear Miss Dix—I am a young girl and very anxious to take up nursing as a profession and I feel that that is my real calling, but my parents want me to be a writer, and my music teacher wants me to be a musician. What do you think?
AGNES.

Answer:
Be a nurse if that is what you desire. We are only successful in doing the things for which we have a natural aptitude and in the doing of which we find interest and pleasure.

There are few better professions for a girl to take up than nursing. It is well paid and gives great opportunity for usefulness. Besides, nurses have an exceptional opportunity to make good marriages.

To be a successful writer or musician one must have a God-given talent. Neither are occupations that you can follow just because your parents or your teachers recommend them.

No. 3077—A smart rig is this coral-red and white crepe silk print to wear with a navy blue woolen coat. It cuts its yoked bodice in diagonal lines and finishes it with a bow at the center-front, so entirely slimming. Similar diagonal skirt seaming diminishes hip breadth. Designed for sizes 14, 16, 18, 20 years, 35, 38 and 40 inches bust. Size 16 requires 3 1/2 yards of 39-inch material.

No. 3154—One of chic's greatest enemies is physical discomfort. How can one expect to appear chic if one is not properly dressed? And for a warm summer afternoon what could be more appropriate than a cool looking printed chiffon voile. Here it is! And when it's so easily made, why not have it? And it tucks so well, so will give excellent service. Designed for sizes 12, 14, 16, 18, 20 years 35 and 38 inches bust. Size 14 requires 4 1/2 yards of 39-inch material.

No. 2501—A cute bloomer frock that offers such a smart change to pointed front yoke. The rounded back yoke buttons over the front shoulders. It has kimono sleeves with flared back cuffs. The front and back of dress shows soft gathered fullness toward the center. Designed for sizes 1, 2, 4 and 6 years. Size 4 requires 2 1/2 yards of 35-inch material with 1/2 yard of 35-inch contrasting.

EMPLOYS NINETY MEN ON TRENTON AIRPORT

BELVILLE, July 29.—Over 90 men are employed at present by the construction of the new airport two miles east of Trenton. Work is progressing on the steepling of the first hangar.

Motorists are obliged to drive carefully at one point on the highway as work is being done below the surface of the road in the laying of the power lines, telephone cables and water mains. A pump house will be erected in the near future. It is also understood that a storm sewer will be built to carry off all surplus water.

The extent of your liberty depends upon how much you respect the law.
