WILD HORSES

By Henry Herbert Knibbs

And Frank Lopez, propped up in bed, heard the whistling, and called out thinking it was Johnny. "Just tell them that, you saw me—" ceased. The deputy called Johnny's name and was answered by a strange muffled voice. He entered the cabin to find the dead man propped up in bed smoking a cigarette.

"Hello, Frank!" he called heartily, allowing the vehemence of his surprise to express itself in a conventional greeting. "Heard you got hurt."

"Si! I have the bad fall. I think it is my neck she is break."

The deputy didn't think so, as he viewed the bandages, but he made no comment, other than to indicate that he had hoped to see Johnny Trent.

Lopez, who surmised that his companions had told the deputy a different story, and anxious to shield Johnny, explained that the latter was out looking up some stray stock and might not return until late that evening.

"Anything I can do for you?" queried the deputy.

"I am all fix good," declared Lopez. "Johnny he is my amigo. He do everything, yes?"

"Then I guess I'll mosey along. Horse throw you?"

"Si. I fall on the neck pretty bad."

"Thought you said it was your shoulder?"

"Si, fall on the shoulder."

The deputy laughed. "Kind of tell all over yourself, eh?"

"I make dam' bad fall pretty good."

"I see you got that wild stallion corralled out there. He looks like a bad one."

"I tell Johnny that. Johnny say he just as wild as those horse, and he laugh. I think it is, Johnny he don't know to get the scare, yes?"

"Kind of figured him that way, myself," said Frank. "How is it that Anastacio and Rico and young Felipe are telling folks down in Solano that Johnny bumped you off?"

"The horse he bump me off," declared Lopez stubbornly; and the deputy, who was pretty well convinced that Lopez was suffering from a bullet wound and not a broken shoulder, realized that he was wasting his time trying to get Lopez to admit a quarrel or a shooting.

"Well, so long," he said, helping himself to a drink of water. "Tell Johnny I just dropped in to see how he was making it."

"Adios, I tell him."

The deputy stepped out, stood a while looking at the captive stallion, and then mounted and rode back toward the low country. "Like hell Lopez'll tell him what I said," soliloquized the deputy as he jogged across the meadow. "He'll tell Johnny just what he wants him to know—same as he did me. Some 'thin' funny about it. Lopez and Johnny friendly—and old Anastacio says Johnny shot Lopez out of the saddle. Both Johnny and Frank are pretty tough propositions to handle trottin' single; but hitched in double harness."

The deputy shook his head. He whistled the same tune he had whistled when riding up to the cabin. After all, he was glad that he had not been obliged to approach Johnny in a strictly official capacity.

When Johnny returned, late that afternoon, he hesitated as he lifted his saddle and glanced at the ground in front of the cabin. "Who's been here?" he called to Lopez.

"Ward, he come," replied Lopez.

"Ward, he come," replied Lopez.

"Put one on—the pain is gone"

"Who?" Johnny jugged his saddle to the porch and stepped into the cabin.

"Ward, he come. He say how you are making it."

"Oh, did he say all that?"

"And I say to him," declared Lopez with some show of righteous pride, "that my horse jump and I fall on the shoulder, and she is break. He shake his head and think it is funny how so much blood on the rag. Then he makes the pascar back to Solano. I think he shake the head all the time."

"Then mobby Felipe or Anastacio didn't tell 'im you took a shot at me just for luck?"

"I think it is Felipe he get the excite and forget that," said Lopez blandly.

"My dam was mustang, white and proud," said Johnny as he flopped his head on a horse's neck.

Mothers Like to Treat Colds With Vapors

Direct Treatment with Vaporizing Salve Immediately Reaches Inflamed Air Passages

It is no longer necessary constantly to dose the children in treating croup, bronchitis, sore throat, or deep chest colds.

Many Canadian mothers now use the "outside" remedy, Vicks Vapo Rub, for the cold troubles of all the family, because it is just rubbed over the throat and chest—there is nothing to take. When so applied Vicks gives off medicated vapors which are inhaled directly into the inflamed air passages, loosening the phlegm and making the breathing easier.

At the same time Vicks is absorbed and stimulates the skin like a liniment or plaster and thus aids the vapors inhaled to break up the congestion.

2nd August, A. D. 1100. William was at his hunting lodge in the New Forest. After a night of horrible dreams, he refused to join the hunt until the wine he drank at dinner gave him fresh courage.
