WHO WINS?

Listen to this, I heard a story the other day about an old Indian, who had borrowed some tobacco from a white man. After he had got to his wigwam he found some money rolled up in the tobacco, and at first was quite delighted to get it, thinking only of how many pounds of tobacco it could be exchanged for. But during the night the Indian grew restless and could not sleep, the thought of the money began to trouble him and he could not make up his mind that it belonged to him. So the next morning he rose bright and early and came and asked for the white man. Upon his appearance the Indian said: "I found some money in the tobacco you gave me."

"Why didn't you keep it?" asked the white man.
"Because," said the Indian pointing to his breast, "I've got two men here. One man says, 'It is not mine, give it back to the owner.' The other man says 'Keep it, it is yours.' Then the one man says, 'No, no give it back.' It is not yours," and the other says, 'Yes, yes, it is yours. Keep it.' So I don't know what to do, and the two men inside kept talking all night, and they so trouble me I'm losing the money back, and now I feel good."

These two men inside are Temptation and Conscience, and they are within you just the same as they were within the old Indian. The bad man is Temptation; the good man Conscience, and they are talking together all the time, for and against your duty, and prompting you to right or wrong. Who wins?—Select.

BUYING RELATIVES.

A certain well-known but impetuous nobleman, while walking one day in Wardour Street, London, saw a family portrait for sale in a shop window, and went in to inquire the price. The dealer wanted £12 10s., but his lordship would give £10, so the purchase was not made. A short time afterward, while dining with a gentleman, he was invited to view his pictures. As he stood gazing with profound interest at a certain one, his host said, "Ah, that is a portrait of an ancestor of mine." "Indeed," said his lordship, "then we must be almost related in some way. It was within £2 10s. of being an ancestor of mine."

BIG CROWD AT ST. STEPHEN FAIR.

ST. STEPHEN, N. B., Sep. 29.—The weather has been perfect today and the towns people and visitors have been on the move since early morning. This afternoon the exhibition grounds were crowded to see a fine display of farm, dairy and other products of this county. In the driving park, where the baseball game and horse races were, there was an immense throng, the bleachers and the grand stand were taxed to their utmost capacity. There were fully 3,000 people on the grounds today. The Cherryfield (Me.) team brought a large number of excursionists from along the Washington County Railway. There was also an excursion from Woodstock and from along the several railway lines and steamer routes to the town. The grocery stores were closed and the candy factory was shut down, and the school children given a half holiday. In the base ball game between the Thistles and Milltown team the Milltown team won by a score of 8 to 4. Battery, for Thistles, Carter and Covey; for Milltown, Murche and Foy.

WORK FOR ETERNITY.

It is said when the great temple of Minerva was erected in Athens, all sculptors were invited to compete in the carving of a great statue for its dome. On the day of the award a famous artist brought his work, a life size statue of Minerva, so beautiful that it was received with exclamations of delight. But as it was raised to its place it grew smaller and smaller, until it seemed but a speck against the sky. The work of the poor mechanic was then unveiled, huge and uncouth, but as it was raised aloft its deformities vanished and it seemed more and more comely, until, reaching the dome, it took the very semblance of the goddess and seemed animated with life.

Alas! for the man here whose work is only life size; who measures his duty by his requirements of time and sense, how it will dwindle as it approaches strength. But work for the master, wrought in simple love, of right doing and for the universal weal, will grow more and more beautiful as earth fades and eternity draws near. Oh, let us live as if we believe in the glory of the endless life!

SYDNEY BRAKEMAN KILLED

SYDNEY, Sept. 29.—Charles Leduc, aged 25, brakeman on the Dominion Coal Company trains from Sydney, was cut in two this morning by a train on which he was working. His body lay for some time on the track before it was discovered by H. J. Davis, the conductor of the train.

SACKVILLE STORE WAS BURGLARIZED.

MONCTON, N. B., Sept. 30.—Chief Rideout of the Moncton police force this morning received a telephone message from Chief of Police Sullivan of Sackville to the effect that Harrison Miller's store, in Main street in that town had been broken into this morning about four o'clock and goods valued at between $150 and $200 stolen.

As near as can be ascertained the list included three suit cases, three winter overcoats, three pairs patent shoes, twelve suits of underclothing, twelve pairs winter socks, twenty-four colored shirts and a miscellaneous collection of other articles. No money was stolen.

Entrance had been effected through a back window of the store which had been found broken open. The only clue which the perpetrators left behind was an old sweater and they are supposed by the Sackville police to have been tramps. Chief Sullivan wished the Moncton police to keep a lookout for three men, as the case is cleared from the groups in which articles were taken that there must have been outfitting themselves. A search was immediately investigated in Sackville for the robbers and as Chief Rideout has also notified the I. C. R. police, the territory will be well covered.

DIES RATHER THAN TESTIFY AGAINST LOVER

NEW YORK, Sept. 29.—Rather than appear in the West Side police court today against her sweetheart, who on Sunday night is alleged to have attempted to shoot her father to death, 18-year-old Frances Patern ended her life early by jumping from the roof of the five-story tenement at West 39th street. She was killed instantly.

The young girl who was unusually attractive, was the only daughter of Louis Patern and lived with her parents on the top floor of the 39th street aise. Francesco Donato, 23 years old, had been calling on her for weeks until the quarrel came Sunday night which resulted in the shooting.

The elder Patern had developed a sudden dislike for Donato after learning that the young man was a boon companion of some of his (Patern's) enemies. He saw that his daughter was growing fond of the young man and when he heard that they had plighted their troth he flew into a rage and ordered Donato from the house.

In requesting the young man to leave Patern employed language that kindled Donato's rage, and in a moment of blind passion he drew a revolver and let go five shots. Luckily for Patern Donato's aim was bad and all the bullets went wild. When the gun was empty Donato fled to the fire escape and thence to the roof. While the man was descending another fire escape he was captured by policeman Barry of the West 37th street station.

Donato fought desperately to escape but Barry quited him with his night stick, and he was arranged in the West Side court. The case was set over until this morning when Barry promised to bring the girl and several of the neighbors to court. The policeman started for Patern home and was almost at the stoop front of the house when he heard a cry overhead. He looked up in time to see a body hurl through the air and drop almost at his feet.

When he turned the body over he saw it was the young girl he intended to bring to court. A surgeon was summoned from the New York hospital but there was nothing for him to do but pronounce the girl dead.
