Mrs. Scales and Mrs. Matheson were appointed to arrange about having a play come to the Freetown Hall, part of the proceeds to be given to the W. I. Reports of committees were heard and the school and sick committees were both re-appointed for another month. The motion was passed that a box of fruit be sent to Mr. John MacCarville. The program for the evening consisted of a contest. Place of next meeting to be announced later. Program committee for next month, Mrs. R. B. Auld, Miss Rena Arbing and Mrs. C. B. Matheson. Epoch-making Welcome From Old Quebec

By J. J. O'BRIEN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

QUEBEC, May 17—French Canada outdid itself today in extending an epoch-making welcome to Their Majesties King George and Queen Elizabeth.

Never in its history had this 331-year-old city witnessed a demonstration like that given the King and Queen when they drove about the city.

Hours before the time set for the Sovereigns to make their appearance the procession route was thronged over its nine-mile length. Approximately 9,000 policemen, soldiers, scouts and cadets lined the streets and kept the crowds in check.

It was on wide Boulevard Charest in the lower town that the greatest crowd converged. They milled around for hours, fighting for places of vantage but when motorcycle officers raced by heralding the proximity of the King and Queen there was immediate quiet and order.

Headed by more than 100 silver-hued motorcycles ridden by Provincial Police officers the procession started a few minutes after 3 p.m. EDT from a point near Dufferin Terrace and led from the upper to the lower town.

All along the route the King and Queen were enthusiastically cheered, but it was in St. Sauveur and St. Malo, working-class districts, that Their Majesties were greeted with the greatest display of warmth.

Business was at a standstill the households were emptied. Mothers brought infants into the streets, placing them in high chairs along the curbside. Aged women and men, some of them just about able to hobble, were seated in chairs all along the royal route in lower town districts.

At one point a crowd who had waited four hours for the coming of the King and Queen invaded a brick yard and carried out piles of bricks with which to make seats.

Artful craftsmen in the poorer section of the lower west end of the city built family stands in front of their humble homes.

To the cheering crowds stretched along the winding, narrow streets, the King and Queen kept nodding and smiling. Babies in arms mimicked their parents in handclappings as the Sovereigns passed by.

On Montmagny Street in St. Malo where the royal procession veered towards the upper part of the city, residents depleted their homes of chairs and benches and lined them up along the sidewalk.

In the upper town groups of French-Canadian missionary priests some of whom are here on a visit from their missionary outposts in South Africa, stood waiting in the hot sun for hours to get a glimpse of Their Majesties.

Traffic was completely halted during the period of the royal procession. In some sections of the city street car service ceased for more than three hours.

FINAL MEETING OF MUSIC CLUB LAST NIGHT

Season's Activities Conclude With Excellent Variety Program.

The season's final meeting of the Women's Music Club was held last night in the Hotel Charlottetown, and the lengthy programme was one of interesting variety and unusual content.

A pleasing feature was the opening number, the singing by Miss Vera Campbell and women's chorus, of a charming little song "Jasper Lullaby", written by Mr. Charters, steward of the Hotel Charlottetown. The song, which truly catches the spirit of the west was most heartily received.

The subject of the evening was "Victorian Music," and Mrs. L. B. MacMillan in her excellent paper outlined the progress of British music in the nineteenth century. At the outset of the century, music in England was rather at a standstill for various reasons, and lacked any influence on musical progress; but an advance soon began and continued during the second half of the century with increased strength and sureness.

Mrs. MacMillan dealt with the composers who contributed to this advance, until England is now successful in disproving Rubenstein's assertion that it was the most unmusical nation on earth.

The musical portion of the programme was for the most part gay and rollicksome, as many of the numbers were from those well known and inimitable Victorian operas of Gilbert and Sullivan.

All the numbers were artistically performed and very much enjoyed, and at the conclusion members left in a happy frame of mind, all eagerly looking forward to next season's activities after an exceptionally pleasing year.

In the Gilbert and Sullivan numbers Miss Vera Campbell described the setting and action, members of the chorus taking part in the dialogue with very amusing results thoroughly enjoyed by every one. These numbers included "Climbing Over Rocky Mountains" from "The Pirates of Penzance", with Mrs. B. Patterson as soloist; "Poor Wandering One" from the same opera with Miss Campbell as soloist; "Twenty Lovesick Maidens" and various excerpts from "Patience", with soloists Miss Campbell, Miss Margaret Sterns, Mrs. Frances Trainor; and the trio "I Hear the Soft Note", sung by Miss Campbell, Mrs. H. S. Henderson and Mrs. Neil MacLean. The other three members of the chorus were Miss Baker, Miss Callbeck and Miss Huestis. Accompanists were Mrs. Full and Mrs. Rogers.

Other items on the programme were the mixed quartets: "A Regular Royal Queen" from "The Gondoliers"; "Strange Adventure", from "The Yeomen of the Guard"; and "When Evening's Twilight" by Hatton, noted Victorian composer and grand-uncle of Mrs. Arthur Weeks of Charlottetown. The mixed quartet is composed of Mrs. Roper, Mrs. Henderson, Mrs. P. D. Williams, and Mr. C. P. MacKenzie.

Mrs. Roper and Mrs. Henderson also sang two duets, "O Peaceful Night" (German), and "In Springtime" (Newton).

Further enjoyable numbers were the soprano solos of Mrs. Frances Holl Trainor, "Take, Oh Take Those Lips Away" (Bennet), "Butterflies" (Corbett), "Love the Pedlar" (German); the soprano solo, "Who'll Buy My Lavender", Miss Marguerite Cudmore; and the group of four short piano duets, incidental music to "Herod", by Samuel Taylor Coleridge—Miss Lillian MacKenzie and Miss Suzanne Brenton.

The President, Mrs. Lawson expressed her thanks to the guests, Mr. Williams and Mr. MacKenzie, and to the associate members for their fine cooperation during the year, and her hope that next year the Club would branch out even farther in its activities.

Canada Loyal To Mother Country

LONDON, May 17 —(CP Cable)—German propaganda in the Canadian middle west may militate against success of the visit of the King and Queen to that district, according to Rt. Hon. R. B. Bennett.

The former Canadian Prime Minister told a Toc-H meeting yesterday that the middle west had a large German community where propaganda could be circulated freely.

"We know that propaganda is controlled from Chicago and that its effect on the younger German settlers is considerable," he said. However, the older Germans valued their liberty in Canada too highly to be influenced by propaganda.

If Britain ever was attacked, Canada would rush to the colors, the former Prime Minister predicted.

Retain Two Seats In By-election

LONDON, May 17—The Chamberlain Government held two House of Commons seats but lost a third in a series of by-elections today.

Labor captured Southwark North while Conservative candidates had easy victories in Westminster Abbey and Birmingham-Aston.

The results were:

Southwark North, George Isaacs, Labor, 5,815; Captain F. Henderson-Livesay, Liberal National, 4,322;

Westminster Abbey, Sir Harold Webbe, Conservative, 9,678; Gabriel Garrdt, Independent Progressive, 4,674;

Birmingham-Aston, Major Edward Kellett, Conservative, 12,023; Dr. Samuel Segal, Labor 6,122.

Iris Accords Conservatives Big Reception

Conservatives received splendid support at a meeting in Iris in the Belfast District Tuesday night. This section went strongly Liberal last election but, judging from the applause given Conservatives Tuesday night the electors are definitely decided on a Conservative Government in this election. Speakers for the Conservatives were Messrs. George MacLean, one of the candidates for the District and Mr. Lawson Jenkins of Vernon who spoke for Mr. M. W. Wood, other candidate, who because of business connected with shipments going aboard a steamer in Charlottetown was unable to attend. Liberal candidates Messrs. J. Walter Jones and Dougald MacKinnon, representatives of the District for the past four years and now seeking re-election addressed the meeting.

Question after question was hurled at Liberal candidates from the floor of the meeting In fact so insistent were electors, not a few scattered "hecklers" but many from the body of the meeting in seeking information and arguing questions with Messrs. Jones and MacKinnon that to keep any semblance of order the meeting was terminated before Mr. MacKinnon finished his rebuttal.

Mr. James McBeth presided.

Police Have Sorry Time On Patrol Duty

QUEBEC, May 17 — (C P)—French-Canada's freedom-loving citizens at least four times today broke through police lines in their eagerness to see the King and Queen.

Rebelling against strict discipline imposed by police, the Quebecois time and time again pressed en masse against cordons set up along the royal route and invaded forbidden territory.

At Wolfe's Cove this morning children were in the vanguard in breaking bounds, and followed by adults, took possession of the area reserved for cabinet ministers.

At the battlefields ceremony this afternoon children again broke the lines and surged about the royal car as it was leaving.

Tonight an eager crowd fought-good-naturedly with police in front of the hotel where the provincial banquet was taking place. They pushed, jostled and finally by sheer pressure forced the police line back.

Motorcycle police came to the rescue driving their vehicles increasingly close to the crowds to force them back. But they had to keep this up continually in order to maintain police barriers.

As the evening wore on the crowd outside the hotel grew larger and sorely tested police tempers once again. At one moment, in their eagerness to obtain good positions to see Their Majesties leave the banquet they began a veritable tug of war and shoved the police a full 20 feet across the gateway to the hotel.

Provincial constables solved this problem by lining up a solid row of motorcycles behind which the crowd still jostled and pushed. But they failed to budge the "bikes."

Children Pay Homage To Royal Couple

BY LEON EDEL
Canadian Press Staff Writer

QUEBEC, May 17 —(CP)—On the Plains of Abraham, once a battlefield but now a peaceful park, 35,000 French-Canadian children lifted their voices today in homage to the King and Queen.

Piping voices of the younger children, mingling with those of the older, swelled into a mighty chorus as they sang "Dieu Protege Le Roi"—God Save The King.

From a stand on the terrace the King and Queen looked into a sea of childish faces and when the children waved small British and French flags the effect was of a huge field of multi-colored flowers swaying in the breeze.

Three little girls, all of them eight, attired in full white net dresses, with garlands of flowers in their hair, now advanced slowly, and curtseyed low to the Queen. One of them presented to her a large bouquet of roses and lilies of the valley.

Obviously touched the Queen detained the children, and questioned them, and the King, who had been chatting with the Prime Minister broke away to say a few words to them also. The children represented the three races of this city, French-Canadian, English Canadian and Irish-Canadian.

HUNTER RIVER PLAY

The Masonic Hall at Hunter River was packed to its utmost capacity on the evening of May 10, when the Hunter River Dramatic Club presenter their play "The Path Across Hill" to an appreciative and orderly audience. Dr. R. H. Barrett presided and in a brief address expressed the thanks of the school board to the young people, the proceeds of the play being devoted to the furnishing of the new school. Much credit is due the teachers Miss Jeanette Clark and Mr. Keir MacLeod for their efforts in instigating the play and seeing it through to such a satisfactory and happy ending. They were assisted by a willing band of young folk, whose interests in the new school and ambitions to see it furnished in an up-to-date manner is most commendable. The play was under the capable direction of Mrs. J. E. Andrews who herself is no amateur to the stage. She was a success in her efforts to make the play a success. The make up was under the direction of Mr. Austin Trainor of Charlottetown.

The following is the cast. Each and every player took his or her part like regular veterans and it would be quite useless to particularize.

Ruth Conrad—A sweet womanly girl, Miss Jeanette Clark.

Flo Gray—A good heart beneath a frivalous exterior, Miss Edith Bagnall.

Samuel Crawford—A cheery lovable old man deeply in trouble, Mr. Keir MacLeod.

Robert Post—obsessed with hatred and a desire for revenge, Mr. Albert Ling.

Lutie—Cute and full of mischief, Miss Louise MacQuarrie.

Zuzu—The cook, and a good one too, Miss Marjorie Watts.

Walter Conrad—Ruth's brother, self important and head strong, Mr. Louis Bagnall.

Dr. Reed—A man with ambitions, Mr. Gordon Waye.

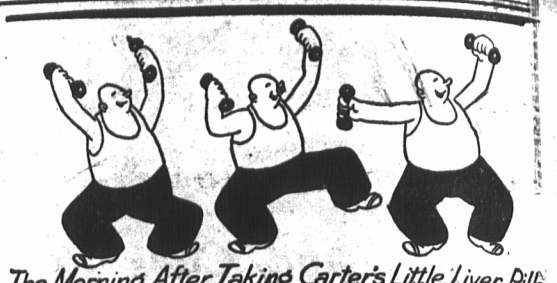
Mrs. Davis—Sweet and gentle—Miss Hazel Sellar; Salamander Alexander John Henry Jones—A man with a big name and a mouthful of big words, Mr. Douglas Smith.

The club has already received several invitations to present their play in other districts.

SUCCUMBS TO HEART ATTACK

YARMOUTH, N. B., May 17—James W. Stewart, 51, died of a heart attack today while he was thought to be recovering from rib fractures suffered yesterday when a horse ran away and threw him from a light carriage. He was a cousin of James Stewart, one of three men drowned in an accident last week at McNamee.

GALETTA, Ont., May 17—Pealing of church bells in Galetta and at nearby Fitzroy Harbor told villagers the King and Queen had arrived at Quebec today.



Antics Of Andy Successfully Staged

It was Tuesday evening, May 9, in Travellers Rest Hall that the three-act comedy drama "Antics of Andy" was successfully staged before a full house, sponsored by New Annan Women's Institute, under the direction of Mrs. J. W. Waugh. The very best order (for which Travellers Rest is always noted) prevailed throughout and to the delight of the crowded hall each character did justice to the part assigned.

Petunia (Andy's darky cook) was played by Louise Moase who was a "scream" as she, in her darky costume with red bandana, kept the crowd amused as she performed her service at Andy's birthday dinner and who in continued conflict with Jacques, the butler and valet, ably impersonated by Wallie Moase, left nothing to be desired; Wallie continually wanted to do more than his share waiting upon Andrew's guests, was always in hot water with Petunia who showed her audience to what extent his services were resented, to which Jacques in return caused a great deal of hilarious applause as he displayed his French dialect in an amusing manner.

Andrew Brown (senior in Cameron College) was taken by Weston Campbell. "Wes" is well and popularly known on the stage and acted his part (which was a difficult one) to perfection. As he appeared as the hero in Act I through to the end of Act III a severe critic would find it difficult to voice his criticism; his was the reason for the plot in the story—romance, farce, thrills, all figured in Wes's life which was closely connected with his college pals Willie Waldo, acted by James Tuplin Jr., and Harold Hadley, by Bert Poole, which two had parts not easily acted, as the former impersonated Andy's wife and the latter Andy's mother-in-law. These two females had to be "scraped up" in a hurry on account of pecuniary motives connected with Uncle Isaac.

James Tuplin is an amateur but the way he took his part showed the audience what a sweet little wife he would make for any man.

Bert Poole was Gertrude (Andy's mother-in-law needs no introduction as he is popularly known as a first class performer. As a woman, his looks and the acted high-pitched voice was portrayed so breathtakingly that the audience applauded again and again, and sounded as though they were not disappointed.

Althea Thorne, Miss Prunella's niece and heroine in the romance scene, charmingly taken by Mamie Connell was indeed quite worthy of well deserved merit. Her meeting with Andrew up to the time of her marriage to him was surely a well portrayed piece of acting which would put a great many high class artists to one side.

Mary Marchbank as Julie, and Ruth Tuplin as Betty, nieces of Dean Boynton of Cameron College left nothing to be desired in acting or looks. These young ladies are amateurs on the stage and judging by the jazzy style and fiery hot rhythm as displayed contrary to the style of their staid old uncle the Dean, showed the amused audience what real amateurs can do and how many are hidden in country districts.

Dean Socrates Boynton, uncle of the girls (although a difficult part) was well acted by J. W. Waugh, who as the Dean, advancing in years and unsophisticated, unromantic, being jazzed by his nieces with their hot talk before the second and third acts, showed with a great deal of applause how he too could "get in love" and with whom? None other than Harold, who was an expelled pupil from his school of knowledge. J. W. was quite a hit with his "My body and soul."

Mrs. Arthur Wright as Miss Prunella Thorne, (a maiden lady in love with the Dean) acted this part as one in a great many. She as a severe dictator and even at the first when she comes in with her niece, Althea, to the time when she shows her love for the Dean who has no serious intentions for her, was a scream. It was a difficult part but greatly applauded by an admiring audience.

Walter Moase as Uncle Isaac with a fine crop of whiskers, is ignorance profound. His "bursting right in" at the dinner party when he couldn't get an answer to the door bell, his rude remarks at the table, and his conflicting conversation with the catty Miss Prunella caused rounds of applause. Walter has had no great experience on the stage but the way he handled his end of the farce bespeaks much future success in this line of performance. Nothing daunted, he too fell in love with the beautiful refined Gertrude, alias Harold Hadley, alias Bert Poole.

O'Flarity, a detective from headquarters, was certainly well impersonated by Albert Moase, who arrived at the scene with a big Bertha. Even though it was a "make-believe" Albert was a "real" detective in actions and looks, as he searched for liquors which he thought were there at the festival. Wit and thrills followed his entrance for a time.

Last but not least is the man of mystery, portrayed by Wm. Dalzell, as Rev. Doolittle. The entrance of the Rev. gentleman caused a murmur in the audience. Billy acted the gentleman's part in a prepossessing and quite natural manner. His entrance at this time plays an important part to most all concerned. The sequel to the farce is an unusual one and can be seen by attending the next presentation.
